Scope and Contents

The papers of lawyer, civil rights activist, and former Howard University Law School Dean, Wiley A. Branton (1923-1988) span the period of 1946-1989 and measure approximately 7 1/2 linear feet. Correspondence comprises the bulk of the collection and includes notables such as Daisy Bates, John Hope Franklin, Vernon Jordan, Coretta Scott King, Martin Luther King, Jr., Benjamin Mays, Walter White, and Roy Wilkins.

Branton was born and raised in Pine Bluff, Arkansas. Biographical and educational material can be found in the Personal Papers series. Branton was one of the first African-American students enrolled in the University of Arkansas where he earned his J.D. in 1952. He practiced law in Pine Bluff from 1952-1962, and during that time he achieved national prominence as Chief Counsel for the plaintiffs in the Little Rock School case. Branton's legal papers from that case are not included in this collection. Reference to Branton's role in the case, however, can be found throughout his correspondence, speeches, and writings about Branton. Newspaper clippings chronicling the case can be found in Scrapbook II.

From 1962 until his investiture as Dean of the Howard University Law School in 1978, Branton continued to practice law but also served on many important civil rights projects. He was the first Executive Director of the Voter Education Project; the Executive Director of the Council for United Civil Rights Leadership, Inc.; Executive Secretary to the President's Council on Equal Opportunity; and Director of the United Planning Organization, Washington, D.C. Material relating to these organizations can be found in the series Organizational Affiliations.

In 1972 Branton was chosen to direct the Voter Registration Fund (VRF), a non-partisan organization created to provide funding to tax exempt organizations in support of voter registration activities. Of note in this collection are Branton's files from that organization. The final report of the VRF outlines the organization's goals and achievements. Application material, reports, and printed material of applying organizations provide insight into the accomplishments of this fund, also known as the "Greatness Fund."

From 1978-1983 Branton served as Dean of the Howard University School of Law. This collection does not contain the files of his office, but his activities as Dean can be traced through his correspondence, writings, and newspaper clippings. After Branton resigned as Dean, he joined the Washington, D.C. office of Sidley & Austin where he continued to practice law until his death in 1988. The papers of Wiley Branton were donated to Moorland-Spingarn Research Center in 1989 by his wife, Ms. Lucille Branton, and daughter, Ms. Beverly Branton.
