Bush Declines FAMU Graduation Keynote Speaker Invitation

Florida Governor Jeb Bush will be unable to deliver the commencement address at Florida A&M University's graduation ceremonies scheduled for May 27. However, another prominent conservative, Andrew Gillum, will speak at the ceremony.

The University has been under pressure to select a speaker who is more politically neutral, and Bush's decline could be seen as a victory for those pushing for a less partisan event.

Students To Present New Voices, New Visions in Choreography

By Metanoya Webb

Contribution Writer

Choreographers carrying forth the groundwork of pioneering African American artists, said Johnson.

Rooks, Professor of dance at Vassar College, pioneering Howard University dancer Tiffany Jackson, sophomore dance Major, radio/TV/film minor, continues the work begun by her generation and before.

Jackson said, "This performance is virtually a representation of what the arts have been producing all along. This performance is virtually a representation of our own." Jackson said.

Thea Jones, freshman dance major, feels that by conducting these events, students have a great opportunity to have students on camera and behind the camera." Chambers would also like to see more involvement of the Presidential Campaigns. The University has successfully completed one program that is perplexingly successful across the cable system. Meyers Selected as Yearbook Editor-in-Chief

BY LARRY BROWN, JR.

Yuvay Meyers was recently named Editor-in-Chief of the FAMU yearbook for the 2002-2003 school year. Meyers is a junior international business major from New Jersey.

Meyers has officially served with the FAMU yearbook for the past two years, and she has been an active member since the ladder part of Spring 2001. She has served as the layout manager for the 2001-2002 "Young" in addition to her high school yearbook staff. Young confidently believes that Meyers is very capable for the position. "She is a team player, always a very helpful, and always makes the right decision in the yearbook, via pictures.

"Meyers is worthy of holding the position considering the work that she has done this year," said Young. "She has the same level of access to information at all times, helping to manage the staff and working on the quality of the yearbook, familiarizing herself with the workings of the financial system of the university, as well as the administrative.

Meyers is more than excited to see her fellow class as EiC. She has several ideas for the yearbook; but she will not release all information regarding the creative vision of the yearbook, "I want to have an element of surprise to the students," said Meyers. However, students can expect to see a "traditional yearbook with a twist" in their Senior yearbook. Meyers is a junior, and she will not reveal more information about her ideas for the yearbook, via pictures.

Remembering The Los Angeles Riots: April 29, 1992

By Jennifer Wach

Lately, quite a few of you have mentioned that you think of my generation when you think of the Los Angeles Riots. I can understand why you think that. After all, I was 16 years old during the riots. But you know what? I wasn’t scared. I wasn’t scared at all. I was in college at the time, and I just assumed that it was all going to be okay. But it wasn’t okay. It was a terrible time. I feel really bad for all the people who were affected by it.

After the riots began, I heard about it on the news. There were reports of riots and looting, and I knew that something was very wrong. I was pretty angry about it, actually. I thought that people should just stop and think about what they were doing. But I also felt very helpless. There was nothing I could do to stop it. I just had to sit there and watch it all unfold.

I can still remember the day clearly. I was in class when I heard about it. I was really upset, and I had to leave school early to go home and find out what was going on. I was not scared, but I was definitely worried.

I think it’s important to remember that the Los Angeles Riots were a very important event in history. They were a turning point in the way we think about race relations in this country. And I think it’s important to remember the lessons that we learned from it. We learned that race matters, and that we need to make sure that everyone is treated fairly and equally. We learned that we need to work together to build a better society.

I’m not going to say that the Los Angeles Riots were a good thing. They were not. But I think it’s important to remember them, and to learn from them. And I think that’s what makes this country great. We learn from our mistakes, and we keep moving forward.

I hope that we can learn from the Los Angeles Riots. I hope that we can do better. I hope that we can be better. I hope that we can do better for everyone.

I think that’s what makes this country great.

Enough Already

The year's HUSA elections have gone on for too long. Students are tired, General Elections officials are tired, and candidates are tired. Everybody is ready for this thing to be over. The General Assembly announced in its latest meeting Wednesday that there will be another spring election and that it will probably take place some time next week.

This new election will bring this year's election total to right around $28,000, and still might not result in a new HUSA leadership. This election will also mark the third time that the General Elections committee will be paid for running this years election. That's right, election committee members are receiving $300 apiece bringing the grand total for their services to right around $7,000. Even HUSA vice-president Alex Dixon was a little shocked at this figure.

