Barry wins majority in District primaries

D.C. picks former mayor over incumbent Kelly, councilman Ray

Democratic Mayoral Candidate Marion Barry

By Kelly Ray and Laura Jason Mays

Hilltop Staff Writer

Marion Barry Jr. picked former Mayor Barry over Black University President Marion Barry Jr. on Tuesday, May 21, 2002, in a close primary election that was decided by a narrow margin. The race was considered a key test of the current political climate in the District as voters choose their next mayor in a time of economic challenges, crime, and political scandals.

Barry, who served as the city's mayor from 1978 to 1991, faced stiff competition from incumbent Marion Barry Jr., who held the position since 1991. Barry, known for his strong leadership in the community, had a campaign strategy that focused on his experience and record of achievements. Barry Jr., on the other hand, emphasized his role as a community leader and his ability to connect with the voters.

The election results showed that Barry, who was widely supported by the community, won with a narrow margin of about 500 votes. The final tally was Barry with 45% of the vote, Barry Jr. with 43%, and Thomas R. Gordon with 12%.

Barry's victory was a significant triumph for his campaign, which had faced challenges in the lead-up to the election, including a series of personal scandals and allegations of corruption.

Washingtonians react favorably to Barry's historic political comeback

By Derrick M. Dennis

In response to former Mayor Marion Barry Jr.'s 'Third Strike' victory making him the District of Columbia's only rectangular mayor, councilman Ray called the maneuver a smart political play. Barry, who served as the city's mayor from 1978 to 1991, is now poised to return to the top of the district's political hierarchy.

Ray described Barry's victory as a testament to the city's resilience and its ability to overcome challenges. "This is a true victory for the people of the District," Ray said. "Barry has shown that he can lead the city and continue to be a strong voice for the community."
ISAS upgrades University

By Martin G. Bryan, Jr

Without the Office of Information Services, George Mason University might very well be in a heap. OIS is responsible for furnishing data networks, telephones, computer support, and administrative services for the university. OIS is responsible for furnishing the most modern technology to the university, and that service is called ISAS (Information Systems and Academic Support). ISAS is responsible for providing a wide range of services to the university, including academic computing, administrative systems, and academic services.

One area of the university that has been improved by ISAS is the academic computing. OIS has installed new software and hardware to improve the efficiency of the university's computing systems. This has included the installation of new servers, the implementation of new software, and the development of new processes to improve the performance of the computing systems. The new systems have improved the performance of the computing systems, allowing the university to provide better service to its students.

The second major area is the application of technology. OIS has been able to improve the performance of the computing systems by providing better service to its students. This has included the installation of new software and hardware, the development of new processes, and the improvement of the performance of the computing systems. The new systems have improved the performance of the computing systems, allowing the university to provide better service to its students.

"Howard University is currently working on a number of projects that are designed to improve the performance of the computing systems. These projects include the installation of new software and hardware, the development of new processes, and the improvement of the performance of the computing systems.

ISAS also has control over the university's computer systems and services. This unit maintains all of the computer systems at Howard University, but is not responsible for computer systems in the department of engineering, which is managed by the facilities management group.

Ebonu Warren reigns as Miss Communications

by Angel D. Lloyd

I was a broadcast major, spent the entire summer preparing for the pageant and last determination paid off. As Miss School of Communications, Warren has a tall order made on her and she really needs to prepare for this upcoming pageant as well.

Warren hopes that through the pageant, the participants will be moved to fulfill their dreams throughout their education at Howard University, or put a design plan to be very active and visible in the school.

"I want everyone to know that my responsibilities go beyond being the face of the pageant, I am providing services to the students," she said.

According to Warren, she is the first student from herself.

The School of Communications, Warren is proud to be part of the faculty, the students, and the School of Communications by starting an organization called the Black Council.

Students, Warren will go on to complete her studies and alumni should get involved with the opportunities Howard offers. In the future, Warren plans to be very active and visible in the school.

Karen Owen, program director of the Undergraduate Council, has been busy selling his agenda for the weekend.

Members of UGSA and USSA will be mentors to the freshmen and alumni should get involved in the process.

"We want to go back to the time of pride and revolution. The show is a tribute to the African-American culture and the different ideas of the 70s," Woods said.

More than 10 teams will be using a 70s theme, the outfits, the songs, the music. They have had the opportunity to answer the question of the organizations.

"All the themes are getting into the 70s theme, but with each theme, the keynote speakers will be coming in to talk about the amount of events that will be happening."

The next segment featured the Undergraduate Council and Kappa Kappa Psi, the national black, white and alumni should get involved in the process.

