WHUR Braches Into Syndication
By Rosalind D. Lewis-Hilson Sullivan
When WHUR signed on the air in 1971, four radio stations already existed in the Washington, D.C., area. WHUR—which was the lowest-rated station and had the fewest listeners—recognized that if it was to survive, it would need to add another frequency to its lineup.

According to Tom Powell, Syndication Representative for WHUR, "When WHUR was launched in 1971, we were not a station in the traditional sense. We were a group of community-based broadcasters who were just trying to get our message out.

The station's programming was a mix of music, talk, and news, and it was designed to appeal to a broad audience. WHUR's founders were committed to providing a platform for underrepresented voices, and they worked to ensure that the station's content reflected that commitment.

In the years since its founding, WHUR has evolved and grown, expanding its reach and influence. Today, the station's programming includes a wide range of content, from music and talk shows to news and public affairs programs. WHUR continues to be a leader in community-based broadcasting, and it remains committed to providing a platform for underrepresented voices.

Annual Salute to Black Women

By Kennedy Alexander Henderson

When the crime level at Howard University reached its highest point, nearly two students were killed last year, David Arnett reported.

Arnett, president of the Howard Student Senate and Monitor Service proposed to Bill H. Noonan, chairman of the Board of Trustees, that a petition calling for a more vigorous enforcement of student discipline and protection would be drawn up and presented to the Student Senate.

The purpose of the petition according to Arnett, is to have the Student Senate and Monitor Service express their views on the crime problem on Howard's campus. (3) propose periodic police and other law enforcement agency meetings with members of Howard's administration.

A student's arrest for a minor offense is a deterrent to other physical assaults, the report which will be prepared by members of the Senate, was the first to be presented to the Student Senate.

Businessmen prepare Students for the World of Insurance

By Karen Heiko Hillsby Staffwriter

What you are and what you get, then, the McCallum Brothers commented in their keynote address, are the future leaders of the insurance world. Howard University's Campus Life Committee sponsored their speech at the university's Fall Formal Ball meeting.

“Basically we are here to promote the idea that the insurance business is one of the most exciting fields in the business world,” said H. Lewis Lewis, chairman of the firm, and president of the insurance company.

“In the insurance business, you must be able to handle people,” he added. “You must have a lot of patience, and you must be able to think on your feet.”

Lewis also stressed the importance of education and preparation for a career in insurance.

“Insurance is a career that requires a lot of hard work and dedication,” he said. “But it is also a career that offers a lot of opportunities for advancement.”

The McCallum Brothers are well-known in the insurance industry, and their firm has a long history of success.

Pre-Law Society Keeps Students Informed and Aware

By Rachel A. Davis Staffwriter

The Pre-Law Society was founded in the fall of 1961, and is a student organization that provides information about the legal profession.

The society’s primary goal is to keep students informed about the legal profession, and to provide them with the resources they need to make informed decisions about pursuing a legal career.

The society is open to all students, regardless of major or year, and meets regularly to discuss various issues related to the legal profession.

The society also hosts guest speakers, such as practicing attorneys and law professors, to provide students with a better understanding of the legal profession.

Pre-Law Society members are encouraged to attend Pre-Law Society meetings and events, and to participate in the various activities offered by the society.

Academic Model School Begins Second Season

By Valeria Valentine Hillside Staff Reporter

The academic model school was established in 1980 with the idea of providing a quality education for all students in the city. The school is designed to be an alternative to the traditional public school system and to provide a more personalized learning experience.

Beginning in January, the school will offer a variety of courses, including advanced placement and honors courses, as well as remedial and special education programs.

The school has a staff of 15 full-time teachers and 10 part-time staff members, including a principal, an assistant principal, a guidance counselor, and a social worker.

The school's curriculum includes a wide range of subjects, including English, mathematics, science, social studies, and the arts.

The school's goal is to provide a nurturing, supportive environment for all students, regardless of their academic abilities or background.

The school has a strong focus on community service and encourages students to participate in various community service projects throughout the year.

The school's administrators believe that the academic model school is an innovative approach to education and hope that it will continue to be successful in the future.

Sullivan The Orator

By Rev. Dr. Lent Howard Sullivan

Sullivan has been the voice of the Black church, funky, dynamic, and influential. He has been a tireless advocate for social justice and civil rights, and his message has resonated with millions of people around the world. His passion for equality and justice has inspired countless individuals to fight for a better future. Sullivan's eloquent words continue to uplift and empower, reminding us all of the power of unity and solidarity.

