Dear Professor Redding:

The Writers' Club, Inc. of Washington, D.C. would like very much to present you to a group of its friends about the middle of April. Your talk could be on any subject of your own choosing relating to creative literature.

Our club has a membership of about twenty persons interested in creative activities, many of whom have published their own writings. Annually, we present some outstanding Negro author to a small Washington audience. Our budget is small. Nevertheless, some funds are available for an honorarium.

Will you kindly let me know, as soon as possible, if you will consider coming to Washington to talk to our group. If so, whether or not you have a lecture fee, or if you will come for an honorarium.

Please realize that your consenting to appear here for us will be a distinct honor. There are many persons here who would like to share your literary experiences. It may also be possible to arrange for the sale of copies of your books at that time.

With best wishes for continued success, I am

Very truly yours,

J. Leon Langhorne, Secretary
The Writers' Club, Inc.
