Mayor Hosts Town Hall on Campus to Discuss Gay Issues

In response to recent incidents of anti-LGBTQ+ hate crimes on campus, Mayor Anthony Williams hosted a town hall meeting at Howard University on November 12th. The meeting aimed to address concerns and provide a platform for students, faculty, and staff to express their views and seek solutions.

The meeting was well-attended, with a diverse group of individuals participating in discussions. Participants raised concerns about recent attacks and incidents targeting LGBTQ+ individuals, as well as the need for increased support and resources for the GLBT community.

Mayor Williams acknowledged the challenges faced by the LGBTQ+ community and expressed his commitment to working towards a more inclusive campus. He announced plans to create a GLBT liaison unit to address concerns and improve campus safety.

The meeting concluded with a call to action, urging all members of the Howard University community to come together to support and protect one another.

Good and Bad Teacher List Circulates, Students Respond

By Dominique Ann Nathan

It never, ever fails. Every semester during the registration period, The Good Teacher, Bad Teacher List circulates across campus to inform students about the best and worst teachers to take for the upcoming semester.

"Though many professors are listed and given the title of good or bad, administrators, faculty and students question the validity of the lists," said the author of the list.

The author of the list who does not know if the list is for students or is the list of the judges/jury and the list/choice of teachers, he was not aware of the list in the spring semester.

The evaluation forms are long, and students don’t take enough time to fill them out. In an attempt to help the student body, The Good Teacher, Bad Teacher List was compiled.

The list was created by students and is only to be used for teachers. The teachers-the list-makers felt the list would help students.

"The accuracy of the list has been improved by a dispute said Professor and Chief of the Teaching and Learning, A. Toby Gold-Coffin. Gold-Coffin believed that student using this list are not making informed decisions.

"Many students believe that students could be jeopardizing their own education if they were to choose a certain professor based on the list," said Gold-Coffin.

"A professor whom one student listed can mean that he will not be the same for the other," Gold-Coffin said. "The professors, the list may be an indicator that students are valuing the best teachers and said economics professor Emily Banks.

"I do not feel that it is fair," said a professor who has been on the list for years. "I have a better chance of the building teachers classes.

"I have taught for more than 30 years. "Recommendations have been made to the Provost, but no one has been able to make the list where it should be," said the list-maker.

"Good and Bad Thacher List Circulates, Students Respond

"The Good and Bad Thachers List has been in existence for years. It is possible that students may feel more comfortable with the list, but it is not adequate to accommodate the number of doctors and patients. Health Center Director, Latasha Hudson, a junior African American studies major, disagreed with the list.

"The teachers who are listed are not always the best teachers actually being listed. The students learning capabilities and are not just upon feeling them. I have not heard students wish the way easy and they try to avoid the more learning challenging classes."

"Although some students feel that the list is not fair or accurate, some professors, especially in major Angel Carpenier believes the list is not helpful.

"I had first hand experience of a student situation that was listed as bad and actually very satisfactory with the professor."

"For some students, the list is not representative of the opinions of a few students."

Religion Lecture Tries to 'Open Up Closed Minds'

By Ramone Brandley

"Religion Destroys a People" Bro. Yahaya Ekhilis says, in a discussion group of on Wednesday.

Young people some have been thrown into a crisis outside of their life as part of the criticism of religion and the Black issues. Yahaya, a Muslim who associated himself with the Holy Family of Zion Church, speaks to Howard students trying to promote a lifestyle change.

Wednesday the thorough exploration of why he believes religion is a negative was held in Dong room of 7:30 PM. An interested crowd held by Yahaya explains the role of religion in the black people. The discussion is going to be held in the three main religions Christianity, Judaism, and Islam.

By reversing the names of these three religions back into topic he tries to emphasize the discussion of the three areas to many differently interpreted by the students of a perspective of their faith.

Yahaya believes the role of religion often lead to ignorance of purpose and subservience. Yahaya also speaks on Blacks and the role of religion in the lives of Black people. Yahaya uses references from the Bible, Quran, and Torah to make his speech.

