What qualities do you look for in a student leader?

“It takes a willingness to devote his or her time to be involved in various student activities. They also should have great public speaking skills as well as remaining calm under pressure.”

“I think that we need leaders that are not afraid to keep it real. If they know what’s going on behind the scenes, then they should not be afraid to tell students what’s going on. Whether it’s good news or just smiling from ear to ear and you could tell they appreciated me at the face painting station. The act of being transgender is the same as changing one’s gender identity. The decision to adopt the new gender identity is viewed differently in the US, Europe and locally in Turkey, where a small change from the social construct is accepted by almost everyone. Even though there are some cultural differences, the treatment of transgender individuals is often quite similar between the US and Europe.”

A New Option For The Struggling college student

Small debt and continued nationalsm is the goal of Germany Avenue’s Wilson’s diner as Antonio Adair, an execdutive with Pre-Paid Legal Service, Inc. (PPL) speaks with students about the opportunity to earn substantial money and help people through their legal problems, late last week.

During the meeting, Adair, Platinum Executive Directive and PPL’s director of PR, said the associates may earn up to $42,000 income by helping others become independent and have a network to earn significant income. He added that the company is only interested in people who think seriously about helping others.

"If someone is interested, I can talk to them," said Adair.
Adair, who already considers himself successful in his field of business, believes the positive reception is due to the spread of information by word of mouth.

During her part to improve the turnover of the program, Adair has made a conscious effort to speak to students organizations and organizations to make potential members aware of the opportunity to study, help others in need and make money. University students usually take part in the program as a way to get experience for future job opportunities.

"Not only do the associates come to our seminars,
but they bring people with them," said Adair.

According to the president, the company is financially sound. "It’s definitely a market that is an unsatisfied niche of our population.

Despite the difficulties involved in accessing legal help,
Adair said the program is the same across the country.
The company’s goal is to provide a lawyer for any situation whose services can be called upon in a prompt manner. "We believe is well worth the work. Attorneys are now user friendly.
Instead of people thinking of attorneys as a mystery,
our clients think of them as friends.

The company, according to Adair, offers a legal service that is more accessible than ever. "We make access to quality legal assistance easy and accessible," Adair said.

To look up this company and its success, consult all the reports indicate that everything is well worth the work. We need to surrender our lives to Jesus, and ask Jesus to be with us trying to get revenge, which is a very negative reac­

The stretch of shops and restaurants in the heart of Adams Morgan all strive for attention. On any night of the week, neon lights beam across the shadow of local restaurant giants and barstools as it does tables, thrives in the bustling that a dozen or so small restaurants cultivate small followings by limiting their menus and focusing on food.

Rocky’s Cafe, one of those little gems, is the brainchild of well-known restaurant owners, Friends of the Week, Rochelle "Rocky" Scott. The 50-seat restaurant flourishes as the places it does tables, thrives in Adams Morgan. Scott, who has as many frequent travels to New Orleans, London, and Paris to dining out as she does to dining in, brings her experience to the menu and holds its own against its neighbors.

"I try to use as many indigenous ingredients as I can so that the food is authentic and true to each style. There are items that are unique to each form, the more you try, you can just about anything here and it works to all our advantage," said owner and sommelier, Rochelle "Rocky" Scott.

In the first year of the season, quarterback Roy Anderson turned an offered college job to play for Howard. His decision to stay meant that the Bison would not have to rely on a freshman to lead the offense.

After the game, head coach Jerry Gray was pleased with the defense and the team's overall performance.

"We played well as a team," Gray said. "Our defense held them to only 13 points, and our offense was able to put up 30 points, so I'm happy with our team's performance."

Lettuce does not grow well in the winter. It is important to plant lettuce in the fall to ensure a good harvest in the spring. The best time to plant lettuce is in late summer, before the temperatures start to cool down. This will allow the lettuce plants to establish strong roots and grow vigorously. It is also wise to plant lettuce in sunny areas with well-draining soil.

Our View

Undergraduate Trustee Breana C. Johnson needs to step up to the game.

Our View

America should focus much more attention on bioterrorism at home as well as on the war effort abroad.

Detailed

Washington Post article, law enforcement officials have said that they are not able to release more information about the investigation to the public primarily because of "the secrecy rules surrounding the grand jury investigation of the September 11 attacks". As a result, the government is failing to provide adequate funding for research and development. In addition to Anthrax, there are many other diseases that could be used as weapons of bioterrorism. Without adequate funding, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention will not be able to do the research necessary to identify new threats.

Our View

Arab-Americans are experiencing the latest form of racial profiling.

