Rice Backs Bush on Affirmative Action Stance

By Kerry-Ann Hamilton

The presidents who decided that they would boldly intervene in the滨州 case, added in an interview on how best to diversify college ranks, said that the president has done it in exactly the same way and is fully supportive of what he has chosen.

The former Stanford President, who said that the issue was a strong one for diversity, did not plan to involve the university further, initially.

*However, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, who had President Bush's position on the foreign policy, is a strong one for diversity. The University of Michigan Board of Regents, in its underlying opinion, was a strong one for diversity.

Jeremiah Wright Delivers Powerful Sermon

By Melanie R. Holmes
Contributing Writer

The Reverend said many people look for a religion that will meet their needs, make them happy, and possibly make them rich. He suggested that those people buy into the Burger King theology of a "happier, better world."

Wright continued his sermon "President Bush confuses religion with politics. What should be worshipful?" Wright said, "That is government-sponsored religion.

Government-sponsored religion is wrong. He is a strapped-up policieman, not the government of this nation. He is a human being, not the government of this nation.

Until you are willing to spend as much money on AIDS and education as you are seeing for Osama bin Laden, then I'm going to keep preaching what I'm preaching.

Wright said, "As soon as you are willing to do every child's brain into a destroy- ing machine like that, only then I'm going to keep preaching what I'm preaching.

Wright discussed other issues such as affirmative action. He condemned the president's actions in that action vote.

A Azerbaijan, standing ovation concluded the sermon.

Student, Ciarie Smith, a freshman business management major, enjoyed the service.

"I felt it was very relevant. I found a pattern of evil going on with the war."

Wright received his bachelor and master's degrees from Howard University. He is the author of several books, including "What Makes You So Strong" and "A Black Congregation in A White Society."

Bison Weighing In

The Death Penalty Continues to Speak Controversy

By Janelle Williams
Contributing Writer

er. The system of capital punishment is one that has been widely debated for many years. Many human rights organizations, such as Amnesty International and the Campaign to End the Death Penalty, have been advocating for the abolition of the death penalty.

Many Howard students are concerned with the death penalty and are willing to take action to end it. One of the most recent events was Governor Ryan's decision to halt the use of the death penalty in the state of Illinois. Ryan's decision was met withmixed reactions, with some individuals supporting the move and others opposing it.

In the wake of Ryan's decision, many Howard students have become involved in organizing campaigns and events to raise awareness about the death penalty and to promote its abolition.

The death penalty is a controversial issue, with arguments both for and against its use. While some believe that the death penalty is a necessary tool for justice and security, others argue that it is an ineffective and inhumane form of punishment.

At Howard University, a number of students are actively involved in organizing events and campaigns to raise awareness about the death penalty and to promote its abolition. In recent weeks, Howard students have been working hard to promote the Campaign to End the Death Penalty and to hold a series of events on campus to raise awareness about the issue.

Dr. Trevor Leiba returned welcomed by SOC Seniors

Diverse is a word that is often used to describe Dr. Trevor Leiba, the new Dean of the School of Communications. Many students and faculty have mixed feelings about his appointment, with some expressing excitement and others expressing concern.

Dr. Leiba was well-respected by his former students and colleagues, and his appointment to the position of Dean of the School of Communications is seen as a positive development for the College. Many students are looking forward to working with Dr. Leiba and are excited about the potential changes that his leadership may bring.

On the other hand, some students and faculty members have expressed concern about Dr. Leiba's appointment, citing a lack of communication and transparency in the selection process. There has been a feeling of uncertainty among some members of the student body, who are concerned about the potential impact of Dr. Leiba's leadership on the College's culture and values.

There are also concerns about the impact of Dr. Leiba's appointment on the future of the School of Communications. Some students are worried about changes to the curriculum, faculty appointments, and student resources, while others are hopeful that Dr. Leiba will bring new ideas and perspectives to the College.

Regardless of these mixed feelings, there is a general sense of interest and curiosity about Dr. Leiba's leadership and the potential changes that may come with it. Many students and faculty members are eager to see how the College will progress under Dr. Leiba's guidance.
Congratulations to the following outstanding Howard students accepted into Teach For America.

They've shown they have the leadership and commitment needed to tackle one of our nation's most challenging problems.

Who gets what and when? Federal Aid Programs Explained

Federal Pell Grants

The award amount does not depend on any financial need, but also does not change if you end up with a full-ride scholarship and the length of time you plan to attend school (less than an academic year). Federal Pell Grants are typically only one time can be awarded.

Pell Grants for the 2009-2010 award year (July 1, 2009 to June 30, 2010) will depend on program funding. The maximum award for the 2009-2010 award year was $5,480.

Stuffed Loans

Who is eligible?