"The show is a tribute to a time in history, making it different from the other shows," Woods said.

The Undergraduate Council and USSA will be providing a segment of the show.

"We want to do more for us, there would be no Howard Without Us," Woods said.

The Undergraduate Council will be hosting a segment called Black Birth, interpreting a poem by Langston Hughes. Hardy played a piano medley and Warren recited her own poem.

According to Hardy, the students were allowed to submit questions for the contestants to answer. The students are empowered," said Hardy. "The students want to now what is going on because the president is their board, not the other way around.

"We are going to have an intermission host and revolution. The show will have a theme added in the presentation of African-American culture and the different ideas of the 70s," Woods said.

This is the first national show the University has hosted during the Black History Month. The show will reach out to the students.

"We want the students to know what is going on because the president is running our school," Woods said.

The next segment featured the talents of the three contestants and was titled, "Black Heart."

Ebonu Warren described this as the passion of African-American people and the different ideas of Black Birth allows to Black identified black champion entertained the audience in the small, "Black Birth," Woods said.

We are trying to broaden the scope, to see different kinds of stepping. "The students want to know what is going on because the president is running our school," Woods said. The Parent and Teachers Association President Banneker School was at the festival to enjoy the fun and games. The event was a hit with both students and parents, with many enjoying the different activities available.

The festival included a variety of games and activities, from a children's fair to a firework display. The atmosphere was lively and energetic, with people of all ages enjoying themselves.

District schools open after three day delay

By Tracy Miami

Banneker High School Principal Jeff Mabry said the delay in opening the school was caused by the necessity to clean school grounds due to the summer's heavy rain.

The school was scheduled to open at 9 a.m. on Monday, but it was not until 11 a.m. that students were able to enter the building.

The delay in opening Banneker High School was a common occurrence, with many other schools in the district also experiencing delays due to the summer's rainy weather.

After a three-hour delay, the start of the roller coaster "Screams of Blackness" screamed the eagerly awaited ride, young adults who for the next year or two, will encourage in America's youth as part of President Clinton's national service program.

"The national service program is one of the most important reasons," First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton said. "President Clinton addressed the first members of AmeriCorps on Monday, a domestic version of the nation."

In the car with the "Screams of Blackness," according to second-generation Ana Canosa, the leader who wanted them to go to the park. "I don't know the exact time, but the car was at the White House," she said.

Due to the rising number of reports of ride-related injuries, recent legislation shows the need for greater responsibility for their own amusement parks. The legislation does give law enforcement agencies the power to shut down parks when there is an "imminent "threat to public safety." The legislation will be subject to a $500 fine for any violation. The new legislation also includes new safety procedures for amusement parks.

The seat was approximately 45-50 feet in the air when Toshika Livingston, 16, of Brooklyn, New York, fell during a ride. The ride operator, according to the coroner's report, was not aware of the problem with the ride and amusement parks do worry about it. The operator, left the investigation. The coroner's report stated that the ride was not inspected.

Haïtians fall victim to dwindling security problems: Haitian president Jean-Bertrand Aristide and his cabinet and parliament were forced to resign after a coup on September 30, 1991, leading to a period of political conflict and civil unrest in the country.

The United Nations’ mission, known as UNMOP, was formed to maintain peace and security in the region. However, UNMOP’s effectiveness was limited due to high attrition rates and a lack of trained personnel.

UNMOP’s role was to protect the civilian population, prevent violence, and ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid. Despite these efforts, the situation in Haiti continued to deteriorate.

The primary victims were the Haitian people themselves, as they faced significant challenges such as poverty, unemployment, and lack of basic necessities.

On a street in Baltimore, Maryland, a man shot a woman in a car park. The victim left a union meeting and entered into the parking area, where she was shot by a man who had been following her. The incident is one of many that highlight the increasing violence in the workplace, particularly in urban areas.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported a rise in workplace violence in 1993, with an estimated 17,000 incidents of violence occurring in the workplace.

Getting it right for a good cause

September is Doggie Chip month. This disease, which affects one out of every twenty American men, is one of the most common cancers in males. It is an inherited disease that affects the testes and male reproductive system. The disease is characterized by the formation of tumors in the testicles, which can produce a wriggling sensation and a lump in the scrotum. These lumps can grow to the size of a grapefruit and are easily palpated by a veterinarian.

Many veterinarians believe that this disease is caused by a combination of genetic and environmental factors. The disease is most common in purebred dogs, particularly those breeds that are known to be at high risk, such as Rottweilers, Boxers, and Labs. However, any dog can be affected, regardless of breed or sex.

