Drug abuse in sports:
Howard joins move to check athletes

The athletic staff also agreed that the drug-testing program should be complemented with drug counseling and rehabilitation. The most important thing is to make sure the athletes get help, Mills said. William Scott, the University's drug counselor, filled out confidential, untraceable counseling sheets for all athletes entering the program. "The counseling should not be forced," said Shamburger, "the student should initiate it." Among the athletes themselves, expressions of opinion on the drug-testing program vary. One student athlete, who wished to remain anonymous, said: "I feel that the testing is discriminatory. It separates the athletes from the rest of the students, and makes it harder to get into school.

The University's drug-testing plan is not a dispensation to the South African regime. Jay Durrah, a Howard University administrator, said: "I felt that we should be entertaining and show some solidarity with the brothers and sisters in South Africa.

Cheat, agency pledge aid to African health program

By Dorothy Hicks

The U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) has signed a 5-year agreement with the University to provide $500,000 in funding for health-care training and services for the University's health-care professionals, who are also among the University's students.

The University, which is the final stop in its plan, will provide funding for a number of projects for students and professionals, including the University to the University of South Africa. The project, which is being funded by the University, will provide services to the University and others in the region, according to Morgan Gilbert, Chief of Staff to the University President. AID has also allocated $500,000 to the University.

HUSA kicks off political awareness series

By Allen Bethel

The recent Democratic National Convention and the upcoming presidential election have provoked the Howard University Student Association (HUSA) to establish a series of "political awareness" workshops to educate political awareness, according to Student Body President. The workshops will focus on different aspects of political engagement, including local and national politics.

Dixon worked against the reappointment of Edwin Meese for Attorney General and opposed the Reagan administration’s dismantling of the Civil Rights Commission.

At the convention, Dixon expressed his concern that, although black professionals had proven themselves capable of working on the Jackson campaign, the number of black officials involved in Mondale’s campaign was not adequate to ensure black representation.

Duffy said that up until the point of the Jackson campaign, officials usually maintained that blacks did not have the experience to hold high positions in a national campaign. "But he called his campaign the black campaign," she said. "And now you have people who ran a campaign on very little resources, and demonstrated a lot of the national issues, and raised issues that had previously been put on the back burner. These people could offer a lot to the Mondale campaign."

Cheap thrills

Secondhand shopping is something that not too many people have ever done before but, according to Linda White, it can be a very rewarding experience.

"I love secondhand shopping," said White. "I think it's a great way to save money and find unique pieces that you might not find anywhere else."

White, a 1997 Harvard graduate, discovered the world of secondhand shopping while during a leisurely stroll down a fashion magazine. "I was amazed at the selection and the quality of the clothing," she said.

White began to research the benefits of secondhand shopping and found that it is not only cost-effective, but also environmentally friendly. "Secondhand shopping is a great way to reduce your carbon footprint," she said.

White began by asking her friends and family if they would be interested in trying it out. "I was surprised at how many people were interested," she said.

White started a secondhand clothing exchange program at her school and found that it was very popular. "People love the idea of being able to give old clothing a new life," she said.

White said that her secondhand clothing exchange program has been very successful. "I've seen a lot of people who are happy to participate," she said.

White is now planning to expand her secondhand clothing exchange program to other schools in the area.

She also pointed out that consignment shopping offers the ability to

HUSA dedicates flag to student body

By Lisa Yvonne Bynoe

Swinging from the window of the African-American studies room in Founders Library is a flag dedicated to University students by the Howard University Student Association (HUSA) during a Friday afternoon ceremony.

Unlike the American flag, which ends on the main campus, this red, black and green represents Africa and all those of African descent.

The flag is for the black, black is for the color of the skin and green represents the motherland.

Chris Catlett, president of HUSA, said similar stars regarding the purpose of the flag. Catlett said the banner is a daily reminder that the struggle for Blacks is still continuing.

"Be bold for the less than 20 years, leaders such as Malcolm X and Martin Luther King Jr. were fighting for change," she said.

The keynote speaker for Friday's event was William Jackson Bey, a member of the United Negro Improvement Association (UNIA) and the American Community League.