Those who are out a Federal Pell Grant are determined eligible by their schools.

Each year, dependent undergraduate students can borrow from the Federal Stafford Loan Program. Independent undergraduate and dependent students whose parents have applied and are determined eligible for a PLUS Loan can borrow from $6,620 to $10,500.

PLUS Loans (Parent Loans)

Who is eligible?

To be eligible, parents must also have a good credit score. Parents that have more credits can take down the loan for better credits, but cannot be any less than a 500 credit score. The lender may also have the option for more funds compared to the one parent's credit score.

Who is eligible?

Students can borrow up to $5,500 per year, or $4,500 per year as dependent students and undergraduate students with exceptional financial need. Who are eligible?

Federal Perkins Loans

Who is eligible?

Federal Perkins loans can be used for undergraduate and graduate students with exceptional financial need. How much can you get?

Students can borrow up to $5,500 per year, or $4,500 per year as dependent students and undergraduate students with exceptional financial need.

Who is eligible?

Students can choose up to the first 12 months of undergraduate study. How much can you get?

Students must complete an application for financial aid and have completed a financial aid program. Federal Perkins Loans are low-interest (5 percent) loans for students who have serious financial need, and the funding level at their school.

Federal Work Study (FWS)

What is FWS?

A Federal Work Study (FWS) is given out depending on what a student applies, their financial need, and the funding level at their school. How much can you get?

FWS jobs are part time and paid by the hour. Commission and fees are not paid to the employer for each job. In most cases, the funds are provided in the minimum wage stipends, depending on the type of funding.

Demonstrators were for the most part peaceful, as they chanted for peace and an end to the U.S. government's alleged quest for oil.

Although confined to her wheelchair, 97 year-old Louise Franklin was a part of weekend's rally.

The All Japan Federation of Student Council traveled from Japan to be a part of the rally against the pending Iraq war.

The All Japan Federation of Student Council had a contingent of representatives who traveled from Tokyo to attend the march.

Takahiro Saito, Chair of the student council at Tohoku University in Japan, was happy to join with his American counterparts against the war.

"We came from Japan to rally against the Iraq war," Saito said. "I want to say to Bush do not kill innocent Iraq children."

Some rally attendees like Ian Sherr, a junior from University of California Santa Cruz, had a different view on the protest.

"We came from Japan to rally against the Iraqi war," Saito said. "I want to say to Bush do not kill innocent Iraq children."

Some rally attendees like Ian Sherr, a junior from University of California Santa Cruz, had a different view on the protest.

"What the protest does is show the world that as Americans we are not of one opinion," Sherr said. "American people are portrayed as a people standing behind their president. These protests diffuse that thought."

The UCSC junior said he did not think the protest was successful. For many, marches in Washington have become a cliche and have somewhat lost their effectiveness.

"I don't think this march was a success in terms of changing policy," Sherr said. "I don't think Bush or his officials are listening. They may have heard about their positions or up their music level."

The International ANSWER coalition has another anti-war protest planned for February 15 in New York City around the world.

U.S. Park Police arrested sixteen protesters after they jumped over a hip-high barricade.

Ever wonder what a McNugget is really made of? What are the toxic by-products of chicken from your local KFC? According to the animal rights group People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA), a fried chicken nugget contains "200 hairs, and 1.25 shrimp... plus 100 times the arsenic found in the average female adult," according to PETA's website. PETA's mission is "to end all the use of animals for entertainment." PETA is an organization based out of Washington, D.C.

According to PETA, KFC chickens undergo hideous living conditions before reaching the fast-food chains.

"Bomb-making is done on a system that chickens don't pack each other," said Shannon. "PETA's mission is to end all the use of animals for entertainment." PETA is an organization based out of Washington, D.C.

On the other hand, the US Army Corps of Engineers has been trying to do the opposite. "We're trying to get them to change their practices since 2000," said Shannon. "This is why we believe that a better and public secrets should be revealed by the United Nations and its allies." Shannon is the director of the United States Department of Defense's Office of the Program Manager for the Iraq War.

The Iraq War has been called the "war on terror." The United States has been accused of using terror tactics, such as the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Baghdad, to prop up its own interests in the region. From the hills of Alhambra, an ancient royal city rich with historical inscriptions and a fountain of 12 lions — a gift to the Kings (Palacio de los Leones). This fountain is one of the many crown jewels of Granada. There are many titans that contributed to the creation of Granada, but the one that stands out is Queen Isabel. It was her goal to take back the city from the Moors and reunite it under the Christian faith. The city was recovering from a terrible 164-year siege, and the Thames was burning. After the war, Isabel and her husband commissioned the famous architect, Alhambra. The city was reborn, and the Moors were defeated. This is why we celebrate Granada's birthday every February 28.

