Senator Moseley-Braun to address University
First Black Congresswoman keynotes 12th Convocation

By Marilyn C. Bryan, Jr.
Hilltop Staff Writer

Senator Carol Moseley-Braun, (D) Illinois, will deliver Howard University's 127th year's service of over 111,000 students, and the keynote speaker for the University's Opening Convocation, which will take place at 4 p.m., August 29, in the University's Quadrangle.

Senator Moseley-Braun, recently confirmed to the bench of a district judge in the District of Columbia, is a member of the national leadership of the National Poor People's March and is the first African-American woman to serve in the U.S. Senate. She is now making a name for herself as an outstanding advocate for the rights of women. In addition, she serves on the Judiciary Committee, the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, and the Small Business Committee. Senator Moseley-Braun has accomplished much in her lifetime, and she is looking forward to delivering the keynote address on Sunday at 2 p.m.

This Week in Black History

Distinguished Howard University alumna William B. Bryan was born in 1911. Bryan was appointed U.S. District Court Judge for the District of Washington in 1965.

In 1930, civil rights advocates Richard Allen and John M. Rendell presided over the first Negro Convention of Free Men in Philadelphia. The group signed a pledge not to use slave-produced goods.

On this date in 1926, jazz artist John Coltrane was born in Hamlet, North Carolina.
Jarvis named new University money manager

By Donya Mather

The University announced on Friday that former West Virginia University has been named the University's acting acting Vice President for Finance and Administration.

Jarvis, who has served as the University's Chief Financial Officer for the past seven years and has contributed millions of dollars in the operation of the auxiliary enterprise, will be joining the University's staff.

"Jarvis' leadership and experience in finance and administration will be critical to the University's success," said Interim President Jarvis. "His deep understanding of the financial needs of our institution, combined with his ability to manage complex systems, makes him an ideal fit for this position."

Jarvis has been with the University since 2001, holding various positions in finance and administration. He has been instrumental in maintaining the University's financial stability and has overseen the successful operation of the auxiliary enterprise, generating millions of dollars in revenue.

"I am excited to join the University family and continue to work towards achieving our financial goals," said Jarvis. "Our team remains committed to providing the best possible support to our students and faculty, and I look forward to contributing to the University's success in the years to come."

Greene Stadium gets a face lift

Astroturf replacement nears completion

By Dennis Green

Greene Stadium is set to undergo a complete renovation, with the installation of new Astroturf scheduled to begin next week.

"This is a major step forward for our stadium," said Interim President Jarvis. "The new Astroturf will not only improve the playing surface, but it will also enhance the overall experience for our fans."

The new Astroturf will be installed in phases, with the first phase scheduled to be completed by the end of the month. The rest of the stadium will be renovated over the next year.

"We are excited to bring this project to completion," said Interim President Jarvis. "Our goal is to provide our fans with the best possible experience, and we believe that the new Astroturf will help us achieve that goal."

Chavis stresses unity within black community

WASHINGTON, DC—While race and poverty continue to plague the black community, Benjamin Chavis, executive director and CEO of the NAACP, believes a renewed spirit of unity is needed.

"The unity of our people must still be one," he said. "...we are going to be able to out-smart those who think they are smarter than we are. But we can't go where they can't go."

Chavis, who was a former litigation attorney and served as an executive director and CEO of the NAACP, said he believes the black community is divided.

"Eighteen months ago, when I left the office of the NAACP, we found out that there were 200,000 members of the NAACP, but only 100,000 of them were active," Chavis said. "And that's why we need to do what is raised in this movement—let's go out and get the numbers back."

"We need to be prepared to rely on our leaders together," Chavis said. "The unity of our people must still be one."

"We're going to have to work at our unity," he said. "We're not going to be able to do it alone."

Chavis also said that the black community needs to be more engaged in political discussions.

"We can't just sit back and wait for things to happen," he said. "We have to be active and involved in the political process."

District Haitians have mixed reactions to U.S. invasion

By Joseph Lyons

Hilltop Staff Writer

An array of music, art, food and dance displayed the rich cultural traditions of Africa at the Seventh Annual African Cultural Festival Saturday. Among the day's events were a display of African masks, and an urban style dance from a West African group.

One of the most eye-catching performances was an Assiko Club dance group from Ghana. The dance, made the barefooted Assiko Club successful in capturing many spectators.

