Mugabe Reminds Howard Struggle Continues

By Cheryl Gooch

Howard University Student Association (USHA) President Andre Gatsen said it is critical that Howard students get involved with USHA and its sponsored events. "We need your participation," he said. "You're the ones responsible for keeping our campus safe and we need your help to do that." Gatsen added that the USHA is working on a number of projects, including promoting awareness of issues such as racism, discrimination, and social justice.

UGSA Hosts Open House In Blackburn

By Cheryl Gooch

Howard University Student Association (UGSA) held its annual Open House in Blackburn House on September 14. The event was attended by students, faculty, and staff and featured various activities and presentations. The goal of the Open House was to introduce new students to the campus and its resources, as well as to provide information about student organizations and programs. Attendees were able to explore Blackburn House, which is named after Howard University alumnus and former President James L. Hilltopper, and learn about its history and significance. The event also featured performances by student groups and a speech by UGSA President Anthony Smith.

HUSA Leader Discusses Plans

By Cheryl Gooch

Howard University Student Association (HUSA) President Andre Gatsen said that the organization is working on a number of projects, including promoting awareness of issues such as racism, discrimination, and social justice. The HUSA also plans to continue its efforts to improve campus safety and security, as well as to support student organizations and programs.

Baraka Attacks Capitalism

By Cherrie Perry

Baraka, a Howard student and poet, spoke at an event in the Howard Amphitheater on September 17. The event was titled "Baraka: A Call to Action." Baraka criticized capitalism, calling it a system that is based on greed and exploitation. He urged students to question the values and beliefs that underpin capitalism and to work towards creating a more just and equitable society. Baraka also spoke about the importance of education and literacy, and encouraged students to use their voices and talents to effect change.

Howard Gets New Dorm

By Ralph Chittenden and Valerie C. Capler

Howard University's new dormitory, Blackburn House, opened on September 14. The dormitory is named after Howard University alumnus and former President James L. Hilltopper, and is located in the heart of the university's campus. The dormitory is designed to provide a comfortable and safe living environment for students, and includes features such as a large common area, a study lounge, and a kitchen. The opening of Blackburn House was celebrated with a ribbon-cutting ceremony attended by university officials and community leaders.

Voice of the Howard Community

Student Voting Power

By Cheryl Gooch

Student voting power is crucial in shaping the future of our society. The right to vote is a fundamental right that allows citizens to participate in the democratic process and to have a say in their government. As students, we have the opportunity to use our voices to effect change and to make a difference in the world. By voting, we can participate in the decision-making process and help to shape the policies that affect our lives.
Independent Black Party to be Formed

By Carolyn T. Lamantia
Hilltop Staffer

A committee of 16, chaired by Howard University political scientist Ron Walters, is forming a Black independent political party.

The committee is implementing the desires of more than 1,000 Black students, faculty and staff who attended the National Black Political Assembly conventions in New Orleans, La., last month.

Walters said although the idea for such a party has existed since 1972, it has become more pressing since 1976 when the National Black Political Assembly was formed in Gary, Ind. The party, which has not been named, will be formally established at a founding convention scheduled for Nov. 21-22, 1980, in Philadelphia.

Walters named the proposed party as: an entity which will prepare campaigns in the Black community, and show the relationship between its struggle and the community's development. He added that it is quite possible for the party to participate in elections and community organizations in one way, in seeking for the people and the party to support or push demands for Black people. Walters forewarned that the political base Black people have in the Democratic and Republican parties is fast dwindling because we don't have a full understanding of the Black people. We are trying to break the job of this party to find people or to defend the party and to struggle. We are trying to break through and create some options.

For Three Towers could be a very real possibility. Howard students to lose, unfortunately. Lending conditions have been relaxed for up to $5,000 because we don't have a full understanding of the Black people. We are trying to break through and create some options.

Whenever Howard confirmed this building to be of the same kind as Sutton Plaza after many negative statements, he said Howard has been made about the neighborhood. Bob Williams, Director of Housing, said there is a lack of available space in the D.C. area, especially when one is looking for a structure that can house that many people.

In the Oxford Newsletter, the club is given an undetermined amount of time. Also any other story in the Oxford Newsletter, there is a lack of available space in the D.C. area, especially when one is looking for a structure that can house that many people.

Register To Vote

People often become careless with rights they did not always have. Such is the case with the ballot; the right to vote, that we at Howard must cherish and use to the fullest.

Literacy classes, Black Codes, and grandfather clauses all served to deny Black people the right to choose elected officials. Therefore, we at Howard must make our voices heard since we represent an educated segment of our race. We should know the historical significance attached to voting for state, city, and national officials, especially in the upcoming November presidential election.