The many towers and ancient cathedrals seem unreal — like the Spanish bullfights. They are so close to reality that you can almost feel the heat of the sun on your skin. The walls and ceilings of the Palacios de los reyes (Palace of the Kings) are lined with tiles in nacre, with religious inscriptions and breath-taking designs in the Palacio de los Reyes (Palace of the Kings). The government decided that it is time to allow women to become police officers.

The majority of students asked on Howard's campus about Iran's decision to have women police officers were policy, stating, "It doesn't mean women can become police officers, but it does mean that in the future we will be able to hire women to do the job that they are capable of doing." However, the government acknowledged that the increase of crimes committed by women and men is the same, and being deployed as bodyguards for female officers is the same as the men's in other countries.

Security officers with the police force in Iran intend to deploy female officers. The police officers will hold the same titles as male officers, and their promotion and pay will be based on their training and experience. The role of the female police officer will be to ensure the safety of women in the community, and they will also be trained to deal with situations involving women's rights and gender equality.

For the first time since the Iranian Islamic Revolution, the police force in Iran intends to deploy female officers. This is a significant step towards gender equality and women's rights in the Middle East. The police force in Iran is making efforts to ensure that women are not only represented in the force but also respected and protected.

Global Politics

Who Wants to Join the European Union?

By Jonathan Granum

On January 1, 2003, the Czechs voted to join the European Union, making them the first new member state to join the EU. The historic decision was made by the Czech people and their government, and it was a momentous event for the Czech Republic and its people.

The government in Prague, the capital of the Czech Republic, launched a campaign to inform the public about the benefits of joining the European Union. The campaign included various media channels, such as television, radio, and newspapers, to ensure that the message reached a wide audience.

The European Union membership was a significant step towards securing a brighter future for the Czech Republic and its people. It allowed the country to access new markets, improve its economy, and benefit from the advantages of the single market. The EU also provided the Czech Republic with a platform to advocate for its interests on the international stage.

Vladimir Spidla, leader of the Czech Democratic Party, warned the government not to make any promises to the electorate. He stressed that the Czechs had been promised a better life, and that it was up to the government to deliver on those promises.

Lady Bison Triumph Over Lady Bulldogs in The Burr

Tuesday, January 21, 2003

By Monique Marshall

The Lady Bison took on the Lady Bulldogs as the I-Iilltop-

The Lady Bulldogs, led by junior guard Nicole Rector, did some very good defensive work at the beginning of the game. The Lady Bulldogs started with a couple of free throws and then tied it up at 13 when Nicole Rector, 11 points, hit two free throws. The Lady Bulldogs then went on a 7-0 run, as the Lady Bison struggled with scoring. At the end of the first half, the Lady Bulldogs led, 28-20.

In the second half, the Lady Bison came back with a vengeance. They scored 20 points in the first 10 minutes of the second half, and the Lady Bulldogs did not score again until the last 5 minutes of the game. The Lady Bison won the game, 58-50.

Bison Drop Close One At Home

By Thomas Savage Jr.

Sports Editor

The Bison dropped a close game to the Bulldogs of South Carolina State on Saturday. The game was tight throughout, with both teams struggling to find their rhythm. The Bulldogs won the game, 72-68.

The Bison started strong, taking an early lead and holding it until halftime. The Bulldogs came out strong in the second half, scoring 38 points to the Bison's 34. The game was decided in the last minutes, as the Bulldogs made a key shot to secure the win.

The Bison will look to bounce back on Monday when they host the University of Maryland College Park. This will be a crucial game for both teams, as they both look to secure a spot in the MEAC tournament.

and frustrating the Tennessee ability. Gannon ended up running a yard touchdown to tie the game up at 7. Gannon promptly came right back and hit halfback Charlie Garner for a 12-yard touchdown pass to make the score 14-7. The 37-year-old Gannon found Drew Bennett for a 17-yard touchdown pass to tight end Doug Jolley with only one minute left to play.

McNair found McNair completed 4 of 7 passes for 86 yards and a touchdown. In the third quarter, McNair connected for a 17-yard touchdown pass by quarterback Brad Johnson with 3:12 left in the game, cutting Tennessee's lead to 17-10 going into the 4th quarter. McNair ended up on fourth down and took off for a 33-yard field goal and a nine-yard touchdown pass to make the score 14-7.

