Counseling Underused In Tragedy Aftermath

University Sets Up Crisis Line for Students

By COREY CUNNINGHAM
Hilltop Staff Writer

Despite the myriad feelings of confusion, shock, and helplessness among the Howard community caused by last Saturday’s shooting and Sunday’s fire in the United States, few students felt it was necessary to seek university-counseling services.

According to university counseling there has been no overwhelming demand from students seeking either individual or group counseling.

“We have seen a significant amount of students coming to the counseling center in reference to the events of September 11th,” said Senior Counselor, Howard Hope.

“The Howard University Counseling Center, located in the C.B. Powell Student Center, provides individual and group counseling, as well as pretreatment to students who need help in handling emotional difficulties.”

University Counseling is now offering a 24-hour crisis hotline in the wake of the New York and Washington, D.C. tragedies, as well as ongoing group sessions.

These sessions are for those persons who have been directly affected by the tragedy, and desire there to provide support from others in a similar situation and counseling staff.

“While we do not have space to just open around new group sessions, many students feel that this service is unnecessary.”

“I didn’t go because I didn’t want to talk to anyone,” said fresman Tiffany Rosby. “I have a friend who’s father died in the Towers, and I didn’t think it was necessary.”

“I have a friend who’s father died in the Towers, and I didn’t think it was necessary.”

Experiencing the same sentiment, Christine Bailey, a Sophomore Radio/TV/Film major, said “I don’t feel the need to go because I didn’t see anybody die everyday, and I’m not here to have a panic attack. Most black people grew up in family oriented environments, and we are not used to relying on each other rather than people who we don’t know.”

Both students also said that their university counseling, Howard University Counseling Center has been unable to offer University counseling services.

“We sure hope the effective staff is there, it looks like the center is understaffed, and no one thought it would be this bad,” said Rosby. “I have a friend who’s father died in the Towers, and I didn’t think it was necessary.”

Students Opinions Vary On War on Terrorism

By BLANCA MOLICH

Some students have the opinion that the attacks is what caused September 11th and that war is the solution to that problem. They believe that if there wasn't a war, then there would be no terrorism. This view is held by a large majority of students.

Other students believe that the attacks were a warning to America about what could happen if we continue to support weak nations. They argue that the only way to prevent future attacks is to engage in a war against terrorism.

Still others believe that the attacks were a result of our own actions. They argue that we have supported weak nations in the past, and that these nations have become more powerful because of our support.

In conclusion, the students' opinions on the war on terrorism vary widely. Some believe that war is necessary to prevent future attacks, while others believe that it is not. It is up to each individual to form their own opinion on this complex and controversial issue.

Griffith Stadium, a Howard Landmark

Frank Ceresi, who believes the monuments will spark interest in the stadium and inspire fans to donate ed with African-American athletes.

Baseball History in the Making

Griffith Stadium served as the home venue for baseball's Washington Senators (1903-1961), the NFL expansion team the Washington Redskins (1932-1948), and the NFL expansion team the Washington Redskins (1961). As well as civic events such as church revivals, and the annual citywide local cadet training.

Much of the stadium's history is tied to the personal stories of its visitors. From Jack Gibson, a Negro league star, to Jackie Robinson, the first African-American player in Major League Baseball, Griffith Stadium hosted many legendary moments.

Racism Near Park Grounds

Not everyone remembers Griffith Stadium fondly however. In his autobiography "If I Had a Hammer," Aaron writes: "I can still envision sitting with my mom at the park, hearing them knock one over the scoreboard in right center opening day against the Yankee; he said. "That didn't thrill me half as much as one year at the start of the season, when the president threw out the first pitch, and the karma shifts and baseball comes back to the city."

Stock Market Reels. Recession Looms

The stock market last week fit the pattern of a market that was indeed due for a big tumble as investors took steps to pro-defend their positions. The Dow Jones Industrial Average lost 1,023.63 points for the week ending October 12 and the Standard & Poor's Composite Index lost 135.15 points. More striking was the fact that the market's fall was not as broad as many had feared. While the decemberes were well represented in the market's decline, the broader, more developing markets, such as the tech sector, did much better. The Nasdaq Composite Index, for example, gained 221.01 points for the week ending October 12. The market's fall was an indication of the growing concern that a recession could be on the horizon. The consensus: The economy is considered to be in a recession when the rate of economic growth falls below commonly accepted levels. The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed at 8,793.53, its lowest level since March 1996.

E-Commerce Hit

Wall Street firms have been cutting back on their e-commerce initiatives.

The e-commerce boom that swept the wall Street industry in recent years has been hit by a series of setbacks.

The most recent blow came when the Wall Street Journal reported that several top Wall Street firms had decided to cut back on their e-commerce initiatives. The report said that the firms were responding to a shift in investor sentiment away from e-commerce.

