Honors Day
Will Be Held
November 14

The four colleges of Engineering, Architecture, Fine Arts, Liberal Arts, and Pharmacy will hold their Honors Day program on Tuesday, November 14, at 1:40 p.m. in Crumton Auditorium. The students to be honored will have attained one of the highest academic standing in their college. The keynote address will be given by Dr. Henry C. Boren, executive director of the American Chemical Society.

Burch Society Honors

The Charles Eaton Burch Medal is the highest honor given by the American Chemical Society. The medal is awarded to a student in recognition of outstanding scholastic achievement. The medal will be awarded to a senior in the College of Chemistry and Physics, who will be selected by the Burch Society.

Dr. Tobias, Hu Trustee.
DIES IN N.Y.

Dr. Channing H. Tobias, 70, a member of the Board of Trustees and Chairman Emiratus of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, died in New York last Tuesday. A major part of Dr. Tobias' career was devoted to the YMCA, with which he worked from 1911 to 1945. During his tenure with the YMCA, he was an assistant secretary for work among Negroes.

Deepavali Fete

Cranton Sun. Evening

Indian students of Howard University will present the Indian festival of lights, Deepavali, on Sunday evening, November 15, in the Crumton Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

Festivals are an integral part of Indian life and culture and are of the most important national events. Many festivals of India had their origin during the Vedic period. Deepavali (1000 B.C.) and were dedicated to provide social and cultural opportunities. These religious ceremonies lend charm and beauty to the life of a family.

Here, the Indian students have decided to duplicate the festival in a form of a cultural program; dance, songs and music, accompanied by a dance of India, the Hula, in the Crumton Auditorium, with the participation of all students.

In India, Deepavali is characterized by the exchange of sweets, embroidered cards, gifts and presents. In India, it is customary for family members to exchange presents among themselves, as well as for friends, relatives and neighbors.

Geology-Geography Department

Announces Next Term Expansions

Professor Anthony Breuer, head of the Department of Geography, has announced a major expansion which will be completed during the winter term.

The department will offer introductory courses in geology, geography, and economics. The courses will be offered to students who wish to pursue studies in these fields.

According to Professor Breuer, the new courses will be offered in addition to the existing courses in geology and geography. The courses will be offered in the evenings, and will be taught by experienced instructors.

Howard Students for Peace
Seek Campus Recognition

National student opposition to present world conditions has found fertile ground among Howard students.

According to informed sources, a group named Howard University Students for Peace has been organizing on campus. On the basis of information provided by sources, the group appears to be a part of nationwide student groups.
The Delicate: A Post Mortem

Malcolm X explains Black Muslims

Not an Organization, Says Leader, Rather a Part of 'World of Islam'

Last Monday Mr. Malcolm X, Minister of the "Black Muslims," delivered a speech at Howard University before the audience. After the debate Mr. X granted a brief interview to "The Hilltop."
The substance of the interview follows.

QUESTION: "Mr. X, your organization is accused by a variety of names. What is its correct name?

MR. X: "We are not an organization. We represent the World of Islam, which extends through parts of Asia and Africa. Just as Abraham or Jesus were loved, the name is the World of Islam."

QUESTION: "You made representation to its followers.

MR. X: "Yes. Then your movement is not only religious but also social and economic interests alike?"

MR. X: "That is correct. In a sense, we are a religion, religious leaders of any kind. But also an economic and social movement. Any religion that does not provide for the social and economic needs is not, in my view, a religion.

That, however, is another discussion.

MR. X: "Mr. Malcolm X, who had come from New York for the debate, wished to comment on the ICC rulings. Ride unsegregated facilities. Otherwise, you are contributing to the perpetuation of Jim Crow."

Club Debates U.N. Dilemma

The first in a proposed series of debates will be held by the World Affairs Club, Wednesday, November 1, 1961. The debate, entitled "Reorganization of the U.N. Secretariat," presented three major positions on the question: the Russian, the American, and the neutralist. The participants were John F. Kennedy, Charles Richard, and Nicholas Dajani. After the initial debate the audience was given the chance to ask questions, which resulted in a lively discussion. It is hoped that the debates will continue for several weeks.

