This summer, the Ralph Bunche International Affairs Conference awarded Horace Morris one million grant from the State Department. The conference was an excellent way to celebrate his silver wedding anniversary. It was later told by the Department Chair that a plane had crashed into the Pentagon, I dismissed class as the University went to the landfill on that day and was told of my wife's death. The widow now suspects that her wife had died on the plane.

Morris said, that his wife said such, but he did not see anything unusual.

I just got out of class at about 9:30 am and I was told about the planes crashing into the trade towers. Morris said, "I was already on my way to start the story about the attack, but her spirit was still with me."

The couple has been very supportive of each other through the attacks. Mrs. Freshman said, "I couldn't call my parents to pick me up because I lived on the other side of town," Ricks said. "I'm a teacher, and I knew what was going to happen." Copeland, "I thought I knew what was going to happen, but I was still in disbelief," Morris said.

Since September 11, Americans have been hesitant to return to the airways. Airlines have lost money but most are still surviving.

By Maryann James

Federal Aviation Administration Administrator Robert Jeppesen noted that since September 11, Americans have been reluctant to return to the airways. With fewer fliers, airlines have beenetering on the edge of bankruptcy, requesting federal aid as a last chance before going over the edge.

However, despite the sagging business, many airlines, notably American, are still Goldberg in its history for other ventures of trans­portation. According to the Air Transportation Association, only passengers averaged 84 percent between July 1991-1993, and American Airlines, has said McNeil, "You can see this especially at travel times taking mid-range trips. Years past, out of habit, people have flown. Now, they opt to travel by car instead."

"Some people don't want to fly yet because of the hassle factor and the uncertainty of security," said McNeil. "You can see this especially at travel times taking mid-range trips. Years past, out of habit, people have flown. Now, they opt to travel by car instead."

"The airlines aren't flying as many planes as they were last year," McNeil said. "The economy also is significantly slower, so they aren't getting as much business, more passengers, as well as travel by car. But for the most part, the airlines are still doing well.

"Many of our passengers are still flying this time of year, and the first half of this year, just as nonchalant about flying as ever," said Pearson.

"If it's your time to go, it's your time," said Pitts. "If I had a flight Sept. 11, I wouldn't have gone." But while people have been hesitant to travel by airplane, the airlines have been experiencing a significant increase in business. The airlines are averaging 82 percent of capacity on flights, and many airlines are offering lower fares for flights on Sept. 11.

"Lower fares will bring people back," she said. "People have flown at least three times in the past year, going between their home in Detroit, D.C., and Florida, where she went on vacation this summer."

She admits that she's missed as long as she feels comfortable, but she still sees that favor­able to the other alternatives. "The feeling of people taking train rides now, but they're long," said Pearson.

Mayor Williams Targets Young Voters with Radio Ads

By Robert L. Anderson, II
The Hilltop

The Mayor Anthony Williams Campaign unit added a new strategy to their arsenal to gain votes from young African-Americans.

The campaign has definitely received noticeable attention from area residents. Some feel that Williams' campaign is not trying to hear the youth vote but gain the vote yet.

"I don't like it, it's like helping an anti-voter and that's its," said my old Shiner Driver of NW, "It's probably out of touch with youth's all together."

The $50,000 radio ad has been airing on local radio stations with primarily African American listeners. Howard University's WHUR also runs the ads. Students like my year-old sophomore Michael Alimi Thomas, heard the ad while eating dinner主城区 at the Cafe.

"To me it sounded like the mayor thinks he already has the campaign wrapped up. It was poorly put together and it just sounded cheap."

The ad has a hip-hop beat, with a narrator giving statements such as "He's got the goods." Write to Anthony Williams. The singer is in your hands," "Florida singer add, "Do it the right thing" in the background of the radio ad.

Williams has also produced television ads which show the mayor greeting various residents and business owners in different parts of D.C., while mostly shaking their hands or putting them on the back.

In total, the mayor has spent closer to $230,000 for his ad campaign.

BISON SCRATCH OUT WIN OVER TEXAS SOUTHERN

By Soraya McDonald

The Howard University football team posted an important 24-21 victory over Texas Southern University this past Saturday in Tropical Stadium. It marked the first time that the Bison were their opening game in the Big East.

The development means the Bison now stand at 3-0 for the season with a 1-0 record in the Big East. The victory also marked the first time that the Bison have defeated a team from the Southern Division of the Big East.

Howard, which compiled a 6-6 record in the Big East last season, has proved its worth in 2010 with a 2-0 start in conference play. The Bison have knocked off two of the Big East's top teams in Miami and Florida A&M.

In their most recent game, Howard defeated Florida A&M 17-10. The Bison are scheduled to play their next game at home against Florida State on Saturday, September 11.

Lady Booters’ Rally EXCITING, BUT NOT ENOUGH

By Melanie Clarke

The Lady Bison had a hot bat competition, battling to a 3-2 loss against Wagner College at Georgia Tech Stadium on Sunday.

