WILLIAM A. JOINER PAPERS

Collection 148-1 to 148-16

Prepared by:
Kenneth S. Lewis
June 1989

Scope Note

The papers of William A. Joiner, (1869-?), were acquired in 1957. They reflect his career as an educator, administrator, attorney-at-law, poet, and author, and span the years 1866 to approximately 1950. They measure seven linear feet.

The papers consist of his writings, both published and unpublished, and include some correspondence which relates to his personal life, his organizational affiliations, and his professional duties as Superintendent of the Combined Normal and Industrial School of Wilberforce University. They also document the existence of various early Black organizations within the Washington, D.C. area with which William A. Joiner was affiliated. Also included are financial and legal papers, and several boxes of photographs. There are a few family papers, most of which pertain to Laura E. Joiner, sister of William A. Joiner, and a 1903 graduate of Howard University Medical School. A ledger which belonged to Rev. E.C. Joiner, father of William A. Joiner, also constitutes part of the documents of this collection. The collection includes documents which pertain to James Lincoln Neill, a Washington attorney, and his family.

Although the collection spans the period 1866 to approximately 1950, it primarily provides coverage of the activities of William A. Joiner from 1892 to about 1927. Coverage of other members of the family is somewhat limited to brief periods.

As an educator Mr. Joiner taught English and Latin at the M Street High School in Washington, D.C. from 1897 to 1903. He was also Director of the Teachers' Training School at Howard University from 1893 to 1910, before leaving for Wilberforce University. His papers include notes, data, and a publication which relates to an early study of the origin and development of colored schools in the District of Columbia within the period 1807 to 1902. These materials contribute to the history of the development of education for Blacks in Washington, D.C. during that time.

Joiners' writings are comprised of poems, essays, a short story, some speeches, and reports which emanate from his professional functions. They also include the original manuscript of his first published work, Our Douglass, as well as holograph and typescript notes of other publications. These publications are listed at the end of this Scope Note.

The collection contains the programs of the activities of various early Black organizations within the Washington, D.C. area. Also included are the minutes of several meetings of the Wilberforcians of Washington, D.C., an organization of alumni and well - wishers of Wilberforce University. The minutes of these meetings, together with those papers which relate to William A. Joiner's period of administration at Wilberforce University, collectively provide a window to the early history of the University.

The financial and legal documents provide evidence of some of Joiner's financial investments, as well as his activities as an attorney-at-law.

Among the other items of note in the William A. Joiner Papers are the Neill Family Papers. These are comprised of some legal papers belonging to James Lincoln Neill, a lawyer who practiced in Washington, D.C. Joiner, as an attorney-at-law, worked on at least one case (as seen in the papers) with James Lincoln Neill, and presumably, they shared office space at some time. The Neill Family Papers also hold the financial records of the Washington Association of Congregational Churches, from 1911 to 1931, of which Ms. Jessie Neill, wife of James Lincoln Neill served as secretary.

Of the photographs found in the collection, some feature William and Laura Joiner at various stages of their lives, as well as other family members and friends. There are also postcard pictures of Haitian personalities, some of whom are Presidents, and, of various Haitian scenes.
