Imagine a University with no fraternities, no extra-curricular activities, no varsity athletics and a six building campus. Impossible? No, because that is Howard University as it oldest returning alumnus remembers it in 1941.

Dr. Frank Avary, alert, healthy, and 91 years of age, reminisced in a recent interview over the days when the University consisted of only three departments and campus-looked like a desert.

Even 70 years ago, the campus was the scene of some of the most exciting regulations for women was alive. "In those days," Dr. Avary commented, "we allowed no social contact with the ladies. In order for us to visit a room in their dormitory, the matron had to write to the girl's mother to find out if it was all right."

In what was perhaps the earliest form of co-ed dorm regulations in Howard's history, Dr. Avary reported, he and the other young men formed a string orchestra to serenade the ladies outside the dormitory, Miner Hall. As a result, the matron agreed to allow them to take the girls skating and coasting down Sixth Street hill.

The Centennial Celebration, "athletic," according to Dr. Avary, which was the highlight of the four-year class assembled on campus to play leap frog, run races and practice boxing.

One day, the 3-year-old son of one of the professors threw a football into such a group of students, and in the instant Dr. Avary became the first student to kick a football on Howard's campus.

Some 11,500 students, the largest number in Howard's history, will have enrolled here by the time registration is completed today. This anticipated enrollment represents an increase of more than 500 over last year's student body.

More than 2500 undergraduate freshmen, another record number, arrived on campus September 5 for a week of freshman orientation.

Registration began yesterday in eight of the University's schools and will continue throughout the week. The School of Law and College of Medicine completed their registration last week.

University officials are calling upon Washington area residents to assist Howard in providing living quarters for the students by making facilities in their homes available during the long school year, beginning in September.

As the total anticipated enrollment, some 9,000 students will be on campus, and close to 11,500 will be near in the living quarters when they arrive at Howard. All housewarming parties provided living accommodations for students are urged to contact the University's supervisor of off-campus housing, Charles H. Bush, at 797-1554 or 797-1650.

Beginning next year the degree conferred to graduates of the School of Religion will be known as the Master of Divinity. Howard previously awarded the Bachelor of Divinity degree. There are no changes in the school's curriculum however.

During the coming school year construction is scheduled to begin on a new School of Social Work classroom building. The new three-story facility, which will be located at Sixth Street and Howard Place, northwest, will have a gross area of some 32,000 square feet.

Assembly Preface

Significance of Centennial

On March 2, 1967, Charter Day, Howard University will have completed its first Centennial of service, tradition, and academic pursuit and as such, becomes one of America's leading universities. As such an auspicious occasion will not pass without special recognition, an academic celebration has been in the planning for several years.

The many excellent cultural events and special programs, supported by the world's parade of eminent national and international personalities will make this year an exciting, informative, and truly unique experience which will be a real privilege to participate in. Moreover, our annual social activities will be highlighted by special Centennial events, including Charter Day, Spring Musical, and our first Foreman Week.

Thus, it is extremely important that all students participate in as many of the activities as possible so that the Nation's eyes, which will be focused on us will see the best of Howard. Respectfully yours, Charles L. Franklin, Jr., President of the Student Body.
Just Another Year

If you ask a typical freshman what he's heard or what he feels about this year's Centennial celebration, it turned out to be "just another year." The typical upperclassman has the same reaction. The Centennial theme suggests that these will turn out to be just the same old thing the editors of the Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity, distribution...

Howard Grad New Counselor

Among the many fresh young faces on Howard's campus this year is that of Miss Norithia Jackson, the Counselor of Student Activities, Miss Jackson replaced former counselor Janet Wright who left to be married on July the first.

A psychology major, Miss Jackson attended Howard University and graduated in 1944. Recently she obtained her Masters degree in guidance counseling from Catholic University.

Working in conjunction with Mr. Push, the Director of Student Activities, and Mr. Johns, the Program Assistant, Miss Jackson serves as an advisor to student organizations on campus and aids in the planning of all student center programs.

In her capacity as faculty advisor to the Biscan yearbook, she revealed that because of the Central celebration the Biscan is expanding coverage of university activities and, for the first time, alumni activities and the summer programs will be included.

Other than the yearbook, Miss Jackson and her small staff are busily planning for the immediate future; the faculty reception for freshmen students, the conferencing conference held in Warren Hall for the benefit of the various campus organizations, and the Centennial Homecoming.