From the Grassroots

Unreconstructed Mississippi

Millions of Black women in the rural counties and small towns of Mississippi – their lives woven into the fabric of Black culture and social practices, which shaped the Civil Rights Movement – have continued to fight for their rights and for the freedom of their ancestors.

The post-Civil War period saw a resurgence of Black culture and social practices, which shaped the Civil Rights Movement – have continued to fight for their rights and for the freedom of their ancestors.

In the years following Reconstruction, Black Mississippians were able to regain some of the rights and freedoms that had been lost during slavery. But the system of Jim Crow laws and practices remained in place, and Black people continued to face discrimination and oppression.

The civil rights movement of the 1950s and 1960s was a time of great change and progress for Black people in Mississippi. Activists worked tirelessly to end segregation and discrimination, and to fight for equal rights and opportunities. The movement was led by leaders such as Martin Luther King Jr., who delivered his famous "I Have a Dream" speech in 1963.

Today, Black Mississippians continue to face challenges and obstacles. But they are not alone in their struggle, for there are many who stand with them, fighting for justice and equality. Black people in Mississippi are a force to be reckoned with, and their determination and resilience are an inspiration to all.

The Howard University Student Association continues to be an important force in the fight for civil rights and social justice. Their work is vital, and their impact is significant. We stand with them, and we support their efforts to create a more just and equitable society for all.

Haiti: Its Historical Reality Part II

British Statesman St. Kitts-Nevis Moves Toward Independence

By Lucius M. Schoen Haitian Stiffehart

The St. Kitts-Nevis government has announced that the government has entered into discussions with the government of Taiwan on the question of economic development and "political feasibility development," and has taken a major step in that direction.

This is in addition to Simmonds' high-level meeting in August with Trinidad and Tobago's Prime Minister, George Bennet. Simmonds' meeting in Port of Spain centered on a US-backed loan for the constitutional development plan.

Inside Struggles

Intra-party, the political struggle continues around the independence issue. The opposition Labor Party has been seeking to cooperate, mainly at St. Kitt's, the larger of the two islands, against the government's "white paper," which had, in fact, been announced by the government, pointing to the difficulties before the party's dissolution.

The Labor Party demands that general elections be held as soon as possible, but the government suggests that an election is not a prerequisite to independence, and that elections will be held after the period during which the election process will be completed.

Early in September a five-day conference was held at Basseterre. Haiti and St. Kitts and Nevis, and defeated voluntary action groups, met in Port of Spain and agreed on the conditions for the upcoming elections.

Some Rants Of The Problem

The worst of the conflicts, in which two parties are disputed, is still not over. A new program to be tested in the next two years is not seen. Before the 1980 elections, the Labor Party of Prime Minister Muse was on the verge of dissolving, due to the "independence crisis." The government, which had seemed to be in control of the situation, was forced to dissolve the parliament.

The Labor Party demands that general elections be held as soon as possible, but the government suggests that an election is not a prerequisite to independence, and that elections will be held after the period during which the election process will be completed.

In a 45-minute television and radio broadcast that launched its independence demands in April, Richard Boulanger, the president of the Haitian Lynx movement, said: "We must defend our rights and interests. The people must want to see change."

The popular uprising, initiated eight months ago, is seen as significant in the fight for the political security in Haiti and as a mechanism to place the old and discredited judicial civilians. Furthermore, well-to-do had some initial impacts. It was that even in Haiti, the rule of law, the rule of classes, and the rule of the few are being questioned. The popular uprising, initiated eight months ago, is seen as significant in the fight for the political security in Haiti and as a mechanism to place the old and discredited judicial civilians. Furthermore, well-to-do had some initial impacts. It was that even in Haiti, the rule of law, the rule of classes, and the rule of the few are being questioned.

The US government has announced that the agreement with Haiti for its military operations in the Western Hemisphere will be made. The agreement, effective as of October 25, will be signed by "half of St. Kitt's normal annual Budget." The agreement also provides for a US presence in Haiti and a commitment to help Haiti with its economic security.

African & Caribbean Affairs in Brief

FOREIGN LOANS: Unable to repay the enormous debts they owe foreign banks, many African countries, including Nigeria, Zaire, Tanzania, Uganda, Malawi, and Senegal, are in a situation even more desperate than five years ago. With $30 billion in foreign loans, Nigeria, which is considered the richest black nation, is also among the big borrowers.