What do we no use, we lose. With situations such as Bakke, a worsening economy, and high unemployment, we can not afford to become disenfranchised again.

There is no room for apathy on this issue.

Mugabe: Come Home

Zimbabwean Prime Minister Robert Gabriel Mugabe can be likened to an example who turns on a path that until now was unknown to him, yet has been trekked by many before him.

As a freely elected and acknowledged leader of the nation of Zimbabwe in southern Africa, he is now regarded as the enforcer of the wants, aspirations and needs of Zimbabwe's seven million people. In this respect Mugabe joins the company of many illustrious freedom-fighters who distinguished themselves as international statements but were not above taking up arms with the masses of their people and fighting to liberate African land from the hands of European colonizers.

And to think that for a moment, Howard University's President, James Cheek, and the school's Board of Trustees attempted to deny the students, indeed the Cheek, and the school's Board of Trustees what some regarded as "their home away from home." What some regard as "their home away from home." The Offi diers.

Therefore, what at Howard must make our people the right to choose elected officials.

Mugabe, intended to deny the students, indeed the Cheek, and the school's Board of Trustees what some regarded as "their home away from home." What some regard as "their home away from home." The Offi diers.

The dormitory was replaced due to vandalism.

Dr. Johnson Y. Lancaster, Associate Director of Student Life, reported that last year the department spent $225,000 repainting dormitory rooms that were unfit for habitation unless they were refreshed. She cited stains from cooking as a major cause for the paint jobs, which occur on three-year cyclical plans at most colleges.

Until respect for campus property is maintained, students will find it extremely difficult to urge housing administrators to accelerate the rate at which repairs are being made. Some dormitory rooms have been repainted so many times that they are stained by the paint. Students are prevented from using the rooms.

The Hilltop: Ready to Meet Your Needs

If you are a continuing student I'm sure you anxiously awaited the appearance of this year's HILLTOP. To the new students, I'm sure you've heard a lot about us. What are your opinions, and/or suggestions?

Our editorial direction this year is somewhat simple...to seek the truth and move toward more accurate, professional and responsible journalism, emphasizing the HILLTOP's viability in the Washington metropolitan area as a news source and advertising outlet.

The beat system for news gathering on campus has been revitalized. But reporters continue to depend on the all important 'tip' for information. Please keep us abreast of events in your academic or administrative area so we may better serve you.

Our advertising staff is on hand to assist you in your advertising needs. Please contact our office to determine an ad price that will suit your budget. Also, keep the classifieds in mind for that 'hot spot' of sales ability.

THE HILLTOP staff looks forward to a successful relationship with all campus organizations and departments this year and encourages your support and participation.

Dormitory Vandalism

With the onslaught of a new semester, it seems a shame to rebuke the past. But, vandalism is often necessary.

While most of us were enjoying the summer, several interim residents of the dormitories took it upon themselves to alter what some regard as "their home away from home."

Theft and vandalism in the dormitories require repairs and replacements which cost thousands of dollars.

Air conditioners, emergency telephones, exit sign fixtures, intercom speakers, pillows, window shades, drapes, and pieces of furniture have been stolen from the residence halls. One dormitory employee put succinctly: "They'll (students) take almost anything that isn't nailed down."

Smoke detectors have been stolen, then used for ashtrays, and in one dorm alone, approximately 35% of the life-safety devices were covered by plastic bags, according to a university environmental services spokesman.

The majority of resident housed in Meridian Hall and Grasshopper, two dormitories continuing students from other campus housing locations. Therefore we cannot blame recent residents. We are stealing from each other. This type of destructive behavior is unnecessary.

The Office of Residence Life spent $54,000 last year to purchase air conditioners (many of which were stolen this summer), plus $75,000 on a two-year smoke detector installation project. The entire fire detection system in one dormitory was accelerated due to vandalism.

The secret service and the Howard University Administration wanted to keep from the city, state, and national officials, especially in the United States, but I am sure we would also be glad if you were in Africa. We will need the skills that you are acquiring, but we will also need you as brothers and sisters-come home."

Reminding us that "our battle is only partially won" and that "we still have South Africa and Namibia to liberate," the Prime Minister assured us that "Africa, having liberated most of its territories, cannot fail to liberate just two more." He told us of the onerous of Africans worldwide and urged that, "While we remain one, we may remain fighting."

While Prime Minister Robert Mugabe endeavored to halt the exploitation of Zimbabwe's gold, chrome, bauxite, fertile farmland and water, he fought the hardest for our two most important assets: the lives of the Zimbabwean people and the dignity that breeds man-kind's respect.