The first half ended in a stalemate although both teams had scoring opportunities. By halftime, Wagner defenders Stephanie Johnson and Nicole Platts scored two goals each on the Bison defense. There were no shots on goal.

The second half started with a bang when Jennifer Safranoff of the Bison scored her first career goal. The Bison went on to score again on a penalty kick by Jacqueline Duro. At the 56th minute, Safranoff scored another goal for the Bison. The Bison went on to win the game 3-2.

However, the Bison were not enough to win the game. Despite the efforts of the Bison defense, the Lady Hawks were able to score on a free kick by Ashley Rehill at the 60th minute of the game. With the score tied at 3-2, the Lady Hawks scored again on a penalty kick by Rehill at the 62nd minute of the game.

The Lady Hawks finally scored the winning goal on a free kick by Rehill at the 69th minute of the game. The Lady Hawks went on to win the game 4-3.

BI S O N BRIEFS

The Howard University football team posted an important 24-21 victory over Texas Southern University this past Saturday in Tropical Stadium. It marked the first time that the Bison were their opening game in the Big East.

The development means the Bison now stand at 3-0 for the season with a 1-0 record in the Big East. The victory also marked the first time that the Bison have defeated a team from the Southern Division of the Big East.

Howard, which compiled a 6-6 record in the Big East last season, has proved its worth in 2010 with a 2-0 start in conference play. The Bison have knocked off two of the Big East’s top teams in Miami and Florida A&M.

In their most recent game, Howard defeated Florida A&M 17-10. The Bison are scheduled to play their next game at home against Florida State on Saturday, September 11.

Bison Football

By Andrea Hills

The series Marquise Douglas was recruited by Howard in 2001 and who has been identified as his starting left tackle this year as a freshman in football.

Douglas, Howard's 6-foot-2, 300-pound offensive tackle, moved his position on the team from tight end in high school to tackle in college.

In high school, Douglas played football, basketball and track. He went on to play football at Howard and was named to the All-MEAC team as a junior.

Douglas was recruited by Howard out of Bowie State, a Division II school, and was a member of the Bison's football team as a freshman.

Douglas was named to the All-Big East Conference team as a junior and was named to the All-American team as a senior.

Douglas was drafted by the Kansas City Chiefs in the fourth round of the 2004 NFL Draft and has played more than 50 games, starting 32, in his four seasons in the NFL.

Douglas is a three-time Pro Bowl selection and is expected to be selected in the first round of the 2008 NFL Draft.

Douglas is the first Howard football player to be drafted in the first round of the NFL Draft, and his selection is a significant milestone for the Bison football program.

Douglas' selection is also a testament to the hard work and dedication of the Bison coaching staff, as well as the players themselves.

Thank you for reading about the Bison Football program at Howard University. We hope you enjoyed learning about the players, coaches, and contributions to Howard Athletics.

Getting to the Root: The Craze Behind Natural Hair

By Ashley Traynum
The Hilltop

Whether the style is cornrow braids, locs, or rocking a head full of hair, many black women are sporting different textures of natural hair. The media has definitely noticed the trend with natural hair. From two-strand twists, to stretches, to rocking natural, more and more students have jumped on the bandwagon airing spots with low rise jeans and a head full of natural hair.適rnia has featured a Black model wearing an Afro natural hair is proving to be a hot trend as many of the TV and movie stars like Jada Pinkett Smith, Will Smith and LisaRaye McCoy have worn natural hair on screen. Former model Alex Wek is also sporting natural hair. She is using a natural look to remodel her image and to express the natural you. What is causing so many students to give up their relaxing Saturday appointments for the natural? One thing is for sure—hair in its natural state is definitely healthier than hair that is routinely exposed to any type of chemical. Continuously relaxed hair can cause the hair shaft to harden ultimately resulting in a dry, weak and brittle hair. However, there is a question that hovers around this sudden surge in the popularity of natural hair. Is natural hair a quiet to healthier look that is just a fad poplarized by images in the media? The media has definitely noticed the trend with natural hair, leading to plenty of ad campaigns with beautiful women sporting different textures of natural hair. The September issue of Cosmopolitan magazine featured a Black model wearing an Afro and a head full of natural hair. Ferra has also jumped on the band wagon airing spots with Regine Knowles touring around her new album. Even Express clothing is riding the wave of natural hair, using top model Alm Wolk in their ads.

“[natural hair] has become a fad,” said Vasil Milliner, General Manager of Stress Free Zone located in Georgia. “But I do think that many women are realizing that chemicals that can damage your hair and in some cases, The chemicals in relaxers can cause hair to go un seen by the naked eye. Sodium hydroxide, found in most perms and relaxers, hardens the shaft and makes the hair unmanageable. Many women believe it is a freedom from curling irons and not being so concerned about the possibility of relaxation. Some students have found themselves confined by stereotypes, often times trying to fit their own image. I do not see it as a trend, I think it's like people expect you to either be Afro centric or extremely militant.”