The New Racism

Once again, America has proved race matters. Precipice reigns supreme over the American consciousness. Many Americans have formed a new scapegoat. America isn’t certain who hijacked the planes that crashed into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon on Sept. 11. The alleged culprits are primarily Arab and Muslim. So what does that say of others with the same race and religion? Do they all hold the same sentiments as those who hijacked the planes? I am the whole religious and ethnic group to be looked upon as suspects?

No. But they are. Arab Americans are now experiencing the same racism blacks in this country have been dealing with and continue to do so. Since news broke of the attacks there have been reports of brutality against Arab Americans. A group of Arab Americans were forced to leave an airplane because other passengers were afraid to travel with them. That is the new racism.

What is funny is that mainstream America (white people) did not initially suspect taken on a white man as the person who bombed a federal building in Oklahoma and they did not persecute white men after it happened. They did not harass or attack middle age white men after they discovered the identity of the Unabomber. When Arabs crash a plane into the World Trade Center, all Arabs are harassed and suspected of terrorism. People need to stop.

Black Americans should be most understanding of what Arab Americans are experiencing right now. They can relate to the states and unwarranted hate toward them from mainstream Americans.

What if the people who flew into the World Trade Center were black? The bottom line is that race matters. This country. The fact is that there has been an increase in violence besides blacks. It needs to stop.

The Jordan Effect

During times, sports has always been a source of entertainment that has been a welcome distraction for those who need one on the home front. With the impending war upon us, this time is no different. The return of Michael Jordan to the game of basketball could not have come at a better time.

Jordan is not the only one to return to the country’s woes. But his return will help the country, as well as the District in some areas. The hotel and restaurant industries have suffered since Sept. 11. As well as different businesses. Now, they have begun preparations for the influx of people that can’t wait to come onto the Wooden.

Michael Jordan’s return has not served to help the country in its state of crisis, but it can be a catalyst to help the country return to normal.

Dance is a "Real" major

Metanoya Webb

When some people hear "majors," they often say, "Oh, it's a difficult major. They have to take a lot of classes," or "They work a lot," or "They only have so much free time." However, when one becomes a dance major, they are not only being "majors," they are being "dancers," as defined by the Oxford American Dictionary. Reading and analyzing books is something that dancers do on their own free time. When one considers a "real major" to be anything that entitles one to call themselves a "major," dance most certainly does not fall under the category of dance they consider a "real major." To execute choreographed movements, one must have a deep understanding of how these movements are put together. One must have the ability to grasp a better understanding of the techniques used in dance. They also need to possess a great deal of self-discipline over the course of the sessions, which involves setting and reaching goals for these performances. Dancers have to attend dance classes Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday nights. It is the responsibility of these dancers to make time to study, eat, sleep, and if it permits one of the most important physical and mental exercises, "relax." However, one must not forget that one's personal life and the character as well, is not just fixed on one plate. That is love. That is wisdom. I moved in to Howard on my birthday in August. I finally had a chance to be honest about myself. On my eighteenth birthday I acquired a living space because I wanted to be "HU." But my parents weren't having that. I wanted to go to every "prestigious" school, such as VCU or Georgetown, but that is where I wanted to be. I'm sure my parents both told me, "if you don't like it, just get out of there." That is when I knew it was a vision and not a dream. I knew 1 would be coming here but once I pulled up to Howard in a 98 Maxima in June 1999 looking up at Howard, I cried. My parents both told me that I was blessed to be there. "Why are you here?" They asked me, and I thought that was the first question I should ask myself. "What did I get so blessed to be there for?" I asked myself. "Why am I here?" I thought that my parents were right. Now I am asking myself another question: "How did I get so blessed? To be a dancer? To come to a place that is truly me?"

The decision to pick on Howard was a very important decision for a mother and even more important, the decision to pursue a dance major. One does not choose to become a dance major because one was born in it, becomes interested in it, and decides to pursue it. One is born into a life that is very different from what one actually is. One is born into a life that one feels is very much a part of one, and that is dance. My parents now sing the praises of Howard! They see the vision and take their blessings for my life and me and Destiny always. I still may not know what I want to do, because I don't know. That is the beauty of future. That is the beauty of a major. That is the beauty of me. That is the beauty of me, my parents, and the vision that I have.

"I am basking in the sun and I am thinking of you, of course." My parents both told me that I was blessed to be there. "Why?" They asked me. "Why me?" I thought that was the first question I should ask myself. "What did I get so blessed to be there for?" I asked myself. "Why am I here?" I thought that my parents were right. Now I am asking myself another question: "How did I get so blessed? To be a dancer? To come to a place that is truly me?"

When Michael Jordan announced his second NBA comeback Tuesday, one question popped into the minds of students: "How can I get Wizards Tickets?" If tickets were to go on sale tomorrow, I would be at Gallery Place First thing, Jordan is a legend, it's like seeing Mohammed Ali box again," senior Fareeda Shabazz, said.

