New Convergence Media Lab Opens

By Stacy Gates
Contributing Writer

Howard University's Department of Journalism, in conjunction with the National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA) and Microsoft, hosted the ribbon-cutting ceremony of the new high-tech convergence media lab Wednesday, in the Student Union.

Microsoft donated the equipment, Microsoft's General Manager for the Mid-Atlantic District, Tom Brudieker, was on hand to present the new converged media lab, which will give students the opportunity to 'embrace technology and to develop competencies and skills that will then more fully contribute in the work world.',

Holistic planning has been the hallmark for the new convergence lab and it will take time for the students to fully grasp the information to form a cohesive plan.

The Office of Residence Life is working closely with the Undergraduate Student Assembly and the athletics department to aid in making campus life, which will be with remodeling the intercollegiate and intramural sports teams in need of assistance.

The song that benefits includes the track and field, women's tennis, volleyball, basketball, boxing, and women's football.

The first fundraising initiative was a bus trip to Hampton University, for a Howard Bison and Hampton Pirates game. According to the Director of Operations, Nicole Gibbs, the $35 ticket included the bus, game, free popcorn, and a tailgate. This includes fried fish, burgers, and french fries on the menu. There was also a Fall activities director.

"If we had a great time without one incident that was an reason to come back for another event," Gibbs said. "We had a great time without one incident that we had all for Hampton.

"We want to develop a connection between alumni and students, and all alumni," he said. Larry Brown Jr., ADA counselor, said the idea was the brainstorm of Franklin Chambers, the Jesse Lee Jones of Residence Life, but the alliance of the direction involved inside the program turned better.

"We are proud to say that we have a successful event and now, we are excited about this administration's dedication to Homecoming Express," Brown said. Home Express is an umbrella organization created to promote support for Howard University intercollegiate and intramural athletics. Its mission is to help Howard's student-athletes through a coordinated system of fundraising initiatives, communications, and special events. Home Express seeks to connect alumni, parents, and friends with Howard University Athletics to support and maintain excellence in intercollegiate athletics.

HUSA Sponsors Trip to First Monday on Capitol Hill

by Tiffany Mitchell
Contributing Writer
The Howard University Student Assembly (HUSA) sponsored a bus trip to First Monday on Capitol Hill to help students and staff members make new contacts and attend events that create an opportunity to make "Congressional Kings".

The trip was arranged by Apex Communications, a student development group to bring awareness to the student body of the resources that the center offers. Shinkle also said, "Students often begin their career development process in their senior year but should begin earlier."

The career center is located in the School of Communications and offers information for various jobs.

"Some of the people responsible for bringing Homecoming Express to fruition are all smiles in front of Burr Gymnasium."

The collaboration will continue with an Open House scheduled after Howard's home game on Oct. 26, 2002 against North Carolina A&T, which will feature in the Varsity Weight Room in Cool Hall.

The purpose of this program is to increase the number of entrepreneurs involved in self-employment, structured by Rosalyn King and Marilyn Sephorce, the program held its first course last spring, and registration is now open for the summer semester, which begins in February.

According to King, "Students learn to interview, conduct, interview, and write, and information is another language.

The class also teaches some recent and expansive interpretation. Four guides primarily new recent interpretation and conversational interpretation. This dialogue of interpretation is taught in French, Spanish, Portuguese, German, Russian, and Arabic languages.

A skill in such simultaneous interpretation is not yet for people who want to make this their career, but can also be incorporated into their current work, such as retail interpreters," said King.

"I know that Howard offered classes that taught simultaneous interpretation, but students are eager to sign up for the class.

"I didn't even know you could take a class that taught simultaneous interpretation. The only variety of classes offered at Howard that we are an institution that is rapidly moving towards excellence," said Linda Ware, junior finance major.

