Weather forces students to take extended vacation

After a lengthy stretch of winter break, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Birthday weekend, Howard University students were given three extra days to slip and slide on the deck shown of six inches of snow as the sun basked in the sky; everything else was new.

Clowns were canceled because of the danger that hazardous mutes and sidewalks posed for students and faculty. President Franklyn G. Jenifer said, "student involvement and some of the difficulties of the day."

If PEPCO hadn't asked us to close, then classes probably would have been held,” Jenifer added.

While students and professors enjoyed an extended vacation, most administrative employees were put to work as usual. "We have to get the students registered," said Jenifer, who frequently deals with the operating procedures of the University. "This is the one day of the year where the University is not in session," he said.

The Howard University Policies and Procedures Manual also states that the "normal day for University operations is normal day," and that the "true University of Washington, D.C.," is not in session.

The symbolism of the students' protest on Friday was apparent to Clinton and their classmates in the administration.

"In all great debates there should be clear and distinct ideas," Clinton said. "The symbolism of the students' protest was clear to Clinton and their classmates in the administration."

The student protestors made it clear that they were not there to challenge or disrupt the event, but rather to bring attention to their cause.

"We were very happy to have Dr. Jenifer at the event," Clinton said. "We wanted him to come and talk to the students about their concerns, but we also wanted him to address the administration about their concerns as well."

Scandals, Peace, Campus life. World Views. In its seventy years of existence, The HILLTOP has covered all of this and more. From its first issue on Jan. 22, 1932, the HILLTOP has been the voice of Howard University students news and views of black life on campuses around the world.

The HILLTOP has put forth the views of students, the Administration, the faculty and the Howard University community; it has stood up for the rights of all communities and has stood up for the rights of all people.

This article is dedicated to many journalism textbooks in an example of how the newspaper has gone on to various positions of prominence.

The HILLTOP has profusely impacted the lives of those who have read the newspaper. From its humble beginnings, the newspaper’s coverage of Howard University has been a source of knowledge and inspiration.

The first article in the first issue of the HILLTOP dealt with registration. The article entitled, “Registration in Rain, Hail, and Snow” shed light on the plight of the vendors.

The students are again faced with their monotonous tasks and their time consuming jobs. The students are vended and have to deal with the use of their own hands.

The Hilltop Staff is proud to carry on the legacy that began 70 years ago...

We bring you love, peace and the news weekly. Thank you for your support.

This is your paper, please do not hesitate to drop by and see us in action. If you want to help or if you are just curious – you are welcome any time.

Right to protest?

On a day to honor Martin Luther King Jr. all eyes were on Howard University. The nation's pressing need was to attend this historical celebration with the commemoration of Dr. King's contributions to our struggle for empowerment. President Clinton's presence was an environment that would enhance the atmosphere of higher learning.

Throughout the Radisson Hotel, floating down crackhouse. So what was Cortez Avery's perception of drug free zone. And Avery's environment is in a drug free zone. In a drug free zone Avery was in an environment where drugs and crime is an everyday thing, then he or she would never forgive anyone who made them do it. And ir one never grew up in the community, must address issues of greater concern.

And instead of negotiating professionally with the administration, they decide to embarrass the school before the nation's leaders just to grab the spotlight and attention of their own.

Vendors making money by selling paraphernalia extremely convenient. However, there is no such thing as to the other 500 people.

Leaders and celebrities in the black community such as John Hope and Bill Cosby had a forum on black on black crime two weeks ago to figure out solutions to the problem. In this forum, former basketball champion Mookie Blaylock, along with his manager and one of the administration's greatest minds work at a church in Southeast Washington.

On Howard's campus there are five communities where violent crimes are committed frequently are fed up, and they are willing to do something about it. They are tired of having young children and other innocent people being killed in the Theodore. This is a farmland in the H-Book and be incorporated into the charter of the university.

Certainly, we as a university dedicated to educating our people need our own enterprise, but issues facing many of our students is a matter of concern.

The sad state of this nation's public education system is black males is an unfortunate realization. It is a matter of concern.

Two. four, six, eight we don't want to integrate. Under some people have no choice but to deal drugs.

They yelled, "Jenifer is a house negro." They yelled, "Jenifer not William J. Clinton)."

They have found another way to help stop the violence. Howard and his colleagues purchased the gun. They are tired of having young children and other innocent people being killed in the Theodore. This is a farmland in the H-Book and be incorporated into the charter of the university.

