MANUSCRIPT DIVISION

Scope Note

The Carl R. Gross Collection consists primarily of biographical materials and memorabilia of some outstanding Blacks who resided in Providence, Rhode Island during the turn of the 20th Century. It was assembled by Dr. Gross, a native of Providence, whose interest in the Black history of Rhode Island was stimulated by his appointment to the Governor's Tercentenary Committee in 1935. The collection, totaling 52 items and spanning the period 1856-1966, was donated to Howard University by Dr. Gross January 23, 1967.

The majority of the collection contains materials related to Matilda Sissieretta Joyner Jones (1869-1933), "The Black Patti," famed singer of the concert stage. These materials include photographs and memorabilia as well as biographical data. There are also brief biographical sketches and newspaper clippings about Edward M. Bannister, Emma C. Clements George Henry, John C. Minkins, Malon A. Van Horne, Joseph H. Banks, John A. Jenkins and Joseph H. Monroe. The collection concludes with several items of memorabilia, including a postcard of Phillis Wheatley, a form letter dated 1901 from the John Brown Association of Torrington Connecticut, and Leach's Complete Spelling Book (1856) by Daniel Leach.
