ART CARTER PAPERS

Collection 170-1 to 170-46

Prepared by:
Helen Rutt
October 1994

SCOPE NOTE

The papers of Arthur M. ("Art") Carter (1911-1988), writer and editor, span the period from 1932 to 1988, and measure approximately twenty two linear feet. The bulk of the papers covers the period from 1932 to 1987. For thirty-nine years Carter reported, edited or wrote commentary for the Afro-American. This collection documents Carter's career both as a newspaper man, and also as a sports promoter and enthusiast.

In 1937 Carl Murphy hired Carter to work as a police reporter and sports columnist for the Washington Afro-American. Within a year, Carter became sports editor of the Afro-American Newspapers. The collection includes an extensive body of Carter's sports reports and commentaries, including his baseball series, "From the Bench." Between 1943 and 1944 Carter served as war correspondent, reporting about black troops in North Africa and Italy. The collection contains Carter's V-mail and reports from abroad.

During the 1940s, Carter actively promoted Negro baseball, serving as Washington Representative of the Negro National League's Homestead Grays, President of the Interstate Baseball League, and Distributor of Negro Baseball. Carter's papers reflect his devotion to baseball, as well as numerous other sports. The Negro Baseball, Sports, and Photographs series contain an array of printed material, correspondence, and photographs documenting African-Americans in sports.

After World War II, Carter rose through the ranks of the Afro-American, becoming national correspondent, assistant managing editor, and finally, managing editor. Long regarded as a role model by aspiring reporters and writers, Carter received numerous awards for his contributions to journalism. His correspondence, along with Afro-American materials, document the day-to-day operation of the newspaper. Also well-documented is Carter's participation in journalism organizations, including the Capital Press Club and the National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA).

In 1989 and 1990 Callie Carter, Art Carter's second wife, donated the papers to Moorland-Spingarn.
