Do College Tours Give Prospective Students an Accurate View of Howard?

By Alex Johnson

Vice President

Tours are a great way to get a feel for a college. When I came here, the tours were appealing because they showed me the Yard, the campus, and the people. But a tour isn't the only way to get a feel for a college. There are other factors to consider when it comes to making the decision to go to a college.

The plan is that what will be done over an extended period of time, but there is no real concrete plan on what to do now. Said Smith. Smith is also a member of the Student Senate's council of concern to talk about the first hand results of the surveys. One of the leading points involves creating a working session for students to discuss the University's curricular policy. In the past year, students have written letters to the President expressing their concerns about the academic grade policy. The conference will be held and open to the community at large.

The tours are usually during the spring. I doubt the students are focused on the campus to the view of the students.

Students Gather to Voice Concerns at Communications Speak Out

From Communications AI
School of Communications 2006. "Until then, we will talk to other schools, such as American University," said McFarlin. "We will like to facilitate meeting with the deans of other schools to keep students aware of our situation. This has been the prime focus of our concerns.

Cheryl Lane, a junior broadcast journalism student also stated the students in her class came to present students involved with the School of Communications. Williamson said that the administration should be informed of them. "They need to know that the students know that they are important." The administration, in turn, should be informed of the students' concerns.

Consider in increasing the maximum eligibility. The additional funds can be used to address the needs of students who have greater financial need. For example, increases in federal, state, and university grants since the early 1990s have reduced the average student's loan amount at USC from $7,500 to $3,800, Thomas said. By reducing the amount of student loans, more students can afford to attend college.

Congratulations Hilltop Staff

Shortly before the beginning of the 2000 fall semester, a group of students gathered to plan the future of an organization. Ambition was in their souls, and writing was in their blood.

During that brief meeting, staffers of The Hilltop decided to bring the most relevant news to the Howard University community through solid reporting, crisp layouts, and sharp photos.

On March 30th, those staffers were awarded the Society of Professional Journalists First Place award for Best Weekly Student Newspaper in Region 2.

Now with a twice-a-week production schedule, the staff hopes to bring you more up-to-date information, with the same award-winning approach to the news. Congratulations Staff for Having a Vision and the Drive.

Kendrit's Brings South Africa to America, Explores Racism Through Film

BY DAISY GREY

The world of South African artist William Kendrit is on view at the Freer Gallery of Art and Sculpture Garden, featuring almost a dozen of his free-standing sculpture. Kendrit's work, which can be seen in the National Museum of African Art and Sculpture in South Africa and in the 1970s in New York, is known for its themes of social commentary and political activism. The exhibit includes a variety of Kendrit's sculptures, paintings, and drawings, all of which reflect his concerns about the effects of apartheid on South Africa and its people.

The exhibition, titled "Kendrit's Brings South Africa to America, Explores Racism Through Film," runs through June 30. It features more than 80 works, including sculptures, paintings, drawings, and prints that explore the artist's use of visual and textual elements to convey his message.

Coppin State Discontinues Wrestling Program

Baltimore, Md. - Coppin State College announced it has discon tinued its wrestling program.

"Unfortunately, we have found it to be in the best interest of the athletic department to eliminate the wrestling program," said athletic director Jeff Tull. Despite individual successes, the team went 0-9 in dual competition this past season with just eight members to 15 weight classes.

In recent years, the Eagles have struggled to field a solid squad.

Not surprisingly, seven wrestlers have qualified for the NCAA Champs ionships in the past seven years, including Junior Subman and Michael Martin this season because the second place bid at the national tournament. At the Southeastern Conference meet, Coppin State placed fourth.

"However, a strong showing is evident in the national tournament," he said. Coppin State is currently fourth in the conference. Coppin State is the only national team that has given the Wolverines a challenge so far this season.

Michigan Hires Amaker

Detroit, Mich. - Michigan basketball coach Tubby Smith has agreed to give the Wolverines a new coach.

Coppin State Discontinues Wrestling Program

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The school that gave the Michigan basketball program its only national title has now hired a new coach.

Seven bowl football coach Tony Amaker has agreed to a five-year deal to coach the Wolverines after a 2-10 season last year.

"I'm very excited about the opportunity to coach at Michigan," Amaker said. "It's an honor to be able to coach the Wolverines and I look forward to leading them to national championships."

Private Prisons

So What’s So Bad about Private Prisons

Chanel Vestal

As an instructor, I get all sorts of questions from students about the nature of the criminal justice profession. One of the questions that always comes up is, “Why are we putting people in private prisons?”

There are several reasons why profits are important in the criminal justice system. One reason is that private prisons can be more cost-effective than state-run facilities. This is because private prisons can typically operate more efficiently than state-run facilities, and they can also reduce costs by using cheaper labor. Another reason is that private prisons can provide more luxurious living conditions for inmates, which can help to reduce recidivism rates. Finally, private prisons can be used to help alleviate overcrowding in state-run facilities.

In conclusion, private prisons are an important part of the criminal justice system, and they serve a vital role in ensuring public safety. However, it is important to be aware of the potential risks and drawbacks of private prisons, and to ensure that they are used in a responsible and ethical manner.
