Biographical/Historical note

The Nethula Journal of Contemporary Literature was founded and edited by Essex Hemphill, a poet and writer from Washington, D.C. The oldest of five children, Hemphill was born on April 16, 1957 in Chicago, Illinois to parents Mantalene and Warren Hemphill. Although he was born in the Midwest, he was raised in Washington, D.C during his formative years. Published from 1979-1980, the Nethula Journal was a bi-monthly piece dedicated to a new era of black poets and writers. He co-founded Nethula with two young women, Kathy Anderson, whom he'd known at the University of Maryland, and Cynthia Lou Williams. Both Sterling Brown and E. Ethelbert Miller of the older group of black writers were among the journal's five contributing editors. Miller especially — a poet on staff at the Howard University library — served as an important bridge between the generations.
