MANUSCRIPT DIVISION

SCOPE NOTE

The papers of William J. Faulkner (1891 - 1987) Congregational minister, folklorist, author, and Fisk University Dean are in 14 series: family materials; personal papers; financial records; correspondence; writings by Faulkner; sermons, speeches and services by Faulkner; organizational affiliations; writings by others; program files; research files; photographs; artifacts; audio recordings and restricted items. The bulk of this collection is made up of Faulkner's correspondence and writings, which span his entire career from 1914 to 1980. Faulkner's renown throughout African American society is reflected in the voluminous correspondence from his professional and personal relationships. There are several manuscript versions of his book, The Days When the Animal's Talked Black American Folktales and How They Came to Be, published in 1977. This title represents a substantial and significant contribution to the history of African American folklore.

Also evident in this collection are a wealth of photographs which include portraits of Faulkner, as well as, candid images of Faulkner and his family at various vacations and holiday celebrations. There are also a number of images of Sigma Pi Phi meetings and conventions.

The family papers contain items from his wife Elizabeth Abele Cook Faulkner, fondly known as Bessable, his sisters Florence and Ethel Faulkner, and his children, Josephine, Marie and William Faulkner, Jr. Mrs. Faulkner's materials include correspondence and Cook family genealogical items. A unique element of his children's materials are the correspondence and writings of his son, William Faulkner, Jr.

Dr. Faulkner's son served in World War II as a pilot; he subsequently died in enemy fire. Among the artifacts for William Faulkner, Jr. are his purple heart, military correspondence, military burial flag and service uniform.

The writings, sermons, and speeches by Faulkner chronicle his broad interested in Christian and secular issues facing African American people, such as segregation, racism, Christian love, African American folklore, current events, death and dying. There is also a small amount of items regarding Faulkner's life in the political arena while residing in Cape May and Wildwood, New Jersey. His civilian appointment to the City Council of Cape May brought about changes in education and select civil procedures. In the Writings by Others series there is material from numerous philosophers and Christian thinkers. Many of these items were used to augment sermons and include quotes and vignettes for funerals.

His organizational affiliations range from the Omega Psi Phi fraternity to Sigma Pi Phi to the Mu-So-Lit Club. Especially rich is the wealth of early materials on Omega Psi Phi and Sigma Pi Phi also known as the Boule and Mu-So-Lit Club programs and agendas.

His career began in 1914 when he first appointed to First Congregational Church in Atlanta. His long standing distinction at Fisk University propelled him into other arenas of ecclesiastic service at Park Manor Congregational Church in Chicago, as well as appointments to various ecumenical boards and organizations.

The papers were donated by his daughters Josephine Faulkner Webster and Marie Faulkner Brown between 1988 and 1990.