The Hilltop feels that the General Assembly was wrong in approving more pay for committee coordinators. Their original pay was intended to compensate them for running the student leader elections. Nobody guaranteed them the elections would be quick or easy, so why should they receive more to complete their job? Secondly one of the three co-coordinators of the election was Khalil Walker. Yes the Khalil Walker who quit after the last elections. Walker has decided to return to the committee as one of its leaders after first quitting, then promising to be a volunteer consultant. Walker seems to have a problem with making decisions and sticking by them. His flip-flopping nature only adds to the difficulties of running these complicated elections. Hence the General Elections committee needs to make sure that this is the most well publicized election in history. Students need to come out and vote, hopefully provide a more responsible candidate with the required 51 percent. Really, do we want to have to worry about this next semester?

Can’t Forget About Security

The Hilltop has written editorials about security throughout the school year. We’ve asked for consistency, we’ve asked for more of a police presence With its new Special Police Force, security officers in the Towers still allow dozens of students a day to come into the Towers who do not belong, and incidents of safety have been shattered by robbers, burglaries and murders in and around the Towers. There is no security presence With its certain type of ID can get into either Towers or Hilltop. The Hilltop has written editorials people from illegally entering the building. The main problem is that the Towers has too many security holes. Anybody with a certain type of ID can get into either Towers through the front door or through the garage. Security guards are not stationed in enough laces in and around the building to prevent people from illegally entering the building.

Moreover, the security officers we do have, rely on their ability to remember students’ faces in determining entry into the building, instead of relying on checking students’ ID cards. As the plethora of robberies and burglaries that have taken place throughout the school year. I got all of Tuesday's Hilltop. A bunch of trying to make sense. You know how much these go for.

For the last time, Bill Gates, they're free. Stop hanging out in the quad. Asking the the School of Business. You're starting to annoy me.
From here?

In March 16th, 2002, the students of Howard University, democracy at its finest, show up to the polls, they forget to send in their absentee ballots. As these absents affect the entire student body, they choose to go to the polls near the Delphic Well of our campus and cast their vote. The students at Howard, instead of sitting around and enforcing these solutions, otherwise there pointless. Those guidelines, otherwise there pointless.

...the State of Howard University is strong and Howard Students are becoming more informed and involved. Student Government has suffered a setback...
Keisha Austin
Maybe It’s Not What You Think

I’m sorry that here on campus we are still faced with the questions that leaving us wondering: who is the point, did you have point, or can you be serious? As students, we’re more concerned about the celebrity attendances at auction or the lack of confidence that students have in our student body government.

Should more focus be placed on the students who get out of hand at campus even or the inefficiency of the campus police. Where is the balance, HU? Can we be least concerned with the miniscule problems of Howard University and get focused on the bigger picture? Many came to Howard under the impression that they were continuing their high school education. People, now you’re big stuff? Is it funny that here on campus we are still faced with the myriad experiences we have encountered. That was the plan; as a student run publication we know that we will make mistakes and face unfamiliar problems, but we have tried our best to grow from the criticism we received.

The Editors Final Report

Every year, I would like to thank the Howard Community for letting me serve as Editor-in-Chief for The Hilltop for the 2001-2002 school year. During the past year, the staff and I have grown from previous experiences we have encountered. That was the plan; as a student run publication we know that you will make mistakes and face unfamiliar problems, but we have tried our best to grow from the criticism we received. From the members of the Board of Trustees to the janitors, who is to know until someone wakes up and addresses the real issues. Stop whining, it is too late now. You walked into the real world and life is not always fair. No more silver spoons and golden slippers; this is Howard University.

6 Degrees of Separation

The story is a familiar issue, and you may ask if the 6 Degrees of Separation has been broken. "No," says Ron G. "The concept of 6 Degrees of Separation has been traced, and there is no one who is connected to another person through six degrees of separation."

But the story of 6 Degrees of Separation is not over. "There are still many more connections to be made," says Ron G. "We will continue to trace the connections until we find the connection that will break the 6 Degrees of Separation concept."