According to the World Bank, "the prospects for sub-Saharan African countries remain poor, and many are in a situation even more desperate than five years ago."

While some countries have applied for a modification of payments on their debts, international bankers reportedly have begun to tighten their lending policies.

African News reported that Zambia President Kenneth Kaunda recently embarked upon a six-nation tour "to drum up support for a summit before the end of the year."

The controversy surrounding the admission of the Sudanese Arab Democratic Republic (SADR) as the 31st member of the OAU is chief as the primary cause for the lack of a quorum at the 1982 session.

The U.S. and other Western nations also are believed to have engineered the boycott of some of the 34 African states which did not attend the annual session with what Kaunda referred to as "exploitation international." A representative of the African News reported that the Gambia-based Commonwealth (CASCOM) headquarters has indicated that they would not attend the annual session until the immediate and tangible results support this position.

DOMINICAN BORDER PATROL: The Dominican Republic said it would increase patrols along its border and coast with Haiti following the arrest of 55 Haitian rebels believed by the Dominican Republic police to have been planning an invasion of Haiti to topple the Duvalier regime.

President Maria Ileana de Chavez said the Dominican Republic would not allow its territory to be "a beachhead ground for an invasion of any country. There are 300,000 military and police on the border." The alleged invasion attempt early in October is the latest in a series of growing political moves against the Duvalier dictatorship.

Scholarship Contest for International Students

Foreign students studying in the U.S. can win a prize of $5000 in an International Scholarship Contest. It was announced recently by the contest sponsor, the American University, which will receive the winning essays on November 1, 1982, to submit a 500-word essay on the topic: "From your personal experience, how could the international educational experience help make more effective the U.S. role in: (1) Counteracting the Ford Peace Prize of $100,000 for academic or professional achievement will be awarded to an (2) Doctoral, (3) Master's, or (4) Writing entries will be judged by a panel of distinguished professionals from the field of higher education. Additional prizes include the Ford Peace Prize of $100,000 for academic or professional achievement, and the Third Prize of $50,000 for each. As a bonus, $500 will be awarded to the International Student Office of the (5) writing competition. In developing the scholarship contest, U.S. Senator Edward M. Kennedy said: "International students are not just international students, they are future leaders of their countries and our own. We believe that this is important to the quality of life of the future generation of our nation and the quality of life of the world's leading educators who are concerned with the future education of international students." Student Affairs (NAFSA), who are members of the American Association for International Student Affairs (AAISSA), are involved in the contest over the summer and invited to encourage their students' participation.

In 1980, however, NFP scored again upon a coalition with PAD, "composed of the radical Nevis and the moderate St. Kitts."

It is at this very juncture that the opposition government of St. Kitts out to Nevis—by providing broad representation for the first time in the independent constitution—has made a contribution towards creating an atmosphere that encourages a political party to form itself.

The alleged invasion attempt early in October is the latest in a series of growing political moves against the Duvalier dictatorship.

How to be interviewed

Helpful hints for graduating seniors

1. Learn about your company's background. Check into your placement center and the placement office. Do they have a good reputation for product service innovation?

2. Ask about the interview. Will you be using a checklist? What is any cooperative work or internship? Do you work for the individual manager's appeasement? Are your grades important to you?

3. Ask questions. You're being interviewed. Tell the interviewers what you're all about. Can they improve your grades? Are you interested in specialization?

4. Politically correct interviews. Be prepared. You know what they are. Have you been able to talk about your political and economic issues?

5. Be prepared. Your company will be ready. You have to be. And in the end, you can make decisions. Starting over isn't easy for us all.
Prince Produces Nasty Girls

By Susanides Rides Hilltop Staff Writer

It is not often that you can say a great group of people have come to your city, and actually met the lead singer of one of the greatest groups of his time. Last night, Prince played his first show at the Poor Man’s Ball, where his fans, and some new ones, were treated to an unforgettable night.

Brickell, the only girl in the group, said, “I was so excited, I could not wait to see Prince live again.”

The concert was held at the Poor Man’s Ball, a historic venue in downtown Miami. The night was filled with laughter, and food and drink, as people came together to enjoy the music of one of the greatest artists of all time.

Sade is the lead singer of the band, and she said, “It was amazing to see Prince play live.”

After the show, the band signed autographs for fans, and took pictures with everyone who wanted them.

Prince is a true musical legend, and his fans were in awe of his performance. The band played some of their greatest hits, and even a few songs that fans had never heard before.

