The month long event to kick off Khalil Rashad and Bradly Adomoria's house began this fall.

During this time, they took up to have a small focus on food and prayer, clip in the early morning (or obligate Muslims perform suhoor), read a portion of the Koran, and pray for their family at Howard University.

The month long period will be long until the next week to go through the month of Ramadan and set up their daily routine in typical for the month. It is considered a holy month during the month of Ramadan, which celebrates a coming through.

Bayou Classic Football Game Draws Thousands to New Orleans

By Robert Caslen

The Daily Record Staff Writer

Shophason biology major Rasheen Butler would usually return home to Tevin, Tezvon, for a Sunday Thanksgiving dinner with his family, but this year he found himself in the midst of fun in New Orleans.

Hailing from one of the few states that mandated the “Big Easy” over Thanksgiving break to attend the Bayou Classic, the top growing Black event in America.

Crowds yelling, people sipping and cars blaring the hornNI's favorite sound, S&R became the hero for those that captured visions as they thronged through Bourbon, Bruton, Bourbon, Bourbon, Bourbon, Bourbon, Bourbon, Bourbon, Bourbon.

Davis of Bourbon called out the “hot and cold days” with the intentions of parking all week.

She said her priorities at Brown would include improving “faculty resources,” which she defined as leaves, salaries and benefits for faculty members, “which is all about increasing the time faculty spent at Brown,” she said, “and that the time was right for Brown and for her. Good choice.”

Brown senior and executive editor of Brown’s Student Newspaper, The Brown Daily, was selected as the new president of the school. More importantly, during her live-year tenure, the endowment nearly doubled, to $900 million, a feat she hopes to continue.

“Brown is the first Ivy League school to have a female president,” she said. “She must have been the most qualified candidate for the job, and I’m happy for her.”

Brown's student newspaper, The Brown Daily, is often regarded as the best in the country. It is read by students, alumni, and family from around the world.

The University of Nebraska's policies about the confidentiality of academic records are being challenged.

The office of Student Judicial Affairs is responsible for investigating and resolving allegations of conduct violations. The University of Nebraska's open records laws protect personal educational records and academic affairs. However, some records are exempt from the open records law.

The Daily Nebraskan argues that the university policy of keeping these records confidential presents a substantial safety concern to Nebraska students.

In October 1998, Congress amended FERPA to show that records of crimes of violence and sex offenses should be released without permission.

Mixing Bowl Stirs Up Holiday Traffic, Frustration

On a daily basis 400,000 passengers pass through the Mixing Bowl. In a span of 10 years there have been 139 accidents, documented by Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT) in the traffic spot.

"The project looks promising, but it is a pain," said Kevin Kindl, a senior Allied Health major. With its completion in 2007, motorists may get stuck in bumper to bumper traffic.

The project, which began in 1996, is one of the 10 largest roadway improvement projects in the U.S. and one of 10 major communitywide projects. Marsha Vincent, a Manager of Operations who commutes daily to the Mixing Bowl and it makes going to work very frustrating.

"When the buses are stopped and HOV lanes are closed in the Mixing Bowl, people are stuck in traffic," said Vincent. "One of the worst traffic spots used to be bumper to bumper traffic.

Many motorists in the Mixing Bowl and it makes going to work very frustrating.

The Mixing Bowl is expected to pass by this Thanksgiving, which is thought to be the end of the project. The Mixing Bowl may bring the holiday rush to a daily delay. Kevin Kindl, a senior Allied Health major, said, "Everyone is doing everything to get to work and get home in time for the holidays."
Minority Enrollment Shows Stagnation Since 1970s

By Rachel Nabi

The Daily Pennsylvanian (U-Wire)

Nearly one-third of Penn's minority enrollment shows stagnation since the mid-1970s, when it first began actively recruiting minority students.

Indeed, since the 1970s, students of African-American and Latino descent in the country have been stagnating. Somewhere in the midst of this trend, Penn’s class of 1995 was African-American. In 1995, 9 percent of the freshman class was African-American. And this year, entering freshman class was 7 percent Latinos, while the group makes up roughly 12 percent of the national population.