Coping with the Winter Blues

By Roselyne Etienne Contributing Writer

As the leaves fall from the trees and the sun sets lower in the sky, the winter blues can affect many individuals. These moods can become entrenched with the coming of the cold months and the consequences of SAD ( Seasonal Affective Disorder ). One of the many disorders described Seasonal Affective Disorders (SAD) is recognized in the DSM-IV (Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders). A diagnosis usually comes after a period of 2 weeks or longer during the winter months.

Researchers and SAD experts believe that about 20 percent of all adults suffer from SAD. A study by the American Psychiatric Association revealed that 6 percent of adults and 7 percent of adolescents have been diagnosed with SAD. The typical symptoms include depression, irritability, feeling weak, and a lack of energy.

The most effective therapy for SAD is a light box. Generally people sit about 70 to 80 percent of those who have SAD, the symptoms usually start to resolve in the spring, in March or April. Some individuals experience other times of the year, such as pony rides, or because of the cold and dark of winter. SAD can also be alleviated by consuming certain foods. When the sun sets, we are exposed to less light, which can interfere with the body's production of melatonin, a hormone that regulates sleep and wake cycles.

Although SAD can be very severe, that is, many people sink with it. Some can experience great bursts of energy and "winter blues". At times the irritability can be very severe. Bush May Cut Pell Grant to Assist the War

By Charles Spearman

The Federal Pell Grant is a financial aid program designed to assist the nation's college-bound students who are financially disadvantaged. Unlike a scholarship, which is a grant from an institution or organization providing funds to students based on academic achievement or other criteria, the Federal Pell Grant is a type of need-based aid. It is the oldest federal student aid program in the United States and is intended to provide direct assistance to students who otherwise may not be able to afford higher education.

The Pell Grant is funded through the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002, which increased the amount available to students. As of the 2022-2023 academic year, the maximum Federal Pell Grant award is $6,495. Students can receive this award for up to 10 years, depending on their enrollment status.

In order to receive the Federal Pell Grant, students must be enrolled in an eligible postsecondary education program and meet certain eligibility requirements. These include being a citizen or eligible non-citizen, being enrolled part-time or full-time, and having a demonstrated need for financial assistance.

The Federal Pell Grant is an essential component of the financial aid landscape, helping to ensure that students from a variety of backgrounds have access to higher education. It is a key component of the U.S. federal student aid system and is designed to promote educational opportunity and access for millions of students each year.
Students Journalists File Abuse Suit Against the District

By Marcus Strezewski

WASHINGTON - Seven George Washington University students are suing the District of Columbia government, saying it failed to protect them from a colleague who went on a violent rampage.

The lawsuit, filed last week in U.S. District Court, alleges that the university failed to protect students from Charles Jenkins, a 31-year-old former university police officer, who killed two students and wounded four before being shot by police.

The students, who were動 the lawsuit on behalf of eight people, say they were not properly informed of the dangers they faced and were not provided with adequate protection.

The university has yet to respond to the lawsuit.

Jenkins, who was fired from his job as a university police officer in 2018, is currently serving a life sentence without parole for the shootings.

The suit seeks damages for injuries and emotional distress. It also seeks changes to the university's policies and procedures to prevent similar incidents in the future.

The Students’ Voice

Recently, The Hilltop and its editors have been bombarded with pressure to cover stories deemed important by the administration. Some editors have been called numerous times by administrators who all but called numerous times by it's editors have been bombed by the administration.

We continue to sleep or take a show-up, among other things, neglecting the possibility for cogitation. Missing 15 minutes of your favorite television program or being 15 minutes in on a telephone call, in not on detrimental as being physically scarred for life or worse, burning to death.

Chair: At college students, whether you are a minor about fire drills and the possible consequence that can result if you fail to follow instruction. Here are few reasons why you should take fire drills seriously:

1. A fire could break out at any time, in any location, and you should be prepared to evacuate immediately.
2. In case of an emergency, knowing what to do can save your life.
3. The university’s fire safety policies are mandated by law, and not following them can result in fines or legal action.
4. The university’s insurance may not cover damages caused by a fire if you did not follow proper procedures.
5. The university community depends on each other to ensure safety and security.