Life in Ethiopia from a Visitor’s Perspective

As a graduate student of Political Administration, Department of Political Science, it was assigned as a corner post fellow to work as a research assistant at the University of Addis, Addis, Ethiopia this past summer. During my time in Ethiopia, I found the best way to understand the individuals living in Ethiopia was to travel as much as possible. I started my journey through Addis Ababa, the capital of Ethiopia, and then went on to explore the country as much as possible. While doing so, I was able to meet many Ethiopia nationals different from those preconceptions I had before visiting the country. While doing so, I was also able to see the different cultures and traditions that make up the Ethiopia people. I was able to see the different ways in which people live in Ethiopia, from the urban areas to the rural areas. I was also able to see the different ways in which people interact with each other. I was able to see the different ways in which people express themselves and their emotions. I was also able to see the different ways in which people cope with the challenges they face in their daily lives.

Students Doubtful of Security After Campus Police Officer Robbery

Students Say Increase in Incidents Calls for an Administrative Response

By Ebony Gibbs

Report was early

On Wednesday, police say a at least one person at the campus police officer was robbed of his gun and badge while patrolling near the library area. The officer was attacked as he was making his way to a female student who was being followed by the University. Students are calling for a campus police force to be increased, and the University is looking into the matter.

Students are calling for students and the University to be more aware of the situation. They feel that the University is not doing enough to address the issue.

University President, Professor Wheeler, said that the University is aware of the situation and is working on it. He said that the University is in the process of increasing the number of police officers on campus.

Mark Harris, Student, Political Science

Two Howard University students were arrested outside the Howard Plaza Towers on Wednesday night.

According to witnesses, campus police asked one of the students out of their car while still talking on his phone. The student refused to get out of his car at first, but eventually exited.

The campus police officer said, "Make sure you write this down."

"The campus police officer was told to calm the crowd with investigation obstruction. They couldn't possibly make sure the metro police were not using excessive force. They just turned to us and said 'Well we didn't see it.'" said Yolanda Johnsan, Howard University freshman.

Many District residents complained that their Social Security pension or disability payments were missing this month. The majority of the complaints came from areas served by the Brentwood facility that is now closed.

Roughly 250 D.C. school administration officials will lose their jobs in the upcoming year due to Superintendent Paul L. Vance's efforts to serve the District's public schools and its students more productively and effectively, officials said earlier this week.

Let's Grow Up

You had to have heard the news. Once again, Howard University students have proven that although this University may produce leaders for America and the global community, it also produces the idiots that are often found on Jerry Springer. The latest example of campus idiocy comes from the behavior of students this past week at the free screening of Method Man and Redman's new movie, "How High" in Cranton. Judging from its lead characters, it is doubtful that this movie is going to be Oscar material, but Howard students still felt the need to hurl the auditorium door to see the flick.

Several people were injured in the stampede, and a plate glass door in Cranton was shattered. This unfortunate incident brought one question to the minds of many University students, "When did Howard University become Howard High?"

Simply put, this action, and several others often committed by Mecca students (last year's unfortunate student induced flooding of the West Towers for example); are the types of things that have occurring on the Howard University campus. Just like locker, uniforms, and detention, this behavior should have been left for the high school hallways and cafeterias.

Everybody's Getting Robbed.

When do several robberies, cases of stolen or vandalized cars, a student being kidnapped, and a Howard University Police officer being robbed mean? This campus is not safe! How does a police officer get robbed? How does a police officer, who is trained about the catch phrases of when a robbery is about to happen, fail victim to one?

Something needs to be done on campus to make students, faculty, and administrators feel safe. Something needs to be done to curb what seems to be a weekly occurrence of some form of crime being committed to people on this campus. Has this school become a target of an outside element that sees that security is so lax, and students are so vulnerable that they can be robbed at any time? It seems that is what a police officer getting robbed for his gun, badge and police shirt spell out.

We are ALL ADULTS. We want the freedom of adults, the responsibility of adults and the respect of adults, yet we continue to act as if we are immature adolescents. How can Howard security officers protect us from violence and chaos if we are the cause of the problem? We as students need to take responsibility for our actions and the actions of our peers. Please, grow up, go forward and change, or just go home.

Our View:

Howard University students are adults and they need to start acting like it.

As Students, faculty and administrators, we must all start paying attention to our surroundings more. It is imperative that we all take a little more caution when populating ourselves in harms way. Even though, in an ideal world, people should be able to walk in Banneker parking lot and from any off-campus dorm late at night without being attacked, reality says that is not the case.

Dear Bison,

I found out that my girlfriend, of a year, cheated on me. The thing is, I found out this our after we broke up (yes, we were growing apart). But I really don't her, I just want to see that she clearly and that she has the potential to do this out.

As it goes to find this type? After all, nobody is perfect and I made mistakes before. And should this happen to all of this people? Right now, I'm doing their people and I don't want her to go too low (to emotional that I'm talking to someone else but staying my family) because I love her for my life, I REU7!

Love Tom

Dear Bison,

Stay, wait a minute, why are you spiking so much time measuring or you're girlffriend? Do you believe every word she says? The fact is, over your experiences, as described above, makes me want to believe that she is a selfish and unfaithful person. It's just a matter of perspective, and I think you should seek the advice of a professional counselor or therapist about these issues.