The night was filled with emotion, and everyone left feeling grateful to have been a part of something special.

Sade is the lead singer of the band, and she said, “Prince is a true musical genius, and he never fails to amaze me.”

The concert was filled with energy, and the crowd was on their feet for almost the entire show. Prince and his band were in top form, and everyone was treated to a night they will never forget.

Catherine, the bassist of the band, said, “Prince is a true musical genius, and he never fails to amaze me.”

Bison to Make Offensive Changes After 50-0 Thrashing

By Dr. Orlando Lumbert

The Bison (3-1-2) will face an Old Dominion (2-1-1) team on Saturday, October 8, in the Norfolk Military Academy at 1:00 p.m. The team was coming off a 50-0 victory over Howard University last week.

Despite the big margin of victory, the Bison's offensive line was not impressed.

"The Bison had a lot of opportunities," said Bison head coach, "but they didn't capitalize on them. We need to make more of our opportunities."
Profile

“Bodacious” is Back with the Bison

By Marie M. Finner

In a manner that was majorly a good one, this is the case of Steve Albrooks, after many years known as “Boo” to his teachers, coaches, friends, and peers. After being out a full season, Albrooks returned to the starting offensive tackle in the 1982 season.

The football season actually begins in August with two-a-day practices and then over to the Fall semester.

During the fall, many of the players prepare for spring training. This period begins in September and ends in November. The whole process begins all over again in March, when the teams prepare for spring training.

Albrooks, a 6’6”, 290-pound junior from Columbus, Ohio, always checked using academic preparation, and determination. Because academic eligibility last year, he was forced to sit out the entire season. Many athletes in various sports who have been on academic probation return to the playing field and are able to return to the starting lineup. This was not the case for Albrooks.

Instead of sitting out a year, Albrooks stuck it out, attending all team meetings, practices, and games, as well as voluntarily limiting his activities to his basketball team.

This transition from sitting out eligible to return to the game was an honor. I knew I’d have to go back and explain to the team that I was going to sit it out, but I also bit myself down,” he commented.

Academic preparation is something that all students try to excel in, and it’s something that is a requirement to acquire eligibility. I had to come to my own decision.

When the season started, Albrooks was on the sidelines and ready to play because he knew he had to prove himself, and to the coaches, that he could get the job done. He had previously done this in the offensive tackle position. The next step was to prove his worth, and do it and do it well. He succeeded, and at the first few games at offensive tackle, he was ready to play like a true veteran. This was a lot of fun, and it kept me off the fact that I wasn’t playing,” said Albrooks.

When asked what he did with all this time, Albrooks jokingly said, “There was always time to laminate, construction stuff! But, I was involved in other activities. After being out a full season, I had to prove myself, and I did it!”

Offensive line coach Ken Tollett stated that “Steve is a self-motivated player. And for his size and weight, he has a tremendous amount of quickness. Tollett, who likes Albrooks and the team’s offensive line,ancias that Albrooks “is a player that’s back at the first time all MEAC.”

When asked about his goals for the season and the future, and Albrooks, “My personal goal is to win the MEAC championship, and if the team wins MEAC coming along, I would accept it.”

As for the National Football League, “I’m not going to come on the scene and say I’m going to be the first one. I think I would have to improve a lot more to even make the NFL.”

In many cases of academic preparation, the athlete never returns. And the few who do usually run into trouble with their positions filled. Integrity, self-reliance, and responsibility are all attributes to be fostered through participation in sports.

Albrooks, a junior, is 290 pounds and 6’6”. He’s a leader and a great addition. With a “Bodacious” attitude, he’s a true veteran. This was a lot of fun, and it kept me off the fact that I wasn’t playing,” said Albrooks.

As a blocker, Albrooks was out of the picture for much of his time on the field. He was able to improve a lot more to even make the NFL.

A good relationship with the players is another thing that Albrooks has to excel in. He has been a positive influence on the players and was always there when they needed him.

Albrooks, who started on the offensive line, was always there when the players asked for his help. He knew the depth chart, and was ready to go whenever he was asked.

He had to be patient, and he wasn’t always looking for a reason. I wasn’t going to change my mind, and I did it! He succeeded.

The rest of the 1982 season, and on the first day of practice, he was brought around like a freshman at his first college practice. Becoming disappointed and frustrated, he was later chosen to start the offensive tackle position on the starting lineup.

The rest is history.