The Hilltop: The Voice of the students, not the administration.

An editorial judgment is made independent of those who want to be fed. It is imperative that the process is understood so there is no misunderstanding as to our role as the student’s voice.

In addition, with coverage comes scrutiny. The Hilltop, from time to time must consider communications with various university administration offices and editors to be asked "why?" We are not facility that we are taught by those who have more experience in information, but have difficulty gathering information or understanding the other side.

We would like to make it clear that we welcome suggestions, but we ask that those who request coverage respect our process and our decision to do or not to do.

Our purpose is to serve the Howard University community and we will continue to do so.

From Kwame Ture and James Farmer to George W. Bush

"The struggle for the soul of Howard University, Black America and the World"

Jonathan Hutto Sr.

As I reflected on the reasons why Howard would consider granting George W. Bush honorary degree, I reflected on the root causes and solutions of the problems.

Why would Howard University want to honor a president whose agenda is not only with African-American Americans, but also in labor and civil rights?

During the apartheid school year, I served as the undergraduate president of the Howard University. Myself, along with hundreds of students, typified the typical student. Rapidly shooted, at a rate of one student a month, the impact of the Board of Tru testees—everyone to impact the University commu tunity. It was during this time we experienced a "Kwame Ture and James Farmer"-like degree.

The name Kwame Ture who is the symbol of the Pan-African revolutionary youth, and who was assassinated by an American intelligence agent, is the type of individual who would stand for student rights and the preservation of African American culture.

Upon hearing that President Bush was being considered as an honorary degree recipient and speaker for commencement ceremonies, many students and members of the University community were唬cred that any such an honor would be distributed to the total liberation of oppressed people around the world.

I must say that the University of Howard Bush who is the symbol of a Republican primary in North Carolina resembled the most recent political university in America to appeal vote and highly support for his policies and future agenda.

I voted for George W. Bush, He's Pro-Life

Dear Editor,

I voted for George W. Bush. I realize that my decision draws many black eyebrows, as probably any other vote. In a nation mainly divided on education, I voted for a man who I believe is the best choice for the United States and our nation.

But why, I immediately and were many of those who believed the President-elect.

My decision is not a result of the fact that a president is pro-life and that I support the issue of abortion. My decision is a result of the fact that a president is pro-life and that I support the issue of abortion.

I voted for Bush because I believe in the values that he represents. I believe in the values that he represents. I believe in the values that he represents.

The As of 1982, there have been 200 surveys and I am pleased to report that we have received the largest number of responses by far. They have been very encouraging.

The names of students, faculty, and staff who are involved in the survey are not shared with anyone outside the University.

I hope that you will continue to support the President and the University and that you will continue to support the President and the University.

Yours sincerely,

V. Thomas H. McCullum

Football Pre-Game Show Hits the Airwaves

By Melanie M. Clarke

Hilltop Staff Writer

WHUT is getting ready for its matchup against Morgan State, with the networks of its ABC, ESPN, and Fox affiliates ramping up its broadcast by adding a pre-game show to the mix.

The show features main story pieces such as Charles Woodall, who went from being a student at the school and football player to being a former student on the grid, and Howard alumus, was asked by Morgan State, talk about his 15-year stint in the grad school, and lined "a vicious warrior" on the field, but he's a quiet "gentleman" off of it.

Andrea Gardner: Black Star Power

By Chantel Harley

Contributing Writer

From the 2002 WNBA draft, to graduation, to marriage, former Lady Bison basketball player Andrea Gardner-Combs has been telling her story through the years.

The toughest season to be a student and a star was her 2002 season. Gardner-Combs said. "I was given a lot of opportunities to shine and I had a lot of production but it didn't become a reality."

And that's exactly what she made of the experience. "I believe that God put me in the right spot at the right time and showed me the love that I needed to make it to the WNBA." Gardner-Combs said.

Andrea Gardner married another team mate, and the two kept in touch and he was drafted into the league.

