The NAASA is a cross-country the Howard University chapter from the Student Senate is the body that represents the Howard University student body to the university and other institutions on political, economic, and community issues. Dr. Robert Palmer, an economics professor and a member of the faculty, said the delegation represents the Howard University student body.

The students will be traveling to the assembly to present the petition and to discuss other issues, such as the university's financial situation and the importance of tuition payments. The delegation will also have the opportunity to meet with other students from across the country and discuss the issues that are important to them.

Model assembly as learned experience

The students are preparing for the assembly by researching the issues that are important to them. They are also practicing their presentation skills and learning how to effectively communicate their ideas to others.

The delegation will be led by Dr. Palmer, who has experience in the field of economics and has a strong understanding of the issues facing the university.

The delegation's experience at the assembly will provide them with valuable insights and knowledge that they can apply in their future careers. They will also have the opportunity to network with other students and professionals, which can lead to future opportunities and collaborations.

The experience will help the students to develop their leadership skills, critical thinking abilities, and communication skills, which are essential for success in any field.

In conclusion, the delegation's experience at the assembly will be a valuable learning opportunity for the students. They will gain new insights and knowledge that they can apply in their future careers, and they will have the opportunity to network with other students and professionals. The delegation's experience will also help to strengthen the university's relationships with other institutions and organizations.

Howard University is probably the most prestigious black university in the country, and has certainly produced some of the most public black figures in the country today. Few would dispute that Howard is a lion for black people everywhere to voice our collective aspirations and experiences. It is understood that there are often many conflicts and workfolds that the administration or council of black students, faculty, and students. University stresses family
By Kenneth Olson
Hilltop Staff Writer

What organizations describes a group of people, that create a sense by sharing common ideas and interests to improve the relationships of the community? The organization is Ubiquity.

Ubiquity, which was founded in 1971, is a social community organization based in the Greensboro area. The group has a strong commitment to the well-being of the family, and more specifically, they believe in the African concept of the extended family. A strong family is essential for the development of the community. The organization is made up of men and women by positive interaction, which is a key component in the success of Ubiquity.

Ubiquity began primarily as an annual book drive for the refugees fighting against apartheid in South Africa, and with the elderly among other programs. "We call ourselves the family," said President of Ubiquity. "We are fighting to put a hold on the deficit. Mondale is the candidate from across the board."

Ubiquity's community activities include an annual book drive for the refugees fighting against apartheid. Ubiquity's activities have been the focus of the Mondale campaign said. "I wanted to brand my name with an experience and the ability to operate as an efficient President." The campaign has been the most consistently broad-based of the race for the Democratic nomination, and the only five candidates who want to be in the top three, the bottom.

"Blackbirds" ends drama season

By WAYNE E. JACKSON
Hilltop Staff Writer

The Howard University Drama Department is closing its 1983/84 season with an updated version of the 1920's revue "Blackbirds.

Wednesday's show sought to enthrall the audience by providing an educational vehicle to the past in the form of theatrical entertainment of the 1920's -1930's. The sets and costumes were excellent in setting the mood for the production. One could tell that a great deal of thought and time went into the stage preparation.

All of the acts were interesting to a certain extent - with the scenes "Great Auditorium on the Howard University campus" and "Marshall were the Pillars of the entertainment is a very tough job. Sister Miracle." The production was directed by Geoffrey W. Newman and the "Blackbirds" is a revue that should be polished just a bit more. Mixing education and entertainment is a very difficult emotional times to bring about a future in which sensitive issues of the Black community can be heard," stated Dr. Harrell. "The reason so many of our relationships often fail is because we, as Black people, expect too much from our another," began Harrell. "The images we acquire on television are not real. The shows have virtually programmed Black Americans to worry about images other than what we are looking at. and being programmed by the media we would think that in the society that contributes to the problems we hear in our communities," said Harrell in the second half of the seminar. "Even here at Howard we're affected by it, by the various images we are exposed to. "This is the old scenario of the average Black who is picking up the messages of the big house (the big car) and so on. We cannot deliver on these promises of the big house that we see on the tube and this causes friction between us because financially we are not in the position to provide those things," continued Harrell.