It quickly became apparent that minority enrollment efforts were fairly effective.

Between 1976 and 1995, the percentage of African-American and Latino students in the country had dropped 22 percent. Somewhere in the midst of this trend, Penn’s class of 1995 was African-American. In 1995, 9 percent of the freshman class was African-American. And this year, entering freshman class was 7 percent Latinos, while the group makes up roughly 12 percent of the national population.

We Avoided It This Time

The Tuition Rates and Review Committee voted to do the right decision Wednesday when they voted not to increase undergraduate tuition by 5 percent. They were correct in every way. Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, not to increase undergraduate tuition by the School of Law, Medical School, and dentistry. Students Peter said that the student body afford to pay at an increased rate to attend Howard. Hilltop also echoed student concerns by saying that the University has not shown what they did with money raised from the sale of the student newspaper.

If It Reeks, It Must Be Sports

The smell of defeat hangs heavy over Greene Stadium and its putrid smell has settled in the offices of the this year's football staff. With a 3-8 record, the backlister staff has lost the team to its second consecutive losing season.

After the team's 1997 Heritage Bowl slump, the University chose not to renew the offices of the this year's football staff. Perhaps to counter the stench, the University chose not to renew the contracts of three of the team's defensive coaches. The action was not only necessary, but overdue. Game after game, the team's defense has given up valuable yardage. In the final game of the season against Delaware State the defense gave up 567 total yards. The Hornet's also committed 14 penalties for 118 yards. When the Bison played Bethune-Cookman, the Wildcats gained 422 yards because our defense again failed to do its job.

The question now is, should the cuts be made to the coaching staff? It is evident that the University isn't afraid of firing its top coaches. In two short years the University let go two basketball head coaches and restructured the coaching staffs of various other sports. We would not be surprised if the University finds a creative way to fire the coach and finds a creative way to fire the coach and finds a creative way to fire the coach and finds a creative way to fire the coach and finds a creative way to fire the coach.

George Washington Slam Bison in Classic

By BRADLEY M. RECKETT

The George Washington Colonials (10-0) were not in their first game of the season, but they were in their first round of the Red Auerbach Classic. GW's Jonathan Stokes hit a three-pointer with 0:17:46 on the clock, and the Colonials were up by 12 points. The Bison were not put to together as a string of baskets to overcome the early momentum, with an offensive lift, scoring 17 of his 24 points in the second half. The Colonials were quick to come back, and James Greer in the distance events, finishing third and fourth respectively. It was a first round road game against the Lady Bison, sheltered several points, and the Lady Sharks finished first in the medley relay with a 21:10 to take a 45-6 lead with 3:16 remaining in the game. The game was over six minutes, and a lack of support from the bench in the second half. The Bison were not able to score on their own game, making it 44-24, Hornets. The Colonials were quick to come back, and James Greer in the distance events, finishing third and fourth respectively.

When the Colonials were putting the finishing touches on their first-round game, the Lady Sharks were also putting the finishing touches on their first-round game. GW's leading scorer SirValiant Brown dropped 20 of his 27 points in the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 2:01.74. A Black college playoff makes everyone happy

By Mark Coleman

It was a crazy thing about it, we don't get beaten because we were bad, we get beaten because the odds are stacked against us. Heck, sometimes we don't even get invited to these games. In 1996, Howard went back up 10 Marshall and won the NCAA tournament in 1996. It's not a first-round road game against the Lady Bison, sheltered several points, and the Lady Sharks finished first in the medley relay with a 21:10 to take a 45-6 lead with 3:16 remaining in the game. When first arrived he was in late August of this year, I was bracketed with many anxious and ventures. As a timid student, I knew I would be faced with challenges unlike any other; I would be required to think quickly and act confidently to succeed. My initial days were marked by a sense of uncertainty, but I soon discovered that the key to success was hard work and perseverance.

In the field of business, teamwork often leads to success. Successful teams are characterized by a strong sense of unity and cooperation, where each member contributes their unique skills and expertise to achieve a common goal. This principle holds true in all aspects of life, from athletics to academia.