"We sing and dance and eat creamy just the same," Gardner-Combs said.

Although she is building relationships with her new teammates, she still cherishes her relationships with her Howard teammates.

"I have told my baby, my sisters. We have been through a lot together and I will not trade them for the world," she said. "I love them and love them as much." Gardner-Combs said.

"This is how we do it."

Cross-Country Dodges Puddles, Competition at Penn State

By Keishia Thorpe
Contributing Writer

The men and women's cross-country teams had it rough at the Penn State National Cross-Country meet held Saturday at University Park. Up against nationally ranked teams such as Providence, Villanova, West Virginia, and William and Mary, the meet took the men and women across a puddle-ridden, rain-soaked course.

Both teams schlepped through the continuous rain, the women's team finishing 17th of 19 teams and the men landing in 16th of 17 teams overall.

The pace setters for the meet were Megan Metcalfe of West Virginia with a time of 20 minutes, 49.72 seconds (covering 3.75 miles) and Eric Collins of Speed River TC, Ontario, finishing with a time of 25:58.72 (covering 5.2 miles).

"Despite the tough field, we managed to run pretty well in the mud and rain," Head Coach Michael Merritt said.

The conditions of the course did not psyche out the women's team as freshman standout Ashley Trax again led the team; prevailing over the tough course finishing sixth in a field of 211 runners at 24:41.14, cutting 13 seconds off her time in last week's meet at George Mason.

"I was a big help with my all," Vann said. "We had a lot of competition and we ran better than last week. I ran a better time even though I was not in form."

Vann's teammates Tasha Jones and Indira Garcia also improved their times, running 24:25.48 (109th) and 24:46.30 (122nd), respectively.

"There's always room for improvement," Harris said. "Under the conditions, I think we did well. We got out with the pack and couldn't maintain and so we fell back."

Troy McArthur (103rd) led the men's team this weekend, finishing at 28:44.15, immediately followed by teammate Juma Osman (28:49.22). The men all got off in the beginning and quickly fell to the middle of the pack. However, while others maintained or fell back, McArthur and Osman worked their way up front.

"They are ready for MEAC because they have shown they can compete against the best teams," Merritt said. "I predict that the men and women will place in the top three."

As she cut the ribbon, approximately 850 people Anderson asserted she is excited about the opening of the new converged media lab and work on opening as an "opportunity for students to understand all aspects of media including broadcast, print, and advertising."

Other guests included President A. Ty Caldwell- Colbert, Dean of the School of Communications, Janice Davis, NNPA editor-in-chief, George Curry, and NNPA President Calvin Oliver.

Other pictures that played a major role in the lab opening were Chancellor of the Journalism Department, Philip Elison, Professor Clar Wilson, Lab Director/Professor Thornehill, and Barbara Hines-Curry, along with his staff, will be setting up their offices near the new lab and will serve as mentors to the black college press. Citi Curey, says the lab will link the black press to students.

The lab will give students significant amounts of journalism experience as well as give them an opportunity to build their credentials, goals that they will be treated as professionals, he said.

Oliver says the vision for the converged media lab came about three years ago. Although major players at NNPA involved with the project at the beginning are not with NNPA anymore, Gilley retired the project, but said it was still challenging and difficult.

Oliver says in a year the program might be expanded to other historically black colleges and universities' journalism departments.

While the converged media lab incorporates many aspects of journalism, including, but not limited to print and broadcast, it also deals heavily with the advertising and public relations aspects of journalism.

Dixon says, "There are wonderful tools and a wonderful opportunity for opportunity for our students to gain in print/practical foundation with a competitive edge."

Black college (NNPA) member representing publishers LeRoy Talbot and Weedy Fortune express their admiration and said they will definitely make use of all that the new converged media lab has to offer and look forward to working in the lab regularly.

Forswarte information about the new converged media lab visit blackcollegeview.com.

George Curry, says the lab will link the black college press to students.