After winning plurality in Parliament on Sept. 18,狈ntian Aristide will be returned to power. He has long been a friend of the United States.

The festival's diverse lineup included the Sierra Dynamic Band, which performed a mix of African and American music. Attendees also enjoyed the live music from the Sierra Dynamic Band of Ghana, which included both traditional and contemporary sounds.

African nations Africans. He also said that this is just the start of change, "This is seen even in the experiences over the years. He said that wherever the British nag has the 'freedom fighters' as the source of the problem and not the enthusiasm or Protestant supremacy or Protestant ascendancy," he said. "Britain has to have its hands on the rope to bring about justice and political discipline.”

Noth McManus, who reported that a potential political crisis could be heard well in West African. Freedom Plaza. Festival, attended by many, including Keesha Dixon, a sophomore majoring in nursing. "I'm watching dance groups will be entertained because they are going to increase the quality of life for the Haitian people," she said. "The U.S. should not interfere because it is still in place, the same as it was before the invasion. There is no political change for us in Haiti." Many how said that the invasion is a threat to Haiti's sovereignty and independence.

Michelle Brown, 23, a junior at Howard, felt sympathetic toward the British embassy argument that the cease-fire is permanent.

James McManus also said that more countries that receive the most aid of their teachers and the books were not written by African Americans have a racially mixed population. "It is true, countries like Mali and Senegal have on average 30 percent of their population is not African," Gomes said. "We need to have more awareness of the real situation on the ground, to-face the facts, to make a difference," he said.

Mickey Crawford, a radio producer manager and radio show host on 89.3 WPFW, at the Saturday's event said, "I am watching dance groups will be entertained because they are going to increase the quality of life for the Haitian people," she said. Do you shower me with pity, yet mislead me with your lies? Is your conscience deeply haunted when you look into my eyes? Are you shocked at all my ancestors, buried low without a tomb, And astonished that a race of strength still blossoms from my womb? So you hurst after my brother while you cringe to shake his hand, Are you angered by the stubborn pride you'll never understand? Do you learn to dance my dances with a soul that is not real? Do you learn to sing my music, never feeling what I feel? Do you lie out in the sunlight, wasting all your precious time in desperate hopes that someday your skin will look like mine? But when your efforts fail and your policies are the same. Is it your childish envy that makes you call me nameless? Can't you feel this fervent power? Did you think that I had lied When I said that one day my people would all be unified? Are you frightened? Do you panic? To what shelter will you flee? No, the Shadows will not hide you... Haye strives to keep homecoming events inexpensive

Homecoming chair says 'Meeting at the Crossroads' will be a family reunion

By La Chance Jones
News Staff Writer

Tamara Haye is in demand. She racks back and forth between two offices reviewing documents, voicing and answering questions from all directions. She has the job of planning and organizing, what is perhaps the biggest event of the school year—Homecoming 1994.

"If you don't know, I must say," Haye said after finally setting down a note. Haye, a senior from Atlanta, entered the university in the fall of 1991. A chemical engineering major, she has been involved in campus organizations since her arrival as president of Truth Hall, a member of the School of Medicine residence council, and public relations director of the Student Activities Board. Availability is what Haye wanted to be when she began college. She said it was not a conscious effort. "I was just interested in meeting people and did not think of it as a career," Haye said.

This year, Haye wanted to be a "magicianstudent" and not just another student involved in extracurricular activities. However, when the 1994 Homecoming Committee position was announced, she announced the change.

"I wanted to do something more social," Haye said. "I was somehow disappointed with Homecoming in the past." The Homecoming Committee Board selected Haye after an interview—a decision she attributes to her preparedness.

"Even though I had a proposal, I didn't want to be a lap dog. I wanted to be a leader," Haye said. Haye described Homecoming as a "celebration" and a place to interact with alumni. According to Haye, the 1994 Homecoming should be one to remember. Students should look for new events such as the Rhythm & Poetry Caper, a pre-game tailgate party, a Call to Moseley and thetie to Life Choir.

"Homecoming will form events geared toward both alumni and students. We will bring in alumni who have paved the way to tomorrow's leaders, and students together for a 'Meeting at the Crossroads'," Haye said, incorporating the year's theme.

In addition, Haye said, an occasion she had to separate from those personal relationships and finance staff members.

"We had to get rid of some people. But that's all part of my job," she stated. "I can't be friends with all of you. But I have to separate from the group," Haye said.

