EDWARD BOLDEN PAPERS

Collection 186-1 to 186-4

Prepared by:
Lonnie C. King, Jr.
December 1997

MANUSCRIPT DIVISION

Scope Note

The papers of Edward Bolden (1878 - 1946), entrepreneur and Federal employee cover the period from 1910 to the 1980s and is contained in two boxes of approximately one linear foot. The collection was donated by Hilda Bolden Shorter, the daughter of Edward Bolden, in 1984. The collection primarily traces Bolden's career in Negro baseball from 1910 until the 1940s; however, the majority of the papers span the period from 1920 to 1940.

For thirty-six years Bolden owned and/or managed two professional baseball teams in Pennsylvania. He was one of the pioneers in his sport and served as one of the links between the old Negro baseball leagues and modern day major league baseball. The collection provides a flashback to the time of segregation in American baseball when players of African descent could not play on the same team as white players.

Bolden, along with other postal workers, founded the Hilldale baseball club, thereby becoming one of the first baseball groups to be entirely controlled and financed by African Americans. In addition to being a part owner, Bolden was also the manager of the Hilldale team. The team was made up of teenage boys who played together for a period of years and formed the nucleus for the professional baseball team that came later. The collection has limited information on the Hilldale team between 1910 and 1920; however, in the 1920s, the team took off and became a major force in Negro professional baseball. The collection provides information on the first Negro World Series in 1924, between Hilldale and the Kansas City Monarchs. In addition, it includes various news articles, printed materials, scrapbooks and other artifacts from the 1920s, including names of players and their batting averages. Bolden continued his ownership of the Hilldale team until the late 1920s, when internal bickering caused him and the other owners of the team to cease operating the team.

In 1933, Bolden organized the Philadelphia Stars and entered them into the Negro baseball league. This team, like Hilldale, also flourished under the leadership of Bolden. The collection contains printed materials about the Stars such as the Colored Baseball and Sports Monthly which was published in 1934. In addition, many news articles, photographs, and other memorabilia about the Philadelphia team from the 1930s to the 1940s are included. There are photographs of the East-West All Star Classic which was held at Comiskey Park in Chicago in 1941 where 50,485 people were in attendance.

During Bolden's long career, he was called the "Chief" and was recognized as a shrewd promoter and businessman who produced outstanding baseball teams. Concurrent with his tenure as a baseball owner, Bolden continued his employment as a postal clerk at the U. S. Post Office, finally retiring after 42 years.
