The Story of a Southern School. Jan. 22/28

"God who declarest thine Almighty Power chiefly in showing mercy & pity."

The voice was deep & resonant. The word pity lingered on the lips of the broad shouldered heavy set man on his knees in the pulpit as if it carried a double weight of meaning to the throne of grace. He was evidently, by his endless round collar & high necked waistcoat buttoned on shoulder & underarm, an Episcopalian clergyman tho he wore no surplice & was praying in the ^{"colored"} basement of a Baptist church before a nondescript congregation or rather audience of Negroes from any & all churches of the South Carolina.