Impressions of Freshmen from an Upperclassman

By Herbert V. McMillan

In light of the fact that this is my first attempt to write an article for the Hilltop, I would like to make a few important points. First, I would like to express my gratitude to the editor of this publication for giving me the opportunity to contribute to it. Second, I would like to assure my readers that this article represents my personal opinion and does not necessarily reflect the views of the university or any other institution.

I believe that it is important for us to reflect on our past and consider how we can apply those lessons to our present. In doing so, I hope to provide insights that will be useful to others in understanding the experiences of those who have come before us.

As I write this article, I am reminded of the challenges faced by our predecessors. They, too, had to navigate the complexities of their time and find ways to create a better future. I hope that by sharing these stories, we can inspire a sense of responsibility and encourage a commitment to making a positive impact on the world.

In conclusion, I encourage my fellow students to reflect on our past and consider how we can apply those lessons to our present. Let us strive to create a better future and leave a legacy of success and fulfillment.

By Stephen Beckman

Much has been said about 1980: Home to the Last Debate, the軟性媒體 and independence movement, the growth of new ideas and new technology, and much more. How about an article about an economic and social-political change in America? One thing is certain: on the first Thursday in November, there will be no election on the ballot where our destiny lies. It is the election of American women that is crucial.

Our purpose in this article is not to discuss the candidates or the issues or ideology. Candidates are the means to an end. The end is the victory of one candidate over another. The end is the responsibility of the American electorate. We are all responsible for the outcome of this election.

It has become obvious that the status quo of the 1970's is not acceptable to any of the candidates. What is needed is a change. The Democratic party is the party of the people. It is the party of the American people. We are the party of the future.

To our readers who have been following the campaign, we would like to offer a special thank you. We have been following the campaign with great interest and we are grateful for your support.

The question we should be asking ourselves today is what kind of society we will have in the future. How can we ensure that our children will have a brighter future than we do? How can we ensure that our children will have a brighter future than we do?

Yes, Howard University is an institution of higher education where students will have the opportunity to develop their full potential and to become leaders in their respective fields. We are committed to fostering a learning environment that is conducive to success and will provide our students with the tools they need to be successful in their chosen careers.

The Hilltop is a forum for discussion and debate. We encourage our readers to contribute to the conversation. Whether you agree or disagree with the views expressed in this article, we hope that you will take the time to reflect on the issues and to share your own perspectives.

In conclusion, I encourage our readers to take the time to reflect on the issues discussed in this article and to share your own perspectives. We hope that this article will inspire you to think critically and to engage in thoughtful discussion.

Turnout of Black Vote Could Spell Difference in '80

By Lettie Coffin

Somebody Once Said

"I think it's time for us to look at the facts of American history and to understand why we are the way we are today." These words were spoken by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in a speech given at Howard University in 1963. The message was clear: we must understand our past in order to shape our future.

Today, as we approach the 1980 election, it is important to remember the lessons of history. The American Dream, as we know it, is not a reality for all Americans. Many Americans face challenges that are not shared by others. It is up to us to work towards a future where everyone has an equal opportunity to succeed.

In conclusion, I encourage our readers to take the time to reflect on the issues discussed in this article and to share your own perspectives. We hope that this article will inspire you to think critically and to engage in thoughtful discussion.
Strike at Harambee Hotel Continues for Third Week

By Stephanie Strong

A Harambee House Hotel employee strike has entered its third week as unhappy protesters continue to carry signs outside of the hotel on Conner Ave. N.W.

Howard University should know better, according to Howard University President Theodore R. Harrell. "The idea that black people should have, from their own resources, some kind of funding mechanism that could be used for Black business and economic development is a concept that is in keeping with the basic principles of the Labor Department," he said.

"The Bush administration has treated strike workers with the respect they are entitled to," Harrell continued. "The strike has been peaceful and orderly, and I believe the strike workers have a right to be heard."

The strike began on January 1st, when the workers demanded better working conditions and higher wages. The hotel management has refused to negotiate with the workers, who have been picketing outside the hotel for the past three weeks.

The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) is expected to rule on the strike in the next few weeks. The NLRB has already ruled that the strike is illegal, and the workers have been ordered to return to work.

In the meantime, the workers have continued their protest, holding signs and chanting slogans. "We want better working conditions," they cry. "We want higher wages."
2,000 Attend Third Annual Community Day

By Yaya Foster

Washington Post

"It's on time!" was how Darify Muhammad, president of the Hilltop Staff Writers, summed up the third annual Community Day celebration at Howard University last Saturday.

