The Davidson Family Collection
Collection 207-1

Prepared by:
Zora M. Felton
June 2002

Scope Note

The Davidson Family Collection provides important documentation of the literary, religious, inventiveness, educational, and civil rights struggles of African Americans in Washington, D.C. from about 1895 to the 1950s. The collection was donated by Edmonia Davidson in 1973, and measures .5 linear foot.

Included are materials related to husband and wife, Edmonia and Shelby Davidson, and their son, Eugene. Additionally, and of special importance are the detailed minutes of the Bethel Literary and Historical Association recorded by Shelby Davidson from 1905 to 1906. This organization was established in 1895, and regularly featured speakers on issues concerning African Americans. The speakers were mainly African Americans prominent in their fields, including Nannie Helen Burroughs, Garnet Wilkinson, Archibald H. Grimke, Kelly Miller, Governor P.B.S. Pinchback, and many others. In most cases, the minutes reflect in some detail the content of the speeches and the ensuing discussions that followed.

Shelby James Davidson (1868-1930), lawyer, activist, inventor, and realtor, was president of the Howard University General Alumni Association, and executive director of the D.C. Branch of the NAACP. He also served as president of the Bethel Literary and Historical Association. Included in this collection is his 1908 patent for a paper rewind mechanism for adding machines.

The writings of Eugene Davidson (1896-1976), civil rights activist and realtor (he preferred the latter description of himself as opposed to Realtor®), include his testimony before the United States Commission on Civil Rights regarding housing in the District of Columbia.

He describes the annoyances (a cross burning on his lawn, repeated attempted deliveries of products he had not ordered, etc.) he and his wife endured while he served as president of the D.C. Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). In 1939, he served as administrator of the New Negro Alliance. Davidson, too, was president of the Washington Real Estate Brokers Association, and the General Alumni Association of Howard University. With Howard University professor Kelly Miller and others, he fiercely fought the presidency of Mordecai W. Johnson. Davidson served as editor of the special Howard University alumni association issue, "The Case Against President Mordecai W. Johnson," published in 1937.