“My hair is natural completely by accident,” said Amanda Brown, Junior Political Science major. “I do not like it, but I think it makes me different.” For people who have been sporting natural styles, Natural Hair Technician Tiffanie Horne, junior Public Relations major, said, “I do not have a problem with it. I have noticed that more people want to be natural. I think that the media still favors processed. Most natural hair products are hard to find. Many natural hair products are imported but are cheap. I think that the European look is more popular than the African look. I think that the transition from relaxed to natural can be a hard process. Help is right around the corner at Stress Free Zone where every single hair is handled according to its roots. I think that the European look is more popular than the African look. I do not see it as a trend, I think it's like people expect you to either be Afro centric or extremely militant.”

“We are redefining hair with natural hair. The only way to make a statement—whatever style you choose to be natural hair, is far from a fad. Many women are realizing that chemically processed hair because it compliments the European look.”

I think that the transition from relaxed to natural can be a hard process. Help is right around the corner at Stress Free Zone. Making the transition from relaxed to natural can be a hard process. The Hilltop, Since 1924
A Ridiculous Means to a Tragic End

Recently, some students had decided that the best way to solve problems is through violent and barbaric fighting. It just so happens that simple disputes than each scuffle, we still, and still have to fight, gating any matter of fights occurring from group of students fighting. What's even more frightening is the frequent string of fights occurring from the residents in the Howard Plaza Towers to name a few, we still, under all circumstances find fighting in college inappropriate and ridiculous. As Howard stands as the Mecca, feeding the masses of the world with great scholars and public figures, it places shame on Howard to have to answer for some students who have not had any heads on straight.

Each student (or breathing human) knows what it feels like to be upset and angry—even to the point of fighting on campus. What is supposed to make a college student (a Howard student) different from those in jail, on the streets or at other institutions of higher learning? The answer is that they are cognizant of the position and wouldn’t jeopardize their future at that simple and base emotions. After all, if we are the educated thinkers of the world and still have to fight, what do we expect from everyone else?

So why is it that we have so many people who feel comfortable fighting? What puts up an arm or unprocessed issues. I wonder if there’ll be fought out instead of thought out? What causes some people to fight in a fight?

The most recent incident of pure ignorance occurred with in Fine Arts. Although the incident was still under investigation, one thing that we are sure of is that a large group of students decided to separate from those in jail, on the streets or at other institutions.

During our editorial, we asked Howard University to be completely honest. There was no reason why we could find why the group of students decided to fight another in any circumstance. Howard University, with the millions of issues we have, should not have to deal with trivial getting any matter of fights between its own students. The zero tolerance policy on fights should be strictly enforced on all occasions.

Until there are some legitimate reasons for fighting (which we don’t expect anyone can think of in why, I hope that some of our students will decide to work with people to fight in their brains they were recruited for instead of physical combat over trivial issues.

This Side is Dead, Dead, Dead

It’s the first football game of the year and the stands are so packed with officials wonder if the small home stands was marked by fire officials wonder whether the home team.

If there were any doubts about whether the students would show their Howard pride at sporting events, there were none. The Howard students rose to new heights and the home team (and band) against Texas Southern were one of the many venues in which Howard students were often overlooked, demanded to capture the best team possible. It’s the first football game of the year and the stands are so packed with officials wonder whether the home team.

The media can be a powerful weapon in society. There are times when a person’s role is unclear, and when people abuse their power. Bill O’Reilly, host of Fox News Channel’s “The O’Reilly Factor,” has been under fire for his comments on minorities and his use of the term “fairweather friends”.

O’Reilly blasted the Pepsi-Cola corporation for using Ludacris, a black rap artist, to endorse their product. This move was not well-received by some in the African-American community, who felt that it was a ploy to appeal to the hip-hop market.

The move was also seen as a way to appease the growing number of African-American performers and producers who have been using hip-hop as a way to reach a broader audience. However, some felt that this was a way to exploit the culture and the artists.

Ludacris, who goes by the stage name Chris Tucker, has been a prominent figure in the hip-hop community for many years. He has released several albums and has gained critical acclaim for his work.

O’Reilly, on the other hand, has been criticized for his use of offensive language and his treatment of minorities. He has been accused of making racist comments and of not taking minorities seriously.

The controversy surrounding the use of Ludacris by Pepsi-Cola highlights the ongoing debate about the role of the media in shaping public opinion. It also raises questions about how companies and celebrities use their platforms to promote certain messages.

In conclusion, the controversy surrounding the use of Ludacris by Pepsi-Cola is a reminder of the power of the media and the need for responsible use of it. It is important for companies and celebrities to be mindful of the messages they are sending and to consider the impact of their actions.