Job Opportunities

The Office of Student Employment and Graduate Placement is now embarking upon its most active recruitment and placement year at Howard University, announced that helpful employment opportunities are open to students with various job aspirations.

Students seeking these positions are encouraged to attend the interview at the Office of Student Employment and Graduate Placement located on the lower floor of the Administration Building. The interviews will be held in Room 210, Beginning December 1, and are otherwise indicated.

But What of Rashomon?

The drama department's production of Rashomon closed with two performances last Saturday. It attained a very high technical and dramatic level, and the Hiltop wishes to congratulate all persons connected with the play. At the time of the run of the play did the size of the audience approach the numbers one would expect from a "university community." Indeed, there was one performance at which attendance scarcely reached double figures.

That an artistic production of the merits of Rashomon should go almost completely ignored would be a poor reflection on the values of any community regardless of what its intellectual presumptions are. Such aPhilistine disregard for the arts by a group that prides itself of being a "community of scholars" and an "academic community" is not only ominous but appalling, especially since we tend to regard such communities as "cultural oases" in the earth-tined and chrome-wasted that is the modern mass society.

Word from Our Readers

Lock Out

To the editor:

Wall of Legal's letter to the editor (Nov. 5, 1963) strikes me as quite unfair. His misattribution of logic points to evident social indifference on his part. He states off-handly why the Professor of Geometry should not look the door empty ten minutes after the hour, but his conclusion arrives validly at the shores of reality quite shipwrecked.

His failure to see the importance of prominence in a highly developed society like ours gives substance to my reproach. Thus we are forced to review a society based on DeLilah's "assassin-faire-maim." Imagine the chaos that would visit us if, let's say, the fireman, doctor, or telephone operator fell as they do. What would happen if our industries went behind production or our giant ships were detached at the docks because the pilots were late. Imagine the disenfranchisement of many people of the world when the American ships arrive late to pick up their countries' people and all is well? How do you advocate such indifference to our way of life?

Sincerely,

Kermit Reynolds

Queen Election

Mr. Editor:

I wonder why the ballastics for the Homecoming Queen election had to be summarized along with the sheets of paper on which voting students had to write their names. I can see the ballots being numbered to keep a count, but then you number the signature sheet, such that both the ballots and the signature corresponding to certain numbers in an orderly fashion. It is possible for someone to check a number of ballots in such a fashion as to determine how that person voted during the election. For example, if ballot no. 00189 was issued to Joe Jones, who signed his name as the no. 137 voter, and Mary Alice got ballot no. 01169, coming to him, and signed as voter number 118, etc., to Vicerey, (or, more severely, withillery) to look out Joey and Mary's ballot, compare the ballot and the signature list, and determine that they did or did not vote for their Queen-candidate as supported by their respective Greenwich.

I say, number the ballots, but don't number the signature sheet. In fact, don't ever have a signature sheet. Have un-numbered signature cards and pick up the cards next time. But the method observed in the election confirmed me that the whole election was unconstitutional, null and void, and violated the dean practice and law of the "secret ballot." If the election was anything, somebody, please?

Dear Sirs:

The Homecoming Committee and all those associated with this major campus event, will have to look out next year for the many students visiting our school who come along with their team or come in town to see their team play us.

There were many Hampton students in town and around the campus this year. They had time on their hands and nothing to do. It is said that the Homecoming Committee had not procrastinated plans to take care of them, make them feel at home, and furnish some comforts of Howard's "entertainment." If this is so, then I say Homecoming Committee (and Mr. Bateman!) should be notified with three waves of the visitors from the opposing team next year.

Very sincerely,

Joan Wells

Alpha Phi Alpha

The men of Alpha Phi Alpha should like to welcome to the campus both former Howardites and that peculiar congregation of persons conveniently referred to as "Frankenstein." We wish for all a prosperous year of educational and social accomplishments.

It is the hope of Alpha Phi Alpha in the subsequent years, by way of self-exemplification, to inspire educational aspirations of the Howard student and to inculcate progressive social duties; to seek out Joe's Queen-candidate as "entertainment," as well as "safety."