Approximately 1,500 people gathered for a last look at summer and the changes wrought by winter's hand. The residual effects began to show in African precincts.

It is important for us to remember why we are here in Malcolm X Park, because the struggle continues - says Washington D.C. blues is like how the Washington Monument is," said blues poet Ota Williams. "There should be no separation between you and me, Black people, we can not remain apart," said Abdul-Aziz McShaw, president of the Hilltop Staff Writers.

Organizations recruiting members from our community should deal with alleviating the political and economic conditions of our people," said former Howard Political Science professor Dr. James Carter. "I think, what you need is some serious work together and a clear statement of the challenges to solve the problems of our people.

The hidden message is, "Can I organize the hidden energy of our community in order to confront the problems of the city?"

A similar sentiment was echoed when the National Guard Society performed some traditional African rhythms and dance. They solicited some audience participation in an African dance celebrating the common and unity of Black people.

Lead drummer Abo told the need for Black people to join themselves to combat the influence of European values through the media and to guard against such subtle influences. He recited the words of Zimbabwe's Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, who asked Black people to come to Zimbabwe and help solve the war-torn nation. He said that the hidden-Black students should take the skills they learn and apply them to solving the problems of war and peace in their neighborhoods.

The William Tell Awards for Rain, which Howard students played a song and dance to for the best former Howard student, were given to the late former Howard student.

Community Day 1980 was sponsored by Howard University Student Association (HUUSA), the University Wide Coalition of Black Student Unions, the University Unions of Columbia (UCD) Student Government Association.

The first Community Day was held on Howard's campus in September 1978. Last year's event was at Anacostia Park in southeastern Washington.

Liberian Diplomats Speak at School of Business

By Simon Zagers

Hilltop Staff Writer

A sense of freedom is very much alive among the Zimbabwean men in Salisbury, admitted Aubrey McCluskey, who recently returned from the southern African country.

A British interview, McCluskey of Georgetown, Maryland, was brokered to explain the working process. The Zimbabweans were meeting to discuss the situation. Lewis Chapman, acting director for the insurance institute, said, "In every country, every man is a national hero in this battle against the Europeans. The problem is to solve the skills they learn and apply them to solving the problems of war and peace in your neighborhoods."

The two diplomats also briefly explained a past and present history of an organization in their region. Until recently, insurance underwriters were very conservative. Although a firm from recently founded the country, it was enriched by a large bank. McCluskey, who was recently returned from a major portion of the country, said that he was impressed by the new government.

"Welcome you all to our country, you are now in the country of Zimbabwe," said Magabe's Ministry, who represented 20% of the Black population.

About everything is different, said Magabe's Ministry. They are not only selective in picking the prime minister but also in their prime helpers.

The offense is anchored by center Keith Hill. He is flanked by Darrell Williams and John Bovian at guards, and Ralph Green and Anthony Betts at tackles.

These two TI calculators can help you handle courses in math, science, or business, Now and in the real world.

One real-world lesson you’ll learn in school is the importance of productivity. Time you spend doing the math part of the problem is time you can’t spend learning concepts. A Texas Instruments professional calculator will help you make your study time more productive. And it can also help you move into the world of a professional. A world where knowing the concept is only part of the solution. Bringing out the answer requires a working knowledge of a powerful personal calculator.

Texas Instruments technology — bringing affordable electronics to your fingertips.

The TI-55 advanced slide rule with statistics and programmability.

The capable calculator has AOS™ entry system, statistical functions, 20 memories, 3 levels of parentheses, trig, logs and trigs, plus programmability. Its book, "Calcula tor Innovations Illustrated" is $4.95 value, helps you get all the information you need from this TI-55. The whole line of TI calculators will be featured at your college bookstore or other retailer.

Meters Installed, Commuters Annoyed

By Patricia Dev

There will no longer be free parking along the many streets which bisect the campus of Howard University. A new policy, adopted by the Department of Transportation (DOT), requires parking fees to be paid in order to use these streets. Commuters, who have traditionally used the streets for parking, are now required to pay for parking spaces.

The Department of Transportation has been under pressure from the student body to address parking issues. Student representatives have been meeting with DOT officials to discuss the problem of parking availability. DOT has responded by implementing a parking fee policy.

The new policy will affect both students and non-students. Students will be required to pay for parking in most parking lots on campus. Non-students who use the campus for parking will also be charged for parking.

The parking fee policy is intended to increase revenue for the university and to provide more parking spaces for students. The fee is expected to generate $250,000 per year in revenue for the university.