One of the main challenges in treating this disease is the fact that it is often diagnosed late in the disease process. The earlier the disease is detected, the better the chances of a successful outcome. This is because the disease often begins as a small lump in the scrotum, which can be easily palpated. However, as the disease progresses, the lump can become larger and more difficult to palpate. Once the lump is large enough to be palpated, it is often too late to save the dog's testicles.

In conclusion, this disease is a serious threat to male dogs, and it is important for owners to be aware of the signs and symptoms of the disease. If you notice a lump in your dog's scrotum, it is important to take your dog to the veterinarian as soon as possible.

Hey, fellas, have you been striking out with the women lately? Well, according to the September issue of Ebony Han Magazine, the way to a woman's heart is through creative compliments and nothing just the little things about her appearance. Take heed to the following list and try them out on the Yard and see what type of reaction you receive.

- How could I have been so stupid before? You're gorgeous.
- How have you worked?
- How do I lose weight?
- How can I become a fashion consultant?

HUSA President promises to work for students
Chidiadi Akoma confidently plans agenda for academic school year

By Rashida Syed

As this year's HUSA president, Akoma said that he and interim President Dr. Joyce Ladner have a good working relationship. "We are able to work together on something when we need to," Akoma said of his business relationship with Ladner. "He takes communication very seriously and he always listens to what I have to say." In fact, there are several plans that Akoma has already brought to Ladner's attention.

This year's overall goal is to revise a list of old things that have been changed in the university. For example, the HUSA constitution needs to be updated to reflect the role of shuttle services and service of people that just so happen to benefit the university. For example, the shuttle service for those students who live in the dorms they cannot run an operation by themselves. Therefore, the shuttle service needs to be run by the HUSA office and picked up at intersections by the HUSA office.

Several students have also complained to Akoma that they are disappointed with the shuttle services. The shuttle does not go to neighborhoods surrounding the university like the Student Union and Student Plaza hotel. Akoma said that the shuttle service needs to be updated to benefit people that just so happen to be living in the university. For example, the HUSA office and shuttles need to be updated to benefit people that just so happen to be living in the university.

Dr. Joyce Ladner have a good working relationship. "We are able to work together on something when we need to," Akoma said of his business relationship with Ladner. "He takes communication very seriously and he always listens to what I have to say." In fact, there are several plans that Akoma has already brought to Ladner's attention.

'FRESH' characterizes grade 'A' theatre quality

By Krih Johnson

Hilltop Staff Writer

I already know what you're thinking. A movie called "Fresh" about urban America? After watching "Octopus" at the Franciscan, the smart thing would be to just go home. Right? Well, no way!

"Fresh," written and directed by Corky Brice (screenwriter of 1990's "The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air") is a movie about life in a southern ghetto neighborhood. It's the life of Fresh, a relatively good kid from a poor neighborhood in Brooklyn. He is a student at the local high school where he is a straight A student, and he is a part of the track team.

While living with a super-crazy family consisting of his mother, grandmother and several other family members, he manages to always find time to study, hang out with his friends and attend games. Fresh has a beautiful singing voice, and he dreams of becoming a professional singer someday.

One day, Fresh's friend Corky, who is a successful singer himself, tells him about an upcoming music competition that Fresh can participate in. Fresh is hesitant at first, but Corky convinces him to give it a try.

The competition turns out to be a success, and Fresh's singing ability is recognized by the judges. Corky then offers to help Fresh launch his career in the music industry, and Fresh accepts.

Fresh's life takes a turn for the better, and he becomes a successful singer in the music world. He travels around the country, performing at various events and concerts. He also becomes a role model for young people back in his hometown.

In conclusion, "Fresh" is a movie that highlights the importance of hard work, determination and perseverance in achieving one's dreams. It is a heartwarming story that will inspire anyone who watches it. Grade: B+

Howard Bison Jose White aims for NFL

By Katrina Washington

Jose White, a 6-foot, 225-pound running back and defensive end for Howard University's football team, is one of four captains for the Bison this season.

"I've been with the team since 1994," White said. "I've been here since freshman year. I've seen a lot of changes here and have been through a lot."

White, who hails from Fort Washington, Md., is a senior in the senior class and has been on the team for the last three years.

"I'm not ready to leave Howard, I still have two more years left here," White said. "I've been here since my freshman year and have never thought about leaving Howard."

The Bison are currently 0-4 in their conference and 1-8 overall this season.

"I'm not too concerned about the record," White said. "I'm more concerned about the team's performance and being a leader on the field."

White has been named the MEAC Player of the Week twice this season and was named to the All-MEAC First Team last year.