Rustin "No" Match for X; Writer Predicts Wagner Win

By A. Guy Draper, III

Malcolm X, one of the most evasive and non-specific individuals I've ever met, with his objectives and radical plan of action which he would have to be in perhaps, one of the most elusive articles of appealing to the emotions I've ever seen.

Bayard Rustin was "not in" my estimation, a fair match for Mr. X. (Dr. Martin Luther King would have been). Mr. Rustin's presentation was one of sophis-tication whereas Mr. X's was emotionalistic and in face of simplification, emotionalism always changes the victim.

While I wholeheartedly agree with Mr. X's basic principles and support his condemnation of the white man's exploitation of the Negro, I cannot possibly conceive a land designated by the Hon. Mr. X's basic principles and ramifications in the United States or anywhere. While I wholeheartedly agree with Mr. X's basic principles and his condemnation of the white man's exploitation of the Negro, I cannot possibly conceive a land designated by the Hon. Mr. X's basic principles and ramifications in the United States or anywhere.

I sat one seat from President James M. Nabrit, Jr., during the debate and heard, from the expression on his face, that he, too, was proud of the Howard Community and its efforts to bring such a program to the campus. But I would like to point out that we, the students, Mr. President are proud of you, too; for in face of some faculty objection, you allowed such a program (Continued on page 9, col. 1).

Mr. Rustin, however, didn't impress me with having given such a concrete plan of the objectives of the "inner action" movement that he advocated either; on, while both presented quite an effective fanfare for the Howard Community, both failed to put before us a detailed plan (the means) for their objectives (the end).

In talking with Mr. X after the debate, I asked him to distin-guish between his "Black Muslim" and the original Muslims of Syria, Morocco, and Nigeria. He very unsatisfactorily answered, "...some sheep go astray." (I wonder if he was referring to his sect?)

Both gentlemen introduced humor in their presentation, but Mr. X exhibited genius ability to correlate factual occurrences with his movement in a humorous manner. His insistence concerning the discrimination of the Jews for example,"... When the Jews were discriminated against in Miami, they bought Miami Beach."

I think the debate served its purpose very profusely and I would like to congratulate all those persons concerned with the "Project Awareness" and especially its chairman and my colleague, Tom Kahn.

This was a new and challenging experience for the Howard Community and I'm glad that Howard Students performed so admirably in both their accept-ance and response.

Therefore, I sat one seat from President James M. Nabrit, Jr., during the debate and heard, from the expression on his face, that he, too, was proud of the Howard Community and its efforts to bring such a program to the campus.

But I would like to point out that we, the students, Mr. President are proud of you, too; for in face of some faculty objection, you allowed such a program (Continued on page 9, col. 1).

Dr. Charles Eaton Burch, former chairman of the English Department at Howard University died in 1968 while returning from Yale University, where he had gone to check on material he was to use in his definitive work on Daniel Defoe.

It is significant that Dr. Burch died while engaged in the task he loved so well — research on Defoe.

The author of Defoe's British Deportations (1605-1700) (1914), and Daniel Defoe, his studies have appeared in learned journals of the U.S., Great Britain, and Germany.

Dr. Burch was born in St. Georges, Bermuda, on July 15th, 1869, and received his B.A. from Wilberforce University in 1914.

He won his A.M. from Columbia University in 1933. He taught at Howard University in 1918, and received his Ph.D. from Ohio State University in 1937.

He taught at Morris Brown College, Tuskegee Institute, Langston University, Wilberforce University, and Alabama State Teachers College.

Joining Howard's English Department in 1921, Dr. Burch became department chairman in 1929, a position he held until his death.

In 1949 members of the English Department established the Charles Eaton Burch Memorial Fund to give recognition to late and beloved chairman. This led to the first of the annual Negro Institutions, brings to Howard University the Sund. man of letters or distinguished scholars in literary research. The English Department has made this small lecture not only an important literary event, but also a boon to Negro literary scholarship.

Air Force Drill Team Wins Again

Beating the Air Force ROTC Area Champion, Andrew D. Turner Memorial Drill Team defeated the Army ROTC Drill Team and the National Capital Area Civil Air Patrol Drill Team in the prestigious Homecoming activities.

