Black Farmers Make History with Cuba

By Tara Curtis

With the assistance of the NAACP, the National Black Farmers Association (NBFA) reached an historic agreement with the Cuban Government last week.

The agreement was part of the NAACP’s efforts to aid black farmers in finding business in new and emerging markets. With this agreement, Black Dairyman’s will have full access to Cuba’s $15 billion agriculture market.

According to a press release by the NAACP, Pedro Alvarez, director of the NAACP Washington Bureau, said that it was a historic agreement.

The agreement was made plans to purchase over 3 billion of food from black farmers in the next year.

African-American farmers and small businesses in the U.S. government has been difficult and they have been left out of the distribution.

Some black farmers said they were getting assistance from the U.S. government and have been forced to look for alternative means to sell their food.

Maryland Gov. Elect Accused of Illegal Poll Practices

By Christopher Reader
Contributing Writer

On Tuesday November 5th, Baltimore County Governor-elect Robert L. Ehrlich, Jr. made history when he became the first Republican to win Maryland’s gubernatorial race in thirty-six years, soundly defeating Democratic incumbent John V. Youngs, while Kathleen Kennedy Townsend made history as the first woman gubernatorial candidate.

Governor-elect Ehrlich and his election campaign are being investigated for illegally soliciting workers to distribute materials on Election Day petitioning voters in an effort for Ehrlich. Under Maryland law, it is illegal to pay people to work at the polls. The investigation into his campaign’s behalf of a candidate or political organization on the day of the election while the polls are open.

Three people from Washington D.C. filed a complaint that, on Election Day, they were handed out Ehrlich fliers in Frederick County, Maryland college, high school, and junior high students are complaining that they have not been paid, as promised by their campaign organizers, for handing out fliers promoting the winner gubernatorial candidate. These allegations are the only source to involve illegal activities on behalf of Ehrlich’s successful campaign.

Do you think the resources in the iLab are sufficient?

By Veronica-Marie Miller Contributing Writer

It is becoming more and more difficult for Howard students to get sufficient use of the Student Activity and Recreation Center's Information Technology Center. The difficulty does not lie with the equipment or computers themselves, but stems from a problem of computer allocation.

The iLab, a part of the Pre-Physical Therapy Focus Program, is available to students who generate a student ID card. The lab is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, to students for use. However, students are only allowed access to the lab if they have a student ID card with them.

As in most places, the situation in Ghana depends on how much money there is as well as your individual environment.

Poverty here is different from poverty in the United States. In the U.S. poverty means being below the poverty line, but in Ghana poverty is literally being on the edge of starvation and being hungry, (20). Many of the poor in Ghana are able to find a job because of the很难

Spotlight: 'Warm Nights' Homeless Shelter

By Kirby Posey
Contributing Writer

As the inclement weather in the Washington, D.C. area begins to chill, the homeless are faced with an increased need for shelter. With the arrival of the winter months, the temperature drops and the wind increases, making it difficult for the homeless to find a place to stay. In response to this need, the "Warm Nights" homeless shelter is offering a solution.

"Warm Nights" is a program designed to provide shelter and support to homeless individuals. The shelter is open from November 15 to March 15 and offers food, clothing, and a safe space to spend the night. The shelter is located at 123 Main Street, in the heart of the city.

"We believe that everyone deserves a safe and warm place to sleep, regardless of their circumstances," said John Smith, a volunteer at "Warm Nights." "Our goal is to provide a safe and welcoming environment for all who need it."

BANDICOOT... NEXT 5 KM

By Jonathan Grannum

It wasn't until 1979 that the bandicoot, known as the “sleepy marsupial,” was recognized by the world as a valuable source of exceptional beauty by Captain James Cook, who recorded the bandicoot in several scientific journals and a botanical record.

Approximately 200 years after that, Australia became a Commonwealth Country, and the bandicoots were much more in the public eye. Australia makes use of several species in their wildlife and is divided into three large groups: aquatic, semi-aquatic, and terrestrial. These also exist in the planet’s climate zones and represent the environment in Australia.

Today, the bandicoot is the official animal of the state of Queensland. It is the only species of bandicoot to have a large population, and it is the only bandicoot to have a large population in the world. The white lining density in the world has not been determined, but the bandicoot is a large animal.