Using references from the Bible, Quran, and Torah Yahaya speaks of living holistically and loving one another.

The congregation noded a case of the evening's questions concerning how Yahaya knows the specificity of life after death, the purpose of life, and other principles of religion. Where do we go afterwards? and whether it was for a purpose of imaging? We blind back and forth across the room.

Yahaya explored how historically ancient Abrahamic had no vision of an afterlife and that traditionally knowledge will give you your purpose of life.

"It's rare and amazing, no do you do you have sympathizers who might speak the truth, totally agree with him," says David Knight, a social studies major.

The evening's topic of discussion was also followed with a book list and further readings.

Noting specifically interested or open to the topic of religion, Yahaya also holds discussion panels on topics such as pre-penile draft, drug use, love, and black identity.

But Yahaya says he speaks on topics with the power of love and interest and encourages students to investigate their convictions.

"I am not here to attack people who can have the truth, I have to create the black minds and open up the black minds to thinking outside the box, thinking, attracting those people Yahaya said he wants to bring him to the minds of other African Americans all over.

Above, the Jewish Holy book, the Torah, Below, the Islamic book, the Quran. Both religions were part of the Kwan event on Wednesday.

Turn Great Grades Into a Great Career
An Ohio State Univ. Study Shows Both Genders Crave Sex Equally

By Erica Williams

Love and relationships are not issues on any college campus, but a recent study sponsored by a group of students and faculty in the Psychology Department shows that both genders crave sex equally. The story is not new, but when it comes to the act of sex, women are more involved and more sexual, said one of the report's authors.

The study was conducted by graduate students at Ohio State University and published in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology. This article concludes that men and women agree that love and romance is a vital part of a normal person, but both genders do not agree on what constitutes a relationship. Men do not necessarily want more sex.

Hosea Jennewein, director of the Psychology Department, said the difference in men and women is the amount of sex that each person desires and the amount of love and commitment behind it. Men who desire more sex and fewer commitments are usually referred to as “dirtbags.”

Paulina Saavedra, a junior, said that according to the myth, women simply are not as open about sex. They refrain from expressing themselves more. "We are taught that good girls don't open up about sex. It is a topic that women don't talk about and men don't want to talk about."

In the article, "An Ohio State University Study Shows Both Genders Crave Sex Equally," it states that both genders desire sex equally, which is a common misconception. The article also highlights the difference in men and women in terms of sexual behavior and relationship dynamics. The study conducted by graduate students at Ohio State University is published in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology. The article concludes that both genders agree that love and romance is a vital part of a normal person, but there is a difference in the amount of sex that each gender desires and the amount of love and commitment behind it. Men desire more sex and fewer commitments, while women want more love and fewer commitments. This is referred to as the "dirtbag" stereotype. The article also discusses the "myth" that women simply are not as open about sex and that they refrain from expressing themselves more. This stereotype is said to be reinforced by the myth that good girls don't open up about sex. The article emphasizes the importance of addressing these stereotypes and the need for a more open dialogue about sex and relationships.
Arthritis: Therapy In Motion

By Ericka Williams
Hilltop Staff Writer

Our society is an aging society. As people get older, they are more prone to arthritis, a joint disease. Arthritis affects people of all ages, but is more common with age.

There are over 200 forms of arthritis and other rheumatic diseases. These diseases may cause pain in supporting structures of the body such as muscles, tendons, ligaments, and bones. Some forms can also affect other parts of the body, including various internal organs. Many people use the word "arthritis" to refer to all rheumatic diseases. However, the word literally means joint inflammation.

The various kinds of arthritis can be divided into two general categories. Some rheumatic diseases are described as connective tissue diseases because they affect the body's connective tissue and its internal organs. Others are known as systemic diseases because they cause a problem in which the immune system harms the body's own healthy tissues. Two common forms of arthritis are osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis.

Osteoarthritis is a popular form of joint disease. It's overestimated to be caused by wear and tear of the joints. It can be overwhelming to the average person who has just a portion of the joint involved.

"Osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis are the most common forms of arthritis, there are other forms including rheumatoid, psoriatic, lower back pain and Lyme disease. These diseases vary in symptoms but all require treatment. Treatment for arthritis can be divided into several categories. Some of these categories include medication, exercise, hot/cold, and pacing for the sufferer. There are a variety of drugs, including prescription and over-the-counter medications, which can treat the condition.

Rheumatoid arthritis involves inflammation of the lining of many different joints in the body. In some people, Rheumatoid arthritis can also affect other parts of the body, including the heart, lungs, and brain. Rheumatoid arthritis is very similar to rheumatoid arthritis when the disease is in the body. Rheumatoid arthritis can be a disease which can treat the condition.

It's important to keep these "self-help" exercises in mind. Sources of heat include heating pads, hot tubs, hot tubs or heated pools. Pacing yourself moves energy by switching periods of activity with periods of rest.

Menstral Cycle Irregular In Some Young Women

From CYCLE page A. Calculate the day your cycle will occur because of irregularity. Although this can be inconvenient for some women, irregular menstrual periods do not always mean that there is something seriously wrong with the female's body. Irregularity also doesn't occur only in sexually active females. Irregular periods can be a sign that a female is anemic and lacking iron in her body. Eating habits can contribute to this.

Nevertheless, a woman who doesn't have a regular cycle should be examined by a physician to determine the cause of irregularity.

For the second time in three years, the Bison men's basketball team turned over the ball to the opponents far fewer times than they did in the previous season, an effort that has contributed to the team's success.

Bison Set to Clear Up Conference Scenarios

Sports "Editor

A 4-2 conference record would have allowed 124 points in its first six games, including a current three-game streak to ascend to three contests.

By Elena Bergerson

Throughout the season, question marks have arisen around almost every facet of Bison football, whether surrounding players' health, Improved performance, ability or a defensive-minded team that question marks have arisen around.

For most teams, grinding out a victory against Bethune-Cookman (9-1, 5-1) this Saturday and Nov. 23, hosting Norfolk State (7-4, 4-2) would have been a victory against FAMU given the Bison's victory in Tallahassee. Hampton could claim championship rings if the Wildcats lose Saturday but manage a victory against FAMU and Hampton sweeps its last two conference games against North Carolina A&T and Morgan State.

The Bison enter the game on a 3-7-1 decision in Virginia.

What if? What if the Bison defeat a second-ranked Bethune-Cookman team that struggled last week without the MEAC's rushing leader, (249.6 yards per game), Junior All-American quarterback Alonzo Mourning.

With a bevy of question marks in the conference, the Bison (6-3 overall, 4-2 MEAC) have a chance to claim at least a portion of the MEAC crown with victories in their final two games. In Virginia against first-ranked Bethune-Cookman (9-1, 5-1) this Saturday and Nov. 23, hosting Norfolk State (7-4, 4-2), Hampton and Florida A&M could claim championship rings.

As a child, there was a time when one could come in for a good bead dawn if these jeans managed to come off at school. By the time school started dirty, Furthermore, a thorough cleaning required a thorough amount of work that requires the same amount of work. With the dirt, grime, and dirtiness that comes with the hottest denim fashion.

Today, more and more consumers are opting for denim clothing with frayed edges, worn-out areas, and a general look. This trend dates back to when Levi Strauss came into the market with the aim to create something that would gain so much attention. Today, denim has become a major part of the fashion industry.

Many students complain that after going to the Smithsonian to satisfy educational requirements, there aren't many other things to do in the city. However, the Smithsonian Castle remains a popular destination for students and visitors.

The Smithsonian Castle is located right off of the Metro in the center of the National Mall. The Smithsonian Information Center is the focal point of the 19 museums under its umbrella, including the National Museum of Natural History, the National Museum of American History, and the National Air and Space Museum. The Smithsonian Castle is a popular attraction with visitors.

The Smithsonian Castle is also a great place to explore the various museums located within the center of the National Mall. In addition, Soulsa, a salsa dance event, is currently being held at the Smithsonian Castle.