The present urge to protest and rally comes curiously close to election time. The HSA administration seemed to be aimlessly searching for an issue to grab the attention of the vendors and pupils.

President Clinton's presence was embraced by most of the University's student leaders. This issue of vending rights has mushroomed into a battle cry that also calls for changing the nation's public education system.

Whatever issues and events that will occur in the future, and it pertains to Howard University's struggle for empowerment. The Hilltop will be there to record it.

The celebration of our birthday is also a time to remember the importance of a college newspaper such as ours. As with many other papers across the country, The Hilltop is the voice of the community that it serves—yours, the Howard University family. Every week, we choose to print in the newspaper hopefully reflects what is important to you. In part, some of our articles or even columns have been controversial, but it is students who put this paper together, and we try to reflect the Howard students' perspective in our work.

We welcome your letters and comments.

Happy Birthday Hilltop

THE HILLTOP 21ST BIRTHDAY

The Hilltop is Howard University's student newspaper. Founded in 1921, The Hilltop is the oldest student-run newspaper in the country. As the only student-run newspaper on the Howard campus, The Hilltop provides a platform for students to express their views and opinions on various issues. The Hilltop is committed to providing accurate and well-researched coverage of the Howard University community and its students.

Dear Readers,

Welcome to The Hilltop's 21st Birthday celebration. We hope that you enjoy this special edition filled with articles highlighting the history and significance of The Hilltop. Throughout its 98-year history, The Hilltop has played a crucial role in shaping the discourse on campus and beyond.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank our readers, advertisers, and contributors for their support and dedication to The Hilltop. Your continued support is crucial to our mission of providing a platform for Howard students to express their voices and ideas.

As we celebrate this milestone, we invite you to reflect on how The Hilltop has contributed to shaping the Howard University community and the wider society. The Hilltop has been a beacon of hope, a voice of the marginalized, and a platform for social and political commentary. We are committed to upholding these values and ensuring that The Hilltop remains a relevant and essential resource for our community.

Thank you for your continued support and for being a part of The Hilltop's journey. We look forward to celebrating many more birthdays with you.

Sincerely,

PERSPECTIVES

Black pride and Timberlands do not mix

Thomas R. Turner

"For I know the plans I have for you," declares God in Jeremiah 29:11. "Plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and a future." As a young black man growing up in Kansas City, Missouri, I had every intention of following God's plan for me. I was determined to get a good education, find a decent job, and ultimately return to the United States to contribute to the well-being of my community. But in the 1970s, I found myself living in Lagos, Nigeria, teaching English and learning about the struggles of black people in Africa.

At the time, black pride and Timberlands were closely linked. Timberland's advertising campaigns often featured black models, and the shoes were associated with a certain sense of identity and pride among black men. However, as I began to explore the complexities of race and identity in Nigeria, I realized that being black in Africa was not simply a matter of wearing black or sporting Timberlands.

I remember the day I took my first pair of Timberlands to a music shop in Lagos. The owner was a middle-aged black man with a friendly smile. He looked at me with surprise and said, "What are you doing wearing those Timberlands?" I was taken aback by his question. "They're a comfortable shoe," I replied. "And they're a symbol of black pride." He shook his head and said, "No, no. They're a symbol of American imperialism."

I was shocked. How could someone who had lived in America for most of his life not understand the significance of Timberlands for black people? I had grown up with a deep sense of pride in being black, and I knew that wearing Timberlands was a way to express that pride.

In the end, I decided to leave Nigeria and return to the United States. I wanted to find a way to express my black pride that was not contingent on wearing Timberlands. I began to explore other ways to express my identity as a black man, and I found that by doing so, I was able to contribute to the black community in ways that were not dependent on a corporation's advertising campaigns.

As I look back on that experience, I realize that the struggle to express black pride in a meaningful way is still ongoing today. Black people must find ways to express their identity that are not dependent on the latest fashion trend or the latest advertisement. Only then can we truly be free to explore our own individuality and express our identity in ways that are meaningful to us.
You’re in college now. You’re gonna need money. And you’re gonna need it fast. MoneyGram is the best way to have that money sent to you. And since your parents will most likely be doing the sending, you need to educate them about the MoneyGram MoneySaver card.

Tell them they’ll save 10% off our already great rates every time they wire you money. Then tell them they can wire up to $200 for just $12 anywhere in the U.S. That’s $10 less than Western Union.