Bandicoots are good-natured animals, and they are great for children. They are often found in arid areas, but they are also found in forests and mountains.

They are also known to be good runners and can travel up to 500,000 people to the sea, which is a celebration of gay and lesbian rights and equality.

The bandicoot is also known for its unique distribution. Standing as the sixth most common marsupial in the world, they have been found in several scientific journals and literature. They are known for their adaptability and a potential for survival in harsh environments.

The bandicoot is also considered to be one of the largest species of marsupials in the world. It is the only marsupial in the world that can survive in extreme environments, and it is the only marsupial that can live in desert conditions.

In conclusion, the bandicoot is a unique and diverse animal that is a symbol of the beauty of Australia. It is a symbol of the resilience of the Australian people and their ability to adapt to challenging environments. It is a symbol of the richness of Australian wildlife and the beauty of the country.
Students at Maryland's largest university are struggling with falling enrollment and persistently low graduation rates. The university's administration is under pressure to address these issues, which have been identified as challenges in recent years. The decrease in enrollment has affected the university's revenue, which is used to support student services and programs. The administration is considering various strategies to increase enrollment and improve graduation rates, such as offering more online courses and expanding outreach efforts to high school students. Additionally, the university is working to diversify its student body and provide more support for underrepresented groups to ensure a welcoming and inclusive environment for all students. Overall, the university is facing significant challenges and is working to find solutions to improve its academic and financial performance.
STUDENT TRUSTEE EVENT POORLY ATTENDED IN WEST TOWERS

The student trustee event was poorly attended in West Towers. The event, titled "Host Talk with Maryland," was held on November 15, but few students turned up. The trustees had hoped to engage in a meaningful dialogue with students, but the turnout was disappointing.

"We want to build a greater focus on Republicans in the next set of elections," said Johnson. "This is good to see an organization that I respect at the University of Texas," Newkirt said.

NAACP HELPS BLACK FARMERS, CUBANS

The NAACP helped black farmers and Cubans, providing them with food and agricultural products from U.S. farmers. The ability of the black farmers to reach an agreement with Cubans was due largely in part to the support of the NAACP.

"We have already passed out surveys to more than 300 students," said Porter. "We want to keep students involved in the processes and to make sure they are informed."

SECURITY CONCERN FOR AREA UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

The Campus Police stressed that it is important for students to keep in contact with the police in the event that there is a problem situation.

"What about the questions on campus police, students shared a different view," Junior Darnisha Smith said. "The questions are not often heard, but we need more of them."

Howard Student Starts Company, Records CD

By Tracey Austin

Student, entrepreneur, innovator, "multicultural"—all of these titles may seem to describe a variety of individuals engaged in interesting subcultures, but in reality, they describe a variety of traits that one individual has made his career.

Omar Clennon, a.k.a. "Super Fuzz", is a Howard University student and architecturally oriented student who, by the age of 22, has managed to accomplish much.

He is an award-winning design student, and was selected by Carnegie Mellon to participate in a graduate school internship.

He was also selected by Howard University to visit Germany and participate in an urban design charrette put on by the world famous Brandenburg Gate.

But above all, Clennon is the CEO and founder of Zero Gravity, a "worldwide entertainment conglomerate" with a Caribbean theme that is seeking to create a brand new genre by using vehicles such as music, films, fashion and comedy.

His latest feat, he has just released an album "Generation Z", which in the first week sold 25 copies and on several other campuses, is now available in the Howard University's campus Washington, D.C. area campuses.

The album is being supported by an innovative and creative promotion and advertising strategy.

The strategy entails attracting young people to zero gravity by highlighting the Zero G name in social media and a "brand-up" tactic (as opposed to a countdown) that will continually update the public on the progress of the album's sales.

These flyers are deliberately posted at chosen locations on various Washington, D.C. area universities campuses as the first target market for Zero Gravity. "Generation Z" is college students.

Clennon has leveraged his relationship with the local Caribbean community and Caribbean students to sell and promote his albums.

However, Zero G and the album "Generation Z" are bound to become well-known and popular amongst people of all nationalities.

The foundation of the "Generation Z" genre is Jamaican and Reggae music.

Clennon is a Jamaican who received much of his inspiration from reggae music.

In addition to his Jamaican background, Clennon also credits his dad's "cross-over appeal" to his international experiences.

Clennon has lived in Canada, where he played and "skatedboarding, rock music, listening skips".