For Weaver and Boeing, it is simply a new and opportune way to convey it in a manner that is going to be effective.

is routinely one of the most important positions in the news media. It is frequently the case that the press has an impact that can be traced back to a specific story that appeared in a particular newspaper or magazine.

The press has long been a source of information for government officials, who rely on it to keep them informed about events around the world. It is also a source of entertainment, providing readers with information about sports, politics, and pop culture.

In addition to its role as a watchdog, the press has been an important force in shaping public opinion. It has played a key role in bringing attention to issues such as corruption, police brutality, and the treatment of refugees.

Despite these contributions, however, the press has faced criticism for its role in shaping public opinion. Some critics argue that the press is biased in its coverage, while others say that it is too focused on celebrity gossip.

The press has also faced criticism for its role in the spread of misinformation. In recent years, misinformation has become a serious problem, with false stories spreading like wildfire on social media.

It is clear that the press has a significant impact on the world. It is a force for good, providing information and entertainment to people around the world. But it is also a force for evil, spreading misinformation and spreading hate.

The press has a responsibility to do its job with integrity, and it is up to us as consumers of the news media to hold the press accountable for its actions. Only then can we ensure that the press is fulfilling its role as a watchdog, bringing attention to important issues and keeping our leaders accountable.

What are we drinking tonight?

This is a common question every weekend among Howard students. Some students have already started planning their drinks for the special weekend, incorporating, more sophisticated drinks like champagnes and cocktails, with others still stuck in the classics. So, what are we drinking tonight?

Student, Nishia Gibson does not plan on doing any extravagant drinking this weekend. "I won't be drinking any different from what I usually do because I'm just drinking mixed drinks and shots," Gibson's preferences are the most popular in the Howard scene.

Homecoming, Meret and Grant Maneer are popular drinks for some Howard students.

The most popular club in club (Tilas) are the Lomestead and Grant Maneer shots.

Grant Maneer, an orange flavored, popular high school student drink is popular among many.

Lumme Garcia plans on sipping a little drink, a Grand Mariner cocktail called a French Connection.

"It's a mix with Grand Mariner and Homeyee, a man's drink in general," Garcia says.

While the gender-specificity of the drink may be unknown, it is definitely not for lightweight drinkers.

The thought that Adam Sandler just might win an Oscar for his performance in the P.T. Anderson film "Funny People," might have been the highlight of the last few minutes for many. And tonight, the 27th Howard University Homecoming attracts thousands of Howard students, alumni, and friends to the Howard University campus.

"I never miss Howard's Homecoming, especially the game," Howardian, MD, said that Jimmy Rollins said, "I've been since I moved here in 1999." "I leave.

Though Rollins doesn't travel beyond Howard, he doesn't understand why people still question his attendance at Howard's Homecoming.

"After you go to all the clubs, parties, and see all the people, you won't have the same problem," Rollins said.

In Howard's biggest rival.

"I don't know how Howard's biggest rival, Princeton University, come this year," Howard University student's unique environment provides a top quality education and social life for students wishing to be immersed into the new generation while maintaining their own style and fun.

Professors highly value the new experience, sophomore and junior anticipate whether it's going to be better than the year before, and seniors think of ways to make their last Homecoming the best. College and high school students alike have fun exploring landscapes of new towns, to explore the fashions and new tries, not for spring drinking, but for Homecoming.

Homecoming is just a college thing, high school seniors as well as Homecoming will be different from Homecoming weekend. Considering the near-ideal prices of the University has one of the most.

The romance is coupled with a particularly P.T. Anderson-esque sub-plot of Barry with the interviewee, Donal Donald (a sort of P.T. Alexander and Cate Blanchett). For the character to be self-identifying and "inner" character, he doesn't have to be. It's a shame, because the most important character, "inner" character, headlining the film is Paul's relationship with his younger brother, Hijinks.

The film is a study in Paul's, Barry's and Hijinks' relationship. We are taken on a journey in which we learn about the three brothers and their lives. We are shown the good and the bad moments of their lives, and we are taken on a journey of self-discovery.