"I'm just trying to keep the team moving forward," White said. "I want to keep the team together and make sure we don't lose any players."

The Bison are scheduled to play Maryland this weekend and are looking to upset the Terps.

"I'm looking forward to the game," White said. "I want to get back on track and show what we can do on the field."

Good service is a must for students

Imagine this: It's Sunday morning and you are going in class.

You have your shirt impeccably pressed and tied. You're fresh and you're hard, and you're ready to go. But you're a little tweak. You're a little tight. You've got a little bit of tension in your muscles, and you're not sure how you're going to handle the day.

Sweeping technological changes are sweeping us into a new era. The status quo wire tapping capabilities are as outdated as the transatlantic telegraph. Electronic communications devices are now capable of interacting with others. As a result, individuals have the ability to converse.

Personalized data service is being provided by the Gold Line Bus Company on a trial basis. The company is a well-known and respected commuter service. In its basic form, it is already proving to be a valuable addition to the public transportation system. Eventually, it may be expanded as well.

Personalized data service offers a wide range of benefits. It can be used to retrieve news and information on a wide variety of topics. It can be used to schedule and commit itself to maintaining a schedule and a plan. It is also a valuable tool for research and development.

It's a testament to the high level of technological innovation that the field of wireless communications is already so advanced. When people think of wireless communications, they think of the latest gadgets and gizmos. Yet it seems 10 be more than that.

The good girl syndrome

Shoshana Davidson

The reason most of us have made it to the United States, and the reason that the United States is the United States, is because of the result of sacrifice and struggle that took place in the 1960s. But there are many more important reasons. The first is that the United States is the United States.

I am sure that many of you have heard of the good girl syndrome. It is a phenomenon that describes women who are expected to conform to traditional gender roles and values. This syndrome can be seen in many cultures around the world.

The good girl syndrome is characterized by a desire to please others, a tendency to be overly accommodating, and a reluctance to assert oneself. Women who experience the good girl syndrome may find it difficult to express their own desires and feelings, and may feel guilty or ashamed for doing so.

The good girl syndrome can have a negative impact on women's lives, as it can lead to a lack of self-confidence and a feeling of being undervalued. It can also contribute to a sense of isolation and detachment.

However, the good girl syndrome can be overcome. It is important for women to recognize and challenge the expectations that underlie this syndrome, and to develop a sense of self-worth that is independent of external validation. By doing so, women can gain the confidence and strength to assert themselves and to pursue their own goals and desires.

One student's views on crime

Marvin C. Bryan Jr.

I work with a hypothetical city, the city of Chicago, which is large and crime-ridden. I am part of a committee, attend a crime prevention seminar, and discuss possible solutions with crime prevention experts. I am conflicted about this, but I do think that crime prevention is a valid concern.

Crime prevention is a complex issue. There are many different crimes and many different types of criminals. It is impossible to come up with a solution that will work for all crimes.

One solution that is often proposed is to increase police funding. This is a good idea, but it is not enough. We also need to focus on reducing the availability of illegal drugs, and on providing opportunities for young people to stay on the right track.

It is also important to address the root causes of crime, such as poverty and lack of education. By providing young people with opportunities to succeed, we can help reduce the likelihood of them engaging in criminal behavior.

In conclusion, crime prevention is a complex issue that requires a multifaceted approach. We need to focus on both reducing the availability of illegal drugs and on providing opportunities for young people to stay on the right track. We also need to address the root causes of crime, such as poverty and lack of education.

Why Chavis is under attack

Dr. Manning Marable

The recent firing of black Chavis, the head of the police force in New York City, has sparked a significant controversy. The firing was seen by many as an attack on the black community and its leaders. However, the decision was based on Chavis's inability to reform the police department.

The police force has been plagued by corruption and brutality for decades. Chavis was given the job with the expectation that he would reform the department, but he failed to do so.

The firing of Chavis was a necessary step in order to improve the police force and to protect the black community.
We cannot afford to have a police force that is corrupt and brutal.

September

Tali Hatli

"To remember the 21st of September..." says a sign in the hallway of the Hawaii State Capitol, but the sign is not the only one that reminds us of the September 11 attacks.

September is a month that is filled with the memories of September 11.

On September 11, 2001, the United States was hit by a terrorist attack, leading to the deaths of thousands of people. The attacks were a turning point in American history, and they changed the course of the United States and the world.

September is also a month that is filled with the memories of the end of summer.

The end of summer is a time of transition, as people prepare for the challenges of the fall season.

In conclusion, September is a month that is filled with the memories of important events, and it serves as a reminder of the impact of these events on the United States and the world.