Clennon, Jamaican, Canadian, and present day "cross-over appeal" has allowed him to be the innovator behind a brand new cultural experience that he wishes to share with the public so we all may live by the concept of "Generation Z", an ultimate cultural and entertainment experience.

"Zero Gravity is a new way of thinking, an innovation of my experiences representing something that has never been done before," said Clennon.

He identifies VP Records and Island Records as his models for success and his competitors.

However, he forecasts Zero Gravity going against the accomplishments of these two very powerful record labels.

Clennon began his career in the music industry as a local DJ in his neighborhood in Jamaica at the tender age of seven.

He began to build his popularity and recognition throughout the years and became one of the most popular musicians such as jeans/keyboard, and his "DJ" instrument, the guitar.

Zero G has been a vision of Clennon's for many years and it has been growing for its launch since.

However, the official launch of Zero G occurred just earlier this summer (2002). Clennon compares himself to a busineeswoman and Island/Reagan's inner self and founder, Curtis Blackwell as an artist in the reggae/rock music industry.

"The Blackwell has accomplished much. Clennon also gains his motivation from the likes of Eric Clapton, Jimmy Hendrix, and Eric Clapton, who he identifies as "the greatest guitarists that ever lived", and Eric Clapton, who he identifies as "the greatest person living at this time."

Another year and almost the end of the year is where Clennon believes that he has accomplished much in the music industry. His father was a jazz enthusiast, chemical engineer and businessman, who had many business interests including the ownership of gas stations in Jamaica.

Clennon is looking to add some talented individuals to his management team who are skilled in the same areas of entertainment that Zero G includes in its business model.

"These individuals should be Jamaican, Caribbean aficionados, and leaders of Caribbean culture and entertainment while being creative, versatile and willing to explore creative and innovative artistic forms."

In terms of artists for his record label, Clennon feels that there is not one specific type of artist that he looks for. He just seeks talent and believes that talent is an important element involved in leveraging that talent.

He says that it is, "secondary when you are where you're from and what you look like. Becoming Zero G is about creating a synergy of different cultures and senses.

Clennon also says, "The most important thing in terms of artistry is finding your voice and being distinctive -- who are you, why should anyone listen to you, and what are you trying to say?"

In one year, Clennon plans to promote Zero G in a larger national scale while running his record label steadily and progressively.

In three years, Clennon plans on integrating the film aspect of his business into Zero G with a movie completed.

Long-term goals include global propagation and becoming the leaders in their field in approximately ten years.

Drumline: Halftime is Game Time

By Rhasheena Sweating Hilltop Staff Writer

Although the marching bands at historically black colleges are among the most popular and well-known elements of college life, few film critics have ever made a documentary about them. The new "Drumline" places the spotlight on one of the most overlooked and historically black college traditions, the marching band.

The previously unexposed power of the brass, percussion, and body movement that defines the black college marching band experience. "Drumline" literally brings the audience into the marching band grooves of the south. The documentary highlights the vocal ability of DeVon Miles (Nick Cannon), as he is recruited by Atlanta A&T's marching band with a one-on-one encounter with what could have been an egregious rule violation.

Drumline: A powerhouse of talent and national recognition, the band is the climax of the black college football game, oftenightly thrusts the audience into the stands of the typical black college football crowd, a world of young adults who care about the success of their team, and can even affect the election results.

Drumline, a new movie, depicts the lives of members of a black college band. Overall, "Drumline" is a must-see movie.

Too Little Turkey Time

Finally, it’s that time of year again - the time to get together with family and friends and visit home for the Holidays. While students enjoy their sights (and sometimes sex) set on turkey, ham, candied yams, macaroni and cheese, stuffing, and all the fix-in’s that go along with the feast, the spark of the season is dampened by the thought that this won’t last long. After the feast, the student body as a whole will have an opportunity to reflect on the importance of family. But with only two days to be exact, and really three considering traveling time, they opt to stay here or go with a friend who lives nearer. It’s unfortunate that so many are unable to be with their families on a day when we reflect on the importance of that family. But with the week of Thanksgiving off regardless of the fact that classes are being held. Some teachers have tended to take the week of Thanksgiving off immediately after the holiday. They opt to stay here or go with a friend who lives nearer. It’s unfortunate that this wasn’t last long.
