GEORGE T. DOWNING PAPERS

Collection 152-1 to 152-3

Prepared by:
George Perry
and
Karen L. Jefferson
July 1989

Scope Note

George Thomas Downing (1819-1903) of Newport, Rhode Island was a successful businessman and noted abolitionist. In New York, Downing operated a catering service. In Rhode Island he operated a catering service and managed his own hotel. He also managed the restaurant in the U.S. House of Representatives in Washington, D.C. for twelve years.

Downing was very active in the abolitionist movement, and worked for civil rights on the state and national level. He was spokesman along with Frederick Douglass in urging President Andrew Jackson to adopt a more liberal reconstruction policy, and worked with Charles Sumner to push for national civil rights legislation. He helped to repeal discriminatory laws in New York and Rhode Island requiring Negroes and Irish to own property as a prerequisite to voting. He fought for the desegregation of schools in Rhode Island, and the abolishment of Jim Crow cars on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. He fought to open the Senate Gallery to Negroes, to end the nine o'clock curfew, and for passage of the public accommodations law (1873) in Washington, D.C.

The George T. Downing Papers total one linear foot and span the period 1840 - 1930, focusing on the 1860's to the 1890's. The papers include correspondence, invitations, programs and memorabilia of Downing and some of his family. Of interest are the items documenting Downing's efforts as a recruiter for colored troops during the civil war. And there are letters and memorabilia of Frederick and Helen Douglass, Charles Sumner, Gerrit Smith, William Wendell Phillips, Charles Reason and Alexander Crummell. Also of note is the patent for improvements on the street-railway switch awarded to Phillip Bell Downing in 1890; and programs for the Sons and Daughters Reunion of Newport, R.I. (1884), and the Reunion of Abolitionists (1889).