Bey attributed the birth of the African National Flag to Marcus Garvey, who in 1914 founded the UNIA, the oldest Pan-African organization in the world.

"The flag was a symbol of struggle and devotion to the liberation of African people," he said.

Black Voter Apathy

While black voter apathy is common among Americans, it is rampant among blacks and minorities. According to the most recent accounts, there are an estimated 35 million or 36.9 percent unregistered voters nationwide. According to Thomas Cavanaugh, a senior research associate with the Joint Center for Political Studies that is based in Washington, D.C., as of November, 1982, there are currently 3,682,080 unregistered blacks nationwide. Cavanaugh said that this figure indicates that 93.8 percent of the black electorate is unregistered, as compared to 34.1 percent of unregistered whites.

As reported by Cavanaugh, since November, 1982, a poll indicated that only seven percent of voting age blacks have registered since 1982. Reports indicate that the vast majority of unregistered voters are those who are at the bottom of the economic and educational ladder. If we are to survive, black voter apathy cannot continue among the black race. Its continued existence is a threat to the very coming election. Too much is at stake for generations of Blacks and minorities. Ronald Reagan is reelected. Voter apathy must not continue, particularly now that we know how that political and public awareness are the same that will lead us to the proper understanding of the national situation. Recently, the NAACP "Overground Railroad" machined an effort to focus on large cities where voter apathy lies deep in the urban areas. The methods were simple and right on the money. As we stated in a mocked campaign that stated, "Here lies voter apathy." Voter apathy is alarming in view of the present administration's newly implemented policy changes aimed at cutting social programs. Many of the social programs that were once aimed at helping those citizens who were at the bottom of the economic and educational ladder further behind. The conclusion is simple—the Reagan administration's attempts to be rid of the locked out groups is distressing. We must act now, we must register, we must vote.

Massive voter-registration drives were conducted over the summer months through the efforts of militant groups. These efforts met with minimal success. Perhaps Jesse Jackson said it best when he labeled unregistered citizens as "dead rocks just laying around."

We must now focus on the problem of voter apathy. We must begin by going to the heart of the problem, the streets of our large cities. It is there that voter apathy has lain like a disease for many years. The time has come for the disease to be cured.

The voter-registration deadline in the District of Columbia is October 6. In Virginia, the deadline is October 6. The Women's Vote Project will focus on church groups September 9 and 16, setting up registration tables in all parts of the socioeconomic spectrum. In Maryland, voters must register by October 8. In Virginia, the deadline is October 6. The Women's Vote Project will focus on church groups September 9 and 16, setting up registration tables in all parts of the socioeconomic spectrum. We urge all those who want to have a voice in our political system to vote. We ask citizens who are not registered to do so now.

On "Dummp Capitalism?"

My my how bright-eyed figures are for us, especially since, when all is said and done, there is a deeply rooted in mass emotion as opposed to actual objective. But then again, I have been told that there is no objective when one is writing on the subject. An article appears in the 9th edition of The Hilltop entitled "DUMMP Capitalism" the article is a response to a program given by the Howard University Student Association entitled "Political Action: A History of the American Political Parties." The speakers for the program were distinguished Dr. Mary Belch of the Howard University and William F. Kipps of the University of Maryland. The core of the argument is that the political system is broken in the United States and that in the words of Kipps, the political system is broken in the United States.

This issue is not one of government but of society, the states and the people. It is a question of who is in power and how that power is used. The political system is broken in the United States and it is a question of who is in power and how that power is used. It is a question of who is in power and how that power is used.

The Reagan Administration, God's instrument?

The Reagan Administration attaches great importance to spreading a religious cloak over its foreign policy directed against the interest of peace and the security of nations. It does so to exploit the church for an ideological justification of the nuclear arms race, to use the church to lend weight to the West against the "Communist" threat. The tone of the propaganda and the language of Reagan's rhetoric is a giant mis-statement. The people are simply told that communism and materialism are incompatible and that only God and democracy will save them. A peaceful coexistence of capitalism and socialism is impossible in a world where the means of production (land, factory, factory, ore, oil, fishing boats) are owned by the state and not by individuals. The doctrine of the right of the state to own the means of production is simply an assertion of the dominance of the state. The state is the only one pleasing to God. Some American politicians, chiming in with the President, have produced a new interpretation of the scriptural reign of the "god that shall have commerce with man." The reign of god shall be characterized by unity, prosperity, and peace. But for this to happen, there must be a change in the political system, the system of the state. And this change is impossible without the help of God. The state must be a theocracy, a government of God. Hence, it is difficult to uphold the notion of a peaceful coexistence of capitalism and socialism.