Mention how MoneyGram gives you a free phone call anywhere in the U.S. and a free ten word message with every domestic transfer. And finally, let them know that when they sign up for the MoneySaver card, MoneyGram will make a donation to America’s Black Colleges Scholarship Fund.

See? Not even graduated yet, and already you’re a genius.

Student conference on South African elections to be held

By Aprila De Wolf

Student leaders in Cape Town have invited 36 students from South Africa and the United States to attend the first ever Student Conference on South African Elections, to be held at the University of Cape Town on June 26/27.

The conference, which aims to provide students with a platform for discussing and debating the elections, is being organized by the University of Cape Town's African Students' Forum, the African National Congress youth league, and the African National Congress Students' League. The conference will feature workshops, panel discussions, and guest speakers from South Africa and the United States.

The organizers are seeking students from all backgrounds and political orientations to participate in the conference. They hope to create a space where students can exchange ideas and perspectives on the elections, and to build a network of young activists committed to democratic change in South Africa.

A Glance Around The World

By Gloria McField

Gloria McField is a freelance journalist based in the United Kingdom. She writes regularly for a range of publications, including The Independent and The Guardian.

United States

Miami — Outgoing Haitian dictator Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier arrived at his New York hotel to seek a new life after fleeing Haiti, according to reports. Duvalier is rumored to be living in New York City with his family.

His return to the United States follows a series of political upheavals in Haiti, including the ouster of Duvalier's predecessor, Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was forced into exile in 1991.

The arrival of Duvalier in the United States has sparked concerns about the safety of his family and the potential for further unrest in Haiti. The U.S. government is reportedly considering options for Duvalier's relocation.

Caribbean

Barbados — Prime Minister Tom` anyone, the leader of the People's Progressive Party, has been re-elected to a third term in office.

The victory is seen as a significant milestone in the country's political landscape, as it marks the first time a political party has been elected to three consecutive terms.

The People's Progressive Party has been in power since 1990, and has been led by Prime Minister Tom` anyone for the past 12 years.

The party has been praised for its economic policies, which have helped to reduce poverty in the country and improve living standards for its citizens.

The People's Progressive Party has also been criticized for its handling of corruption and human rights issues.

Caribbean tourism industry on the rise

Prime Minister Patrick Manning of Trinidad and Tobago has welcomed the continued rise of tourism in the Caribbean.

In an interview with the Trinidad and Tobago Observer, Manning said that tourism is an important industry for the country, and that the government is committed to supporting its development.

Manning noted that the number of visitors to the Caribbean has increased in recent years, with the number of arrivals in 2019 reaching 4.2 million, up from 3.8 million in 2018.

He said that the government is working to improve the infrastructure and services in the tourism sector, and that it is committed to developing the country as a major travel destination.

Slavery in Sudan must be abolished

In an open letter to the United Nations, the African National Congress has called for the immediate abolition of slavery and the end of human rights abuses in Sudan.

The letter, signed by ANC president Cyril Ramaphosa and ANC secretary-general Gwede Mantashe, says that slavery is a violation of human rights and a violation of international law.

The ANC has called for the immediate release of all prisoners of conscience in Sudan, and for the government to end the use of forced labor.

The letter also calls for the establishment of a commission of inquiry to investigate human rights abuses in Sudan, and for the government to adopt a national policy to prevent slavery and human rights abuses.
The purpose of the Lucy E. Moten Fellowship is to enable undergraduate students at Howard University to enhance and enrich their education through short periods of travel and study abroad, usually during the summer months. The awards are determined by the applicant’s plan of study and requirements for study abroad.

ELIGIBILITY

Competition for fellowships is open to currently enrolled students who have maintained a 3.00 GPA and who will have completed 60 semester hours at the time of the award.

DARK SIDES of the sunbeams: tourism among blacks remains alive & well

By Renee Jones
Hilltop Staff Writer

This is a common association with black people, said O’Neal. Los Angeles is one of the top tourism destinations for American blacks. Many of them go there for the sun and the beach, but some also go to visit family and old friends. According to O’Neal, the tourism industry has been growing rapidly in recent years. In fact, tourism is now one of the largest industries in the United States, generating billions of dollars in revenue each year. However, the benefits of tourism are not felt evenly by all groups. For example, many black Americans still struggle to find meaningful employment in the industry, and the lack of diversity in management positions can lead to a lack of representation and understanding of the needs of black tourists.