Jordan added a new wrinkle to his legacy by announcing he is ending his three-year retirement to return to the game of basketball.

"I think Michael Jordan is a great basketball player and it's good that he's returning to play for the Wizards. They should go pretty far this year," senior Mignon Schley said.

Jordan made the announcement with his classic signature, a faxed statement to the media that said only, "I'm back."

Jordan will be returning to the hardwood wearing the same number 23 jersey that made him a culture icon for millions of fans. This announcement ended his 3-year hiatus that saw Jordan serve as President and Part Owner of the Wizards and Capitals.

In his brief stint as president and part owner Jordan severed ties with overpriced forward Juwan Howard, aging guard Mitch Richmond, and disgruntled guard Rod Strickland. Jordan also flexed his front office muscle by drafting Kwame Brown, making Brown the first high school athlete to be drafted number one overall in the NBA. Jordan was also able to personally select longtime friend and former coach Doug Collins to fill the void at coaching.

But some students still wonder if at age 38 Jordan is going to be the same 23 that took his last shot by pushing off on Utah Jazz Guard Byron Russell for the game winning shot in the 1998 NBA Finals.

"He retired so I think he should stay retired. He's too old to come back and I think he's just trying to outdo players like Kobe Bryant and Allen Iverson who run the show now. He just can't accept the fact that there are younger players that will eventually be better than him," freshman Gary Brooks said.

The second thing that has many Wizards fans asking is, in order to play for the Wizards Jordan had to relinquish his position as President of Wizards operations. Jordan also had to sell his 10% holdings of the Wizards and Capitals to Head of Minority Ownership Ted Lascaris who was directly responsible for Jordan coming to the nations capital last season.

"I don't really follow basketball too much but I think it's a big deal when a team that Jordan used to play for that he played for the Wizards," sophomore Brandi James said.

Jordan is one of the most recognizable sports figures and has already boosted Wizard ticket and merchandise sales. When the news hit hundreds of tickets were snatched by eager fans, itching to see Jordan return to the court.

Season Tickets are going so fast it is almost impossible to calculate how many have been sold said Wizards spokesman Matt Williams. The only tickets that remain are club level and upper level seating. Sanctions arc in place to make sure 1,500 individual tickets are available for each game.

The First Wonders preseason game is against the Detroit Pistons in a game that Jordan struggled to overcome early in his career.

The First Wonders season opener is against the New York Knicks. When Jordan came back in 1995, he faced the same knicks. The end result was Jordan's legendary double nickel, 55 points.

The University Rattlers, who entered last week's game against Morgan State as one of the best passing teams in the conference, are heading into this week's meeting with the Bison for their third time on TV, and next week's Circle City Conference game. The Rattlers are leading the MEAC in passing yards last season, so far has been strong early on for FAMU. The team's third time on TV, and next week's Circle City Conference game.

Students Turn to the Burr to Shed the Pounds, Train Muscles

By Joseph S. Craft

The teacher is not completely at fault; many students in the fitness classes think these classes are just for females when they are actually not. Johnson said.

“arburnt everyone needs to workout. Let's think how to worko ut without using the equipment,” junior Jared Hammond said.

With all its shortcomings students should make sure that the Burr gym is not here to stay and that there is a better option to work out in the gym.

Greetings from the 2001 Howard University Homecoming Steering Committee, V.I.B.E: Visual Integrations of Bold Elements. On September 11, 2001 the United States was confronted with their fears, heartache and frustrations. We were confronted with evil at our backyards and, for some of us, our homes. We have cried for strangers, friends and our nation. We have attempted to put it all together, carry on and yet, it never quite seems the same. The Howard University Homecoming Steering Committee has felt those feelings, shed those tears and wrapped our arms around one another as we’ve attempted to understand why and brace ourselves for what may come. We would like to personally extend our condolences to everyone who has lost someone. You are in our prayers.

As we continue to plan for a successful Homecoming, personal security, more so than ever, has become our focus. We want this to be a successful and safe Homecoming. In addition, we felt it necessary that while we ask the University to celebrate with us, that we also ask the University and surrounding community to pause, be silent and reflect on how blessed each of us are.

In light of the tragedy we along with the Office of the President have decided to cancel the 2001 Fireworks display. However, we will pour Libation on October 7, 2001 at 9:00pm for our ancestors and those gone too soon on September 11, 2001. We appreciate your support and understanding of this necessary decision and ask that each of you join us as we stop, reflect and thank God for giving us one more peaceful and safe day on Sunday, October 7, 2001. Our prayers are with you. Have a safe and pleasant day.

Sincerely,

Ms. Melva L. Jones
2001 Homecoming Steering Committee Chairwoman