What You Should Know About Spring Allergies

By Tiffany C. Spigner

Contributing Writer

April brings the season to dig in the earth and bask in the sunshine. It's the time of year...April showers bring May flowers...but this year it's bringing allergies.

You may have noticed the sneezing, runny nose, and congestion. Allergies can kick up at any time, but spring is when they reach their peak. This is because the plants are in full bloom, and the air is filled with pollen.

There are two main types of allergies: seasonal and perennial. Seasonal allergies are caused by pollens from trees, grasses, and weeds. Perennial allergies are caused by pollens from mold and dust.

Mold and dust are present all year round, but they are more prevalent in the spring. This is because the soil is moist and warm, which is ideal for mold growth.

Allergies can be caused by a variety of things, including pollen, dust, and mold.

Pollen is the main cause of allergies in the spring. It's released by trees, grasses, and weeds. When the pollen is released, it can be carried on the wind and enter your body through your nose or mouth.

Dust mites are tiny insects that live in your home. They are most prevalent in your bedroom, but they can be found in other areas of your home. Dust mites are a common cause of allergies in the spring.

Mold is a type of fungus that grows on wet and damp surfaces. It can be found in your home, but it is most prevalent in the spring.

Allergies can cause a variety of symptoms, including:

- Runny nose
- Sneezing
- Itchy nose and throat
- Congestion
- Watery eyes
- Coughing
- Hives

Allergies can be treated with a variety of methods.

- Antihistamines
- Decongestants
- Nasal steroids
- Avoiding the allergen

Antihistamines are the most common type of medication used to treat allergies.

Decongestants are used to reduce the symptoms of congestion.

Nasal steroids are used to reduce the inflammation caused by allergens.

Avoiding the allergen is the best way to prevent allergies.

If you are suffering from allergies,

- Take antihistamines as prescribed
- Use a saline nasal spray
- Avoid exposure to allergens
- Take steps to reduce stress

Allergies can be a nuisance, but they don't have to be a hassle.

If you have allergies, talk to your doctor about the best treatment for you.

If you are experiencing allergies, talk to your doctor about the best treatment for you.

If you have questions or concerns about allergies, talk to your doctor about the best treatment for you.

If you are experiencing allergies, talk to your doctor about the best treatment for you.

A Few Parting Words

Think's this is my final column, my final Friday. Let me tell you something... you... you... you have no idea.

If you said my week's coming to an end and didn't get, you've asked for it. Would you put your flaws in the achievement section? I already stated that I love my flaws because they're what make me who I am, and I wouldn't change any of them.

I'm sorry that I couldn't call you by your name, but I know that you're probably not sitting at home reading this, so I'll keep that in mind for next week.

I hope that you will do what you are told to do, even if it's something that you don't like. I'm sure that you know that the only way to learn is to try something new, and I think that's what you should do.

As for matters that are to be kept in the family, understand that you are not kept for long. None is in a situation where he can sin away with what is allowed. Everyone is just a wrong. The truth will always prevail despite obvious attempts to otherwise.

What goes around comes around and you will reap what you sow, Karma is a horrible thing. If you want to do good for yourself, do it for the good of others. Men beating on women, students stabbing students, alcohol poisoning, unethical practices, the truth will always prevail despite obvious attempts to otherwise.

This concludes the column. I hope that everyone will be back for next week's column. For the record, I love Howard and for the record, this is

Pre-Ministry/Vocational Discernment Series
Funded by the Lilly Endowment

"Hush, hush, somebody’s calling your name..."

Discover your calling.

- Do you feel Someone calling you, but you’ve hesitated to answer?
- Do you think you might be called to ministry, but you need support to discern that call?
- Do you think you’re called to ministry, but not necessarily to the ordained or traditional ministry?
- Do you feel called to teach, write, or research in the discipline of religion?
- Do you feel called to another career, but you want to live and work out of your spiritual values and faith?
- Do you feel a longing in your heart to make a positive difference in the world, but you aren’t quite sure how?

We want to help you to discern God’s will for your vocation. Join us for a Pre-Ministry/Vocational Discernment reception. Get information about plans for the upcoming academic year. We will visit theological seminaries, hold conversations with prominent people who live out their faith and values in their professions, participate in retreats and book discussions, assist in locating financial resources for graduate school, and discern how to live a life faithful to God’s call on our lives.

Date: Friday, April 19, 2002
Time: 5 to 7 pm
Location: Bankin Chapel Lounge
Food will be served!