In India, Ethiopia

Two Former Howardites to Serve Peace Corps

Two former Howard students, Carolyn W. Gullatt, a sociology major, and Woodrow W. Carter, Jr., a sociology major, have been named Peace Corps Volunteers following a 12-week training period. Miss Gullatt left for an assignment in India on June 1, to serve in health and nutrition projects in the state of Madras. She and the volunteers trained with her at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, will instruct teachers at the Dacca mid-day meal program in village primary and secondary schools and start school vegetable gardens and poultry-raising projects.

With the arrival of Miss Gullatt's group, some 200 Peace Corps volunteers will be at work in India on programs of poultry production, agricultural extension, English, math and science; small industry: development; nutrition, rural public works; nursing and urban community development.

During the training period in Pennsylvania the volunteers studied the Tamil language, Indian history and culture, United States history and world affairs. The technical studies emphasized teaching methods and skills as applied to the Ethiopian system.

The volunteers joined the near-200 Peace Corps volunteers now working in 46 nations of Asia, Africa, and Latin America. Despite these numbers, more volunteers are needed, according to the Corps Public Information Office.

Applications and additional information can be obtained at post offices by writing the Peace Corps, Washington, D.C., 20520."

Student Leaders Join In Summer Activities

Howard's student government, unlike most of its students, has not required a vacation over the summer; according to Student Assembly President Charles Franklin.

Franklin outlined, in a recent interview, a series of activities both within and outside the University in which the University-wide Student Assembly and the undergraduate student council have participated.

At the "T'Uffilf These Rights" Conference, held at the Sheraton Park Hotel here from June 1 to 2, for example, the Student Assembly was well represented by Mr. F. C. Movement by several F. C. members to delegates, "Our aim," Franklin explained, "was to inform the Nation that District residents do not have the right to vote. In this way, Congress will be compelled to appoint a "Commission on the District of Columbia," as was the case in the Washington Post article.

The student information booth, in conjunction with other area universities, organized a "Partners of Alliance Project," informing the business and educational communities of the District with a Latin American community. The Project, which is a Washington departmental sponsorship, is a cultural exchange program set up to "benefit citizens of a different culture than government officials.

Again joining with the other area universities, student government representatives mobilized at House and Senate hearings to oppose a section of the pending bill to raise the minimum age for buying beer and wine in the District from 18 to 21.

Student government was also instrumental in changing the name of the U. C. Traumatic first route which terminates on Howard's campus from "LaSalle Park to "Howard University." Within the University, the Campus Pals, which comes under the Student Assembly, was conceived and started up, according to Franklin, in its work of correspondence with freshmen and raising funds for freshman activities.

The N Book, the student's guide to Howard, also under the Assembly, will be available in September.

Commenting on the number and variety of student government programs undertaken during the summer months, Franklin said, "Some people say it's idealistic, but in the world of a great poet, 'A man's reach must exceed his grasp.'"

Ex-Ganglord D. C. Lecturer

The troubled capital will hear a former gang leader from Harlem tell his unusual story in a 10- month evangelistic crusade to be held simultaneously in Harlem, the Bronx, Westchester, Queens, and Brownsville.

The church is sponsored by the Executive Committee of the Christian Crusade for Christ.

Howard students will recall that Mr. Skinner visited the campus last April. At that time, he related stories about his work with addicts and juvenile gangs.

Emery Takes Over As New Cage Coach

Along with some 1,000-plus new faces in the student body are a few new coaches for Howard University's sports teams. The season gets underway September 24 against St. Paul's.

EMERY

On completing his graduate studies in 1963, he joined the faculty at Howard.

Emery is a member of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, American Association of Health, Physical Education, Recreation, Home Economics Teachers Association, and the National Education Association.

Fall Sports Slate

The men's physical education department has announced the 1966 schedule for fall sports. The football slate consists of eight games with four at home and four away. The Homecoming fixture will be at Howard when the Bisons take on Fisk on October 22. The Bisons open on Sept. 24, and close November 12.

Notice to Swimmers

All persons interested in joining the swimming team should report to Coach Cedric Pendleton on Monday, September 19, at the pool in the men's gym. Meeting time is four o'clock sharp.

Soccer Players Join Grid Squad

Soccer star Nino Asenanti and Cecil Williams have both turned in their soccer uniforms and made history at Howard as they joined the training squad now in preparation for the 1966 football season.

Asenanti, whose dazzling moves on the soccer field brought him east coast honors for four years, has used up his soccer eligibility and now plans to turn grid iron. With his amazing ability to control his kid, Nino is expected to gain many points for the Bisons in their '66 contests.