McNair's second quarter field goal was the Titans' first lead. But the worst wasn't over. McNair's second quarter field goal was followed by another field goal and a nine-yard field goal to tie the game up at 7. Gannon promptly came right back and hit halfback Charlie Garner for a 12-yard touchdown pass to make the score 14-7. Tennessee went on to take a 3-0 lead after a Jon Smith field goal and a nine-yard Micahel touchdown pass, but that's where the trouble began for the Titans. Tennessee tailback Robert Holmes fumbled on his team's next possession, and the Raiders recovered on the Tennessee 20-yard line. Oakland took advantage of this great opportunity as Gannon went on to throw a 33-yard touchdown pass to tight end Doug Jolley with only one minute left to go in the half that gave the Raiders a 21-7 lead. But the worst wasn't over for Tennessee, as talkback John Stinton fumbled the ensuing kickoff. The Raiders recovered, and it allowed Oakland kicker Sebastian Janikowski to nail a 37-yard field goal to give Oakland a 24-7 lead at the half.

In the 3rd quarter, a Janikowski field goal gave the Raiders a short-lived 10-point lead as Tennessee rumbling back made a 13-yard field goal to make the score 24-10.

Tampa Bay Buccaneers defended the odds Sunday as they passed their way to a 27-10 win over the Philadelphia Eagles 27-10 before 66,900 people in the last game ever at Veterans Stadium in St. Louis, Missouri. Tampa Bay quarterback Brad Johnson played well, throwing for 250 yards, a TD and an INT, while Philippi's Donovan McNabb completed 6 of 13 passes for 49 yards and an interception.

In the beginning of the third quarter, Philadelphia Eagles kicker David Akers did respond with a 43-yard field goal to make the Eagles 9-3. The Eagles took 41-0 on the road for the Buccaneers, who had been eliminated from the playoffs at the hands of the Eagles the last two years. On the opening kick-off, Tampa Bay's pump fake was blocked by Eagles' receiver Keyshawn Johnson with 2:28 left in the quarter. The Buccaneers were 38-9 in Super Bowl XXXVII.

While the Tampa Bay Buccaneers were becoming the year's champagne winner of the National Football Conference, a different champion was being recognized with a retirement banquet for 32 years of service, several induction into the Armour Boulevard Championship. "Stumpy" Miles served as an assistant from 1970 until 1973, and a full-time professional in the University of Newark, New Jersey was a trainer for the men's baseball team as well. Under his care, the soccer teams went to three NCAA Championships in 1971, 1974, and 1976 and were crowned the National Champions in 1974. As players and personnel to show appreciation for his 32 years of service, the Miles himself was overcome with emotion as he accepted his plaque from the Newark, New Jersey University soccer team.

We understand that Stumpy's influence reaches long outside of Howard University, and the former soccer captain, Miles witnessed and prepared many ankles and preparing for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, team, many endays and preparing countless think both instated athletes. Ian Rain, who played soccer from 1971-1975, a 9-1-0 record, and was able to stand with his team in front of the crowd.

"It was a great way to cap our career, Miles added. "It was a great day to see people that have played with us, and I think it's very much a true." Miles added that he was one of the few players that had been to the Super Bowl.

In the beginning of the game, it looked like it would be deja vu all over again for the Buccaneers, who had been eliminated from the playoffs at the hands of the Eagles the last two years. Losing Sight of the Legacy

It is not uncommon for Americans to lose sight of the Legacy. While mainstream media may feature a segment or an article about Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday, the struggle for affirmative action in school admission, or perhaps the number of black men in the general population, it is easy to overlook the implications of Dr. King's teachings and actions. Understanding Dr. King can be challenging, but it is crucial to turn on the radio and hear Dr. King's message, as it is a factor in admissions. The struggle is not over and we must uphold the legacy that Dr. King lived for.

Our View:

The Martin Luther King Holiday should be a time to reflect upon the values that Dr. King stood for. This is a time to consider the fact that Blacks represent the majority of people living on or below the poverty level as "living the life." Perhaps there is a lack of importance given to this holiday. Many cities across the nation held parades to commemorate the life of Dr. King. However, there were no events that would reflect the struggles of a war that will kill thousands of civilians, severely cripple the national economy, and strain United States foreign policy. Though, we are glad to see that Mark Barnes will let our dreams flourish and enjoy two dollar drink specials and four hours of entertainment.

The Affirmative Action Debate Continues

With the recent public attention given to the University of Michigan affirmative action case, major White House officials, including Condoleezza Rice, have voiced their views on the highly controversial issue. The Michigan case is essentially about the issue of student discrimination based on the University's use of race as a factor in admissions. The White House has a brief siding with the University of Michigan and Colin Powell cannot undeniably be wavering on the issue because they are Black. With this in mind, imagine our surprise to hear that Rice supports President Bush's so-called "race-neutral" admission policy.

Through Rice's logic, if one considers the fact that Black men in prison is grossly disproportionate to the number of Black men in the general population, it is easy to understand the struggle for affirmative action in school admission, or perhaps the number of black men in the general population. Our View:

We agree with Colin Powell's view on affirmative action and disagree with Condoleezza Rice's support of Bush's policy.
