Scope Note

The Eugene Davidson collection was donated to Howard University by Dr. Edmonia Davidson, wife of Eugene Davidson. The collection is approximately 1/2 linear feet in size and spans the years 1912 to 1963. The years best documented by the collection are 1933 to 1940.

The collection contains correspondence, photographs, news-clippings, leaflets and programs, most of which pertain to civil rights organizations in Washington, D.C. There is especially strong documentation on the New Negro Alliance and its struggle to obtain jobs for "Negro" workers. Of particular interest is a series of editorials Mr. Davidson wrote for the Washington Daily American, one of three small Black newspapers for which he served as editor. (The other two newspapers were the Washington World and the Washington Tribune). The editorials, published in 1925, are located in Series A.

The collection documents Eugene Davidson and other early Washington, D.C. civil rights activists noted among these activists is George Rycraw. Like Mr. Davidson, Mr. Rycraw was an administrator of the New Negro Alliance (N.N.A.), and actively involved with other civic action groups. Materials pertaining to Mr. Rycraw can be found in Series B and C.

The photographs in this collection include Eugene Davidson as a young high school student and later as a commissioned officer during World War I. This series also includes a poster with an early photograph of William Leo Hansberry.

Researchers using this collection may also be interested in the several recorded interviews with Mr. Davidson which are part of the Oral History collection at Moorland-Spingarn Research Center.