According to Curtis Hannon, 21, the group is ready to produce "good, positive, light music that shows we have studied long and hard to get to this point." Although all five musicians hope to return to school, "the group is not right now and there is a lot of money to be made," he said.

Curtis Dew, 21, a keyboard player with the group, commented on the influence of Grover Washington Jr. in the group's performance. "He has been a daddy to us," he said. Hannon added that Washington taught him, "There is always some humility. He taught us that when you get bigger, there is always something to learn.

A 10-year-old bass player and lead vocalist, Randy Bowen, 21, the group's lead bass player, and lead vocalist, proposed that the album be entitled "Fall About It." "I think it will be accepted," he said.

Doubleheaders leave Bison 2-2

By Donna Smiglar

"At the game I was scoring small, but we still need a lot of work," said Tracy Proctor.

Hilton is assuring the Bison's team that if they just stick with their skills they will be successful.

"Well, we're 1 and 1-4 in the first game, which won't hurt us, the Bison get a strong tune-up as pitching from David White," Hilton said. "But we just didn't get a lot on the key situations.

In the second game we played the strawberries and walked over. So I think we want to see what we did, give them a chance to see what they're up against.

Despite the outcome of the game. Hilton said he saw a lot of good things come out of the young players in the second game. He expects that a good number of them will be significant to the success of the scratch team.

The second half came alive, scoring twice in five minutes. Last Thursday, he was no trouble to the Bison.

The Bison were leading St. Francis 1-0 with 10 minutes remaining in the first half. The Bison scored after St. Francis gave them a chance to recover and lose another game.

However, in fact, St. Francis only had three chances at the plate. The Bison got an out of position Silverio on a fly ball.

The Bison ran for a 2-0 lead in the first half. However, with the chance to go ahead but Nigel Grant's slightly rushed shot eight feet out gave an out of position Silverio a chance to recover and lose another game.

The second half started at a pedestrian's pace. Howard was content to play at opponents' standard while St. Francis preferred to counterattack. There was no switching off of the ball from the wings to the center, a move which sometimes supplemented space for Howard's.

One of St. Francis' counterattacks was broken up by a diving catch of a carbon copy of their first pitch.

Successful:

Booters drop match, fall to St. Francis

Hampton spoils home opener, 13-7

By David Richardson

A disappointing offensive and mental tactics cost the Bison in this stretch game. The HOWARDO 13-7 win over Hampton University on Saturday, Sept. 15, was a perfect example of the key to the Hampton's success. The Bison's defense was solid and their offense was erratic. The Bison scored 13 points in the first quarter and 7 in the second. The Bison defense held Hampton to 0 points in the first half and 7 in the second.

The Bison defense was excellent in the first half. They forced 3 fumbles and recovered 2 of them. The defense also held Hampton to 23 total yards in the first half. In the second half, the defense held Hampton to 10 total yards. The defense was led by senior linebacker Malcolm Smith, who had 2 sacks and 1 forced fumble. The defense also had 3 interceptions in the game.

On offense, the Bison were inconsistent. They had 2 touchdowns and 1 field goal in the game. The offense was led by sophomore quarterback Jarrett Forest, who threw for 246 yards and 2 touchdowns. The offense also had 1 interception in the game.

The game started with Hampton scoring a touchdown on their first possession of the game. The Bison responded with a field goal to tie the game. In the second quarter, the Bison scored 2 touchdowns to take a 13-7 lead. In the third quarter, the Bison scored a field goal to extend their lead to 16-7. In the fourth quarter, the Bison scored another touchdown to take a 23-7 lead. The Bison defense held Hampton to 0 points in the fourth quarter.

The Bison will play their next game at home against Virginia Union on Saturday, Sept. 22. The game is set for a 1:00 p.m. kickoff and will be played in Howard Stadium.