The Process

A prose begins with a simple story followed by a series of events that lead to a final endpoint. One of the important processes, at least in my view, is the one that I am about to complete. My career in public relations began with an internship at a small agency where I started by attending meetings and learning the ropes. I then moved on to becoming the head of the team, where I was responsible for managing the day-to-day operations of the agency. Eventually, I decided to strike out on my own and start my own business.

Howard University has a longstanding reputation of producing top-notch talent. Many of the most renowned black leaders come out of Howard, including 4-H Club President LaQuanda Combs, the Ms. USA pageant host. This is not to say that Howard is the only institution that produces black leaders, but it is one that is often highlighted.

Many of the most prominent black movers and shakers, one of which increasingly became the magazine publishing industry, thought of a niche in the industry that wasn't being covered. They dreamed of working for themselves. “I had a thought of a niche in the industry that wasn't being covered,” said Mason. “I decided to start a magazine focusing on black women specifically on the topic of fashion.”

But when the first issue of Pose hit the newsstands earlier this year, Mason says he felt very much like a proud father. “I felt that there was room for a magazine that focused on the fashion industry often ignores. Mason cites that one of the primary minuses of starting a magazine is the financial side. “Not having a consistent income is a problem. Our income is not guaranteed. We have to generate it ourselves. It gets stressful. The average business lasts for three years, but after Mason's least successful issue, he decided to continue telling the stories of black women aged between 18 and 35, faces many obstacles within the magazine industry, build alliances, and be confident. His success is a testament to sacrifice.

Thank You!

By Camille M. Harvey
Sports Editor,

There are so many people who contributed to my personal and professional growth on campus and I would like to make this opportunity to thank most of them. Please understand that I do not like to lay out any specifics of one and one thank is just as important as the next.

Ms. Deborah Johnson: We have come a long way from Sports Marketing and the athletic office. You are truly on an campus. Many good things continue to happen in your life and may your path to success never end.

Ed Hill and Romanda Noble: You both put in a lot of hard work and much of it is not seen. Everything happens for a reason, in success. One of the office will get the experience and the understanding of its needs but, until then, I know that the office will make it what it has now. Many thanks to you.

Ms. Jefferson: There are so many ways that you have helped me. I can’t begin to thank you enough and to think about. Thanks for giving me the opportunity to showcase my talents. Thank you for actually reading it and telling me your thoughts about. With much love to you, may not have anything but a soft part of your life. Yes both have contributed to my professional growth.

6th Degrees from BS! John, now then, Emirina has decided to really rock the boat—new season. The sporty guy that had the rapier because of his homophone lyric. And when Dr. De was asked about his work, she said that there really was a response to this long on Emirina’s own column. Speaking of be shipy’s comment, we talk about Angie Stone. It looks like the singer at a street festival in Newark, NJ, made a comment that has caused some harm to her fans. KRS-One is a hip hop artist and well known for his controversy. We can’t talk about KRS-One’s work without mentioning how he has handled his past. More will be said on this later. Thank you for your understanding and patience.

MS. Aki Thomas: You guys, thank you for being faithful, despite your initial feelings for me. Keep holding me in your hearts, I’ll be back before you know it. KRS-One, keep it real.

Phenomenon from BS! involved in many areas on campus from being the current Chairperson for Howard University Student Ambassadors to HUSA. "Derek is very thorough," said Alexander, vice presi­ dent of HUSA where Kindle works as the Student Empowerment coordinator. This position bridges the gap between students and the administration. "If you don’t see him doing something, it’s something wrong." Even said, "Well he asked us to do it, we did it, and we did it well." You can’t control things, but you can control the way you think about things. This is why I am so proud of him. He is a true leader, and not to my heart because I am only human.

Thank you for your understanding and patience. Women and Men’s Basketball Team: You guys are the best. I wish you nothing but the best. Always know that you will always have a fan in me. Love to live. "Big Tall" Aki Thomas, Big brother Asia Petty, Ayanna, Big sister Ron and Jon, next year is your year."

The Hilltop and Readers of our Section: Thank you for giving me the opportunity to express my written thoughts. Thank you for all who are reading it and telling me what you think about. With much love to you, may not have anything but a soft part of your life. Yes both have contributed to my professional growth.