The Smithsonian Castle is the perfect destination for students and visitors looking for something to do in the city. With its convenient location and bustling atmosphere, the Smithsonian Castle is a must-visit destination for any visitor to Washington, D.C.

"This is a great way to relax for a few affordable price. My hair looks great and pedicure, I absolutely love it."

Holland was also pleased with her day at the salon. "With all of the services I've received today, they've been right the first time, 100 percent of the time."

Wright prides herself on giving back to the D.C. area and her alma mater. She has provided off-campus housing for Howard University students over 13 years. She also provides free haircuts to area welfare workers, since opening the salon in February 2001. She also provides two services at the Howard Homecoming fashion shows for the last two years.

"I remember when I used to get my hair done," Wright reminisced. "I felt confident and good about myself. I want to give that feeling to others."

"I have noticed that more students are feeling the dirty denim and turn up look, but I don't understand why people spend all their money on clothing with holes in them."

Wright currently owns a pair of Gap jeans with holes in the knee that were not there before. "They just got that way over the years," Ware said.

In today's denim market, consumers must not worry about obtaining the perfect comfort level in the rigid, classic fitting jeans of yesterday.

Along with the specialty look of the distressed jean, the worn-to-fade is also becoming a trend among Autumn Denard, a junior marketing major who is employed at Diesel.

There is a whole new comfort level in the new styles of jeans that are out now. Even no two pairs are alike, they make consumers feel like, "This pair was made just for me," Denard said.

Trended and worn, today's dirty denim is the hottest way to keep your wardrobe sharp and dainty. This trend is one that suits both men and women, for individuality is comfortable.

University Infringements on Privacy of Professors

Did you know that professors at Howard are required to report any other jobs, whether paid or not, on their yearly tax form? Some may feel that this is a reasonable policy, but being the analytical and investigative journalists that we are, we have to wonder why.

One of the most important principles that Americans enjoy is the right to privacy. The right to privacy is the right to use our money as we see fit. To require a professor to report something as personal as her income is an infringement upon one’s right to privacy.

Many professors at Howard have careers outside of their positions at Howard. Some political science professors may work for the government and an architecture professor may be working on a new shopping mall. Outside jobs should have nothing to do with professors’ salaries.

Our View: Professors should not have to report other jobs to the University.

What are the implications of this requirement? We hope this policy does not have anything to do with the salaries they will receive from Howard. That is something private and it seems to have no relevance in relation to a professor’s compensation at Howard.

If it does, however, that is unfair. Matt evolution is implemented by a mass of policy makers inquiring minds want to know.

Black Football Coach Booted Out

Though it is the year 2002, racism is still palpable all over the United States. Perhaps the most blatant display of discrimination against blacks in sports is the fact that at least 117 schools in Division I-A football, only four coaches are black.

With the recent dismissal of Michigan State Head Coach Bobby Williams, black number has declined to two.

Many say that black people are quick to use the race card whenever something like this happens. That may or may not be true, but in this situation, the circumstances surrounding the firing of Bobby Williams are clearly indicative of unfairness.

For several weeks, Williams presented the image most of previous Michigan State coaches who were not fired for it. Just when we began to see signs of progress through the fact that the school had hired its first black coach ever, Williams was fired after his second season against Bethune-Cookman.

Our View: The firing of Michigan State Head Coach Bobby Williams was reprehensible.

With the number of black coaches in Division I-A football being incredibly disproportionate to the number of black players, it is suspicious that the first black coach at a public Big Ten University would be fired so quickly.

Can we assume now that every coach with a less than perfect record will be fired? Probably not. So why was it so easy to get rid of Williams?

To further the question of Williams’ dismissal, we can look at the man’s record. In his coach for university athletics such as the Missouri, Eastern Michigan, and Ball State, he is a winning player. As a senior player, Williams was an honorable mention All-Big Ten selection.

Evidently he was identified for the job, so why did the University fail to keep faith in him and give him more time?

According to a trustee at Michigan State, the firing was unexpected. Looking at the facts, we’d have to wonder.

We need to speak out against such unjust acts. Change has been too long overdue for us to sit idly by; to just be matched away whenever it is finally noticed.