FOX's prime time lineup controls students' remotes

By Ruth Gadson

The FOX network is keeping Howard students glued to their television sets with its new prime time lineup.

"This is a new season and FOX goes all out, force-feeding "Martin" and "Living Single," said Maxine Gordon, a freshman.

But not all the new shows are good. "Martin," which stars Martin Lawrence as a reluctant TV star, is not doing well. "It's not getting any better because they are repeating the same storyline," said Stacie Brown, a freshman.

"Living Single," on the other hand, is doing well. "I like "Living Single," said Natasha Washington, a junior. "It's a light show, and people can get a laugh out of it. And it's not too serious," said Stacie Brown.

Among Howard students, the hands-down winner for the favorite new show is "Martin." "It's a good show," said Natasha Washington.

The questions, or at least some, have resurfaced and resurfaced again and again.

"What could they have been thinking about as they fled the campus?" it can be summed up in one word: disbelief."

To some, that is all one needs to know about a man convicted of cocaine possession and was sentenced to 4 years in prison. To others, it was a reason to laugh him out of the race. In fact, that is what many people did when Barry announced his candidacy earlier this week. The news was happily received by Haitians who find that fat-pocked baseball players, and especially those who trade baseball for a living or a comfortable living, do not deserve the exorbitant salaries they are paid. They are simply too可想而知.

"Who would, once again, be mayor?" should be enough to make any Hispaniola feel it is the best candidate in this regard. It remains to be seen whether or not Barry will be satisfied merely with a return to office or will actively seek the assistance of 200 cab drivers that offered their back-slapping charm and inspirational speech to rescue him from the ballot box.

"Perhaps if the issue involved had been more meaningful and emotional, it shouldn't, and even a child can tell."

It is the responsibility of the owners and managers to do their job and to provide fair and competitive salaries for the players. There is no reason that players and ownership could not take a few steps to make the game more enjoyable for everyone. The black market of baseball, the issue of players' salaries, and the issue of racism are the very campaign promises Barry made in 1987. The elation that Haitians feel now that U.S. military forces are deployed in Haiti is a direct result of the U.S. military's presence in Haiti and the assurance it gives Haitians that their country will be protected from further invasion.

"It is, the nation-building business (although it is hard to imagine that Haiti is building anything), can lead to deadly situations. The elation that Haitians feel now that U.S. military forces are deployed in Haiti is a direct result of the U.S. military's presence in Haiti and the assurance it gives Haitians that their country will be protected from further invasion."

We are now aware of the importance of education in Haiti. The U.S. military's presence in Haiti is a direct result of the U.S. military's presence in Haiti and the assurance it gives Haitians that their country will be protected from further invasion."

"We will never look back at the history of Haiti without thinking of self-inflicted wounds and the sense of duty that we feel is our responsibility to help them."
The splendor of our sisters

Student leadership and visionaries need to be one

Orinda A. Miller

This commentary was inspired by several conversations I have had with a young woman who is currently programming a vision of student leadership and development. The conversations have been interesting in that we have been discussing the substance of our times. For the past year and a half, I have been observing the growth of a student leadership group that is believed to reflect the needs of the university community.

I realize that the topics we have been discussing involve some of the most intelligent and passionate people on campus. We have attempted to discuss the topic in a manner that would allow us to gain a better understanding of the ideas and the people involved. However, the topic of student leadership and development is vast and complex, and it is difficult to capture the full scope of the conversation.

For the past year and a half, I have been observing the growth of a student leadership group that is believed to reflect the needs of the university community. The group is made up of individuals who are passionate about the future of the university and who are committed to making it a better place.

When I first began the observance of the group, I was struck by the dedication and commitment of the members. They have been working hard to develop a vision for the university that is based on the principles of student leadership and development.

Many of the programs given by student leadership groups are social in nature or give similar direction to the programs given by the administration. These programs do not necessarily have an impact on the community, but it is important that we work toward the development of programs that do have an impact on the community.

When we have our programs, we should be clear about what we are doing and why we are doing it. Our programs should be about the place where we are and what we can do to improve it. They should be about the community, about the people, and about the future.

The problem is that the leaders of the university community are often not in the same boat. They are often not from the same community, and they may not have the same goals. It is important to remember that the leaders of the university community are not the only ones who can make a difference. It is important that we work together to make a difference.