WHAT THE SUBURBS DON’T TEACH YOU ABOUT THE MECCA

As the plane roared off the California’s John Wayne Airport, the white gentleman in the seat next to me asked where my final destination would be. I was headed to Lagos, Nigeria, a city that I had never been to before. It was a new and exciting experience, and I was looking forward to exploring the city and all it had to offer.

I’m always surprised by how much the world can teach us if we’re open to learning. The suburbs are often thought of as isolating and removed from the rest of the world, but they are actually a microcosm of society itself. They reflect the same struggles and triumphs as the rest of the world, just on a smaller scale.

Some students said that Howard is more liberal than other historically black colleges and universities in the country. One senior music major said she was the victim of bias against black women and ethnic minorities.

Autographed photographs of celebrities cover the restaurant like wall paper. Everyone from the "Five Heartbeats" and the Commodores and Kris Kross and Denzel Washington have been to the grill.

Margaret Coleman, a management analyst for the federal government, has been to the Florida Avenue Grill for the last 20 years.

"The problem with most restaurants is that the service is good and the food is delicious," she said. "I like the food and the service and everyone is satisfied with the food and service."

Autographed photographs of professionals decorate the grill, making it a popular spot for the area's celebrities.

"They keep the service good and the food is delicious," Coleman said. "It's a good place to go and hang out."

The grill's atmosphere is casual and relaxed. During a typical weekend, customers are likely to bring their kids and enjoy a meal as a family.

However, the grill's ambiance is not limited to families. The atmosphere is also suitable for a business lunch or a casual social gathering.

"We have our regulars, but also a lot of people who only come in occasionally," the owner said. "Some of them are friends, and others are just people who enjoy the grill's atmosphere."

The grill is located in the heart of Washington, D.C., and is conveniently situated close to the city's main attractions.

"The grill is a convenient place to meet up with friends or family," the owner said. "It's a great place to catch up and have a good time."

The grill's menu offers a variety of dishes, including burgers, sandwiches, and salads. The restaurant also offers a children's menu, making it an ideal spot for families.

"The grill's menu is diverse and offers something for everyone," the owner said. "We have something for everyone, from meat lovers to vegetarians."

As a former basketball player, the owner has a passion for sports and often incorporates it into the grill's menu.

"We have a lot of sports enthusiasts here, and they love our menu," the owner said. "We have a lot of options for fans of different sports."

Bison lose to Del State, Lee leads Bison to victory

Nickolaus Nicholson

Junior Staff Writer

Howard University athletics is behind because in their senior year. November 2000, when he enrolled at Howard University, he knew he wanted to get involved in football. He wanted to pursue the sport and become a professional athlete. However, he had to make a difficult decision. He had to choose between football and business management. He chose business management because he wanted to pursue a career in the sports industry. He wanted to work in an office setting, but he also wanted to be around sports. He wanted to be part of the sports industry and contribute to it.

For the first time at Howard, the Bison Blacktop will address the students in all majors, shapes, and sizes to join their team. Last season, Wilson introduced his idea about forming a sports club to Nicole Brown, senior advertising major. "We just went from there," he said. Wilson, a senior majoring in business management, had always had a love for sports and wanted to pursue the sport he loved. He had played football in high school, and his family was involved in the sport. He wanted to continue playing football at the college level.

The Bison had only two players score double digits, Forward Sean Taylor led Howard with 13 points. He was followed by forward Art Crowley, who had 12, Tommy Brown, with 11, and center Lloyd Harrison, who had 10 points. As a result, the Bison lost to Del State 68-55 in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference match-up.

The men will travel to Tallahassee, Florida, where they will face Florida A&M University. The Rattlers are the defending MEAC Champions and will be a tough opponent for the Bison.

The NFL Playoffs

At long last, it's here. It's time for the "Hilltop" to get ready for the NFL Playoffs. It's not quite Match Madness, but it's still a big deal for Buffalo Bills fans. The Bills face the Miami Dolphins in Super Bowl XXVIII and Super Bowl XXIX.

This weekend, four teams will square off for the right to claim the title in the National Football League.

The Bills are the defending champions, having swept the Dolphins in Super Bowl XXVII. The Bills are the team to beat, but the Dolphins are not to be underestimated. The Bills are a well-coached team, and the Dolphins are a well-rounded team.

Monica's Pick:

The Bills will win the Super Bowl for the second consecutive year. The Bills have the edge in talent and experience, and they will be too much for the Dolphins to handle. The Bills are the team to beat, and they will come out on top.

Have any sports story ideas you would like to see in The HILLTOP??