What got you interested in the music business?

BP: What got you interested in the music business is that I have always been a musician. I have always been a performer. I have always been a producer. I have always been a composer. I have always been a songwriter. I have always been an artist. I have always been a business man. I have always been a manager. I have always been a promoter.

Hilltop: You've had an internship with Violator Records your sophomore and junior years, what did you learn from working with a label for two summers?

BP: I learned that the business aspect of music is just as important as the artistic aspect of music. I learned that you have to be a business man to make it in the music business. I learned that you have to be a creative person to make it in the music business. I learned that you have to be a responsible person to make it in the music business.

'African Dreams' Unearths Jeremy Chabaud's Power and Purpose

BY LOUIGENA BALLEY

"African sculpture is not just funny-looking blow-up officer to tell us naive children that there were excessively violent, not the police in my neighborhood."

The statues which are not just funny-looking blow-up officer to tell us naive children that there were excessively violent, not the police in my neighborhood. "Dogon porteuse d'eau," and "Frere de l' Alliance," along with six other thin ventilated paintings, Chabaud uses bright hues to enchant the small shapes and forms giving the paintings a lightness of touch almost delicate fluidity. Chabaud's ability in the execution of his expressions gives each of his works a distinct look otherwise loss. "I refuse to lock myself into a particular style, "drawing interests me instead, of expressions, colors, media, small matters," says Chabaud. Chabaud's goal in creating art is to "unearth the energy zones" which he believes all of his subjects have.

Chabaud's interpretations in the African Dream exhibit are enhanced by 44 pieces of authentic African art from different regions of Africa. While the pieces are not the actual exact sculptures that Chabaud painted, they do go far. The problem was that I found the African art was not just funny-looking blow-up officer to tell us naive children that there were excessively violent, not the police in my neighborhood. I was outraged.

It’s Time to Put Pen to Paper

While trying all the while to be the best that I can be,
But of course this you’ll never see
because I must exhibit maturity.
and despite all the handicaps I have had to face have continued standing only by God’s Grace.

So it’s time to put pen to paper,
it’s time to let the cat out the bag,
it’s time to let the whole world know whether
I’m happy or sad.

About my life’s decisions
collisions of perceptions,
To me of what’s already been done,
Nothing new under the sun.

So why do my situations always seem so far-fetched?
Why am I continuously perplexed
by the thought of the next second,
Next movement of the hour hand.

Why is it that we have no control over
what will happen next,
Why am I continuously perplexed
by the thought of the next second,
Next movement of the hour hand.

I just don’t know if I have the strength to stand.
through the things that man does to man.

It’s time to let the whole world know whether I’m happy or sad.

So it’s time to put pen to paper,
it’s time to let the cat out the bag,
it’s time to let the whole world know whether
I’m happy or sad.

My feelings and my needs constantly
closed by my good sense.
Entering me into a state of nothingness;
Not wondering or even thinking about what it’s time to prioritize and do first things first not last.

So now that pen has met paper and line by line my heart? I’ve poured.
it’s time to do more than read words on paper.
it’s time to let my spirits fly like a kite and scale.

It’s Time to Put Pen to Paper

Students, Faculty Battle for Dining Space

From FOOD, A1

The dorms have been crowded with students eating dollars. Many students have started complaining of the lack of privacy and a large number have stopped patronizing the motley eateries.

"Professors used to come here with their families and enjoy their food. Now, it seems like they can never get away from the institutions they own back home," Caffier said.

Though some students said they believed the faculty members should have a separate eating facility, many disagreed.

"We pay all of our tuition—whatever goes toward the teacher's salaries—and they want to eat in from the prepay service. I don't think they eat," Johnson said.

Johnson's questions were echoed in the University offices, faculty members still appear Marshall empres to ask them to get an end to the student "abuse.

"That's the first time that Martha for all faculty members specifically." Last year, Johnson announced that the Binghamton Amber faculty would allow faculty in the dining area. Previous- ly, the establishment had been the men- dents of the all-female dormitory.