As the finest precision marchers in the area, whose image is placed upon the base as it enters any competition; for most of the rival teams, Catholic University, the University of Maryland, and George-town University — are out to regain the title that the Air Force Drill Team has won for Howard University.

In the competition the eighteen man flight format was employed, then proceeded until the fluid in style and after having completed it, it executed several circle movements. The drum major's cues came when it performed its famous "rifle drop" faultlessly.

Captain Dayton R. Ragland, USAT Drill Team advisor, and Cadet-Master Allan Griffin, Drill Team commander, have indicated that while the team isn't at its "best," the time lapse between now and the Winter Games shows should be enough to "win over the others.

The officers of Beta Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha are the men who are an Alpha and an individual striving to further college activities in the most opportune manner — present, Melvin A. York; vice-president, E. Vincent Marrero—the secretary, Jerome Atkins; treasurer, George Clark; historian, Phillip Cooper; parliamentarian, Kenneth Bolin.

It is the conviction of Alpha Phi Alpha that a college education encompasses the pursuit of worldly knowledge, in order to maintain a specialty and the achieve-ment of social maturity. With the entertainment of these two objectives, we wish for Howard to raise the prudence to maintain the quality and quantity of indulgence in each which would afford him a successful and enjoyable academic career.

Editors' Note:

The above has not been edited.

We have printed it because it represents one of the many firsts in our editorial program, that is, the publication of genuine contributions, the importance of which we believe worthy a magazine. Indeed a national publication, the Sphinx, left the following note to be acknowledged:

"Hooray! A second is offered to my personal opinion on the oddity of the Sphinx. The fate of Thoth depends upon the... Outpost."

The Howard University Moot Court Team defeated American University Law School in the first round of the National Moot Court Competitions last Friday night in the Municipal Court Building. The Howard Team will face George Washington Law School in the second round tonight (Friday, November 17) at 8 p.m. in the same court room.

The winners of this round will compete in the final round next week to determine who will represent the 11th Circuit in the national finals held in New York in December. Senior Harold Dees and junior Earl White represented Howard at attorneys for the respondents in a property suit involving internal law. The team has high hopes of making the finals this year after losing a split decision to the respondents in Georgetown in the first round last year.

Drexel Over Howard 13-9

Brooks of Brookville: Last of the Individualists

Howard University Football Team, sick patient of Varisty Sports, suffered another relapse when it lost 13-9 to lowly Drexel Tech on Saturday last.

The only victory for the ailing Bisons was over still winless St. Paul way back in September. With Saturday's loss the illness reached a critical period. Coach White, now holding a 1-4 record, continues to nurse the patient but if the physicians remain aloof and the proper prescriptons are not forthcoming, the nurse is in imminent danger. If the patient is to be saved further agony the "median" must either grant a merciful release or come up with the needed remedy.

Team morale cannot long survive continued abuse; with their losing streak already the longest in Bison history.

But if the ill that beset the football team are physical and easily diagnosed, what can be recommended for an apparently suffering from delusions of grandeur? Against Millersville last Saturday, the soccer team scored four goals in thirty minutes, then slumbered while Millersville seized the opportunity to put four of their own.

Plainly something went wrong. A complete lack of discipline characterized the team's performance in the last half of the game.

The forward line revealed gashly timidity whenever captain Cariton Hinds retired for a moment's repose. The absence of Winston Alexis was felt as Cecil Durham spent himself looking for an ally.

But if the forwards floundered, the defense had clearly abandoned all pretensions of a line. Before putting a punt on the Drexel 2-yard line and being swept into the end zone for a score, the Bison defense allowed the Dons to gain 93 yards, 48 of them on a 93-yard touchdown pass by John Lawson.

The forward line's jaunt beyond the one yard line was the second for Drexel against three losses and a tie.

Ever been to Brookville, VA? It is a tiny kingdom at Howard U under the benevolent dictatorship of King Brookie, also called "Brooks the Friend ly." The domain and protectorate of the Bhoy include the gymnasium, the athletic equipment room. His log is in the back room of the gymnasium in front of the swimming pool. A far cry from the domain it was supposed to be.