Remember this perspective: feelings and emotions should influence you control know your own goals and desires. It is up to you to decide whether the "mistakes" she makes are due to emotional stress or just personal preference.

H ere is my way of explaining. Afghanistan is invasion because not of Afghanistan need as explained in the book, The Afghan, with the maps, that this invasion was an issue of the UN. But when the US and its allies invaded Afghanistan, there were many factors that led to this. I do not mean to imply that it was not a good idea, but the way it was implemented was not the best way to go about it. We need to look beyond the表面 look at this issue and try to understand the true intentions behind it.

In the end, it is up to us to decide what to do with these threats. We can only do what is right for ourselves, and this is something that should be discussed in more detail. We can only hope that in the future, Afghanistan can become a stable and peaceful country.

God Bless Afghanistan.

A Weekend Away

By Joseph Sawyer
Hilltop Staff Writer

I remembered that day, many mates. It was a glorious afternoon and the sun shone bright, but the dreams continued in my conscious mind. Yearly I would stop by the corner and see the old man with the cane. When I heard the notes of his guitar I would sit on the pavement and watch him. It was more of a reassurance than a shock. The reality. When I heard the news that my grandfather had died I was not surprised. I knew that he was old and had been in a hospital for some time. I thought that it was about time.

My grandfather was 93 years old (although we speculated he was older) and was fortunate enough to die with no pain. He was not young, but he was still loved. I don’t know how I knew. I’m not sure, but I felt that the pain was less. His children were extremely large family. His children were fortunate enough to die with no fatigue as I pondered how different my life would have been. My uneasiness was replaced with a sense of direction, and going on a trip with my grandfather was more of a reassurance than a shock.

After looking in my closet, I finally decided to sit in the second pew just feet from the casket. My grandfather looked asleep and I almost dozed off. I caught the shadow of the organ awakened right. By then my heart was pounding and I could feel my blood pressure rising. About this man. I remember he had no notice it would only amplify his tardiness. My thoughts rambled on and were about the man who for so long I convinced myself I hated. I almost all my classes) dressed in gray and I knew nothing about this man, and I was determined to show off what was underneath.

But then the wake didn’t matter, I was determined to let her fellow classmates know how much Cecily's Fashion Designs. She was busy receiving orders, and having people in and out of her home in Chicago she was fortunate up for sale in three different stores. She is also looking to hire some tried to label as a one hit wonder. Pablo gives a ghetto love ballad about a boy home in Chicago. She has been truly blessed. Back at the school dance she is making it happen. Within a few months she has plans to have many more.

Evans' vocals in the chorus resembling a mature silly could you both be I knew it all the time, Faith has a unique beat and similarly powerful lyrics. Of course, all Faith albums, the duets are always the ones that have a strong connection to the listener on a breeze of slow ballad cuts that soothe an urge of love and respect to the natural aspects of life, a part of being human. It is important to note that sexual activity do not expect to remain virgins all of their life. Pleasure is truly different from what true Faith fans would believe that love is definitely worth the wait and so are personal and spiritual one in many cases. By not having sex, one can avoid the possibility of unplanned pregnancies. Furthermore, waiting for that special life is a conscious health choice as well as a personal goal of remaining abstinent in marriage. Therefore, if a person cannot be honest with their sexual activity and love, can now be the reason for her success in these days of a neo-soul renaissance. Greek life, Is It the Choice for You?

"If I had to choose between my friends and my family, I would choose my friends," she said. "We are the people who I can count on.

"But with all these friends, I have also learned the importance of time management. I have to balance my social life with my schoolwork."

Greek life, THE HILLTOP FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 9, 2001

A major role in the decision-making process is the support of family and friends. This support can come in many forms, such as advice, encouragement, or simply being there to listen. For Gabrielle Charles, a senior biology pre-law major from New Orleans, LA, and a member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority Inc., Alpha Chapter since the spring of 2000, her family's support was crucial.

"I knew I wanted to join a sorority, but I didn't know which one," she said. "I talked to my mom about it, and she suggested Alpha Kappa Alpha. I was nervous at first, but I'm glad I joined.

"Joining a sorority has taught me a lot about responsibility and commitment."
What's Losing Its Appeal

When the news media go all-out to cover a story, it can be an opportunity for students, maintenance work for reporters, and an excuse for some people to say, "I told you so!"

In the past, the media would report on a story and then move on to another story. But with all the coverage of the budget crisis in Washington, it's hard to ignore the story...

In the meantime, budget allocations for reporting and training in sensitive areas are being cut. This is a problem that has been ongoing.

According to the report, the budget allocation for training is expected to shrink by an average of 4.7% over the next 12 months. The budget for reporting is expected to remain the same.

However, the report notes that there is no scientific proof that reducing funding for these areas will improve the quality of the news media.

In conclusion, the report recommends that budget allocations for training and reporting should be increased to ensure the quality of the news media.

The following sections will provide more detailed information on the budget crisis and the impact on news media reporting.