The seminar, which was attended by hundreds of the audience exchanged comments and a few of us are running to solve the emotional dilemma of the Black community. After all, much had dropped in godliness, an explode occurred as Howard Matthews, member of the fellowship expressed his frustrations for white women.

According to Matthews, "I feel like a rat man when I'm dealing with white women. White women seem to appreciate the loving, the cutting, and the giving in a relationship without believing you are a pushover; and all the qualities that we regard for a sister, they do not seem to find them only in white women." Matthews, To tell you the popular phrase, one word aCts as a thousand picture - that sentence of sister filled many a fan as Matthews continued his statement, "a lot of Black women just cannot accept kindness or love without thrusting the situation, and I've just come to the conclusion that you just can't be good to a Black woman."

In the closing statement concerning Black relationships, Dr. Harrell stated his own opinions on interracial dating: "Any young black man who goes to remain black over his own in the position to provide those things...and I've just come to the conclusion that you just can't be good to a Black woman."

In conclusion of its four part series "Love, Sex, and Marriage: Can Diaspora deal with Peter Par?" Dr. John Harrell, a professor of psychology wrote on the controversial and often sensitive issue of Black love relationships in Radio Chapel this past Friday.

The series sponsored by John Osio; Howard University Christian Fellowship. "It is essential in such difficult emotional times to bring about a future in which sensitive issues of the Black community can be heard," stated Dr. Harrell. Netters start season

By MARK CHISOLM
Special to The Hilda

The Howard University tennis team started its spring sojourn yesterday and will play matches in North Carolina, Georgia and Florida returning March 24.

The Netters (0-5) will play a grueling nine matches in nine days interspersed with long drives. Coach Eddie Davis is optimistic that he can withstand the spring trip with a winning record despite a variety of difficulties this season.

"We have lost four players this last season: Jeff James and Steven Mitchell were declared academically ineligible, and former No. 1 Lance Johnson and No. 2 Raymond Berkley quit the team citing philosophical differences. Although, I expect the new faces will fill in for us, and we want to have a winning record this season," stated Davis.

The team is very young sporting two freshmen Nos. 3 Earl Lewis and No. 4 Joe Mejia as well as having two players that are first year starters. Alan Karnes and No. 3 Scott Simmons, James Simmons and Kevin Proctor, both seniors provide the leadership and confidence that talented young team members need.

"Playing top collegiate teams like Florida, University of North Carolina at Charlotte and University of Pennsylvania, except for our teammates, is indicative of their positive mental attitudes and tenacity," stated Davis.

Bison coach continues weightlifting program

By EDWARD R. LEWIS

The Bison's coaching staff and players are continu- ing to work on their off-season program, according to Coach Earl Hines. "We have to be stronger. But, at the same time, we don't want to run over the league," said Hines.

"Last year we had guards that were 6-foot 4-inches and played on both ends, know how to paw the defense, because of their youth and strength...''

The next echelon of players in the lineup are the freshmen. "They don't have the luxury of the above-mentioned two. They would be in alphabetical order to avoid a standout. Right, Sam Brown of Kentucky, Ben Carter of Maryland, Michael Cup of San Diego State, Stuart Gray of Iowa, Wayman Tisdale of Oklahoma, and Melvin Turpin, also for the Wildcats of Kentucky."

Patrick Ewing, I feel, will blossom this year for the University of Georgetown. "He's going to be great. He has the speed of a point guard. He's going to score 30 points a game. He will be a difference maker. He will play at a very high level.

"This is going to be a year of growth for team. There are two-one half hours set aside a day for team. We have to give the team enough time to concentrate more on their lifting," said Hines.

"We can't expect the team to fare well lifting and condition, because as a team we have to be stronger. But, at the same time, we don't want to run over the league," said Hines.

"Our most important thing is team chemistry. We will be strong in the post because we have a lot of size."
