Special Convocation honors President Mandela

President Nelson Mandela is set to receive a personal award for his service to the University of South Africa last April, marking one of the most historic events in the history of Howard University.

The unprecedented arrival of Mr. Mandela, who was elected by an overwhelming majority to serve as President of South Africa last April, has received widespread support. Mandela, who was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1993 for his efforts in ending apartheid, will visit the University to receive an honorary degree.

The University's President, Dr. Julius Cole, is excited about the upcoming visit. "It's a historic occasion for Howard University and the nation," he said. "President Mandela's visit will underscore our commitment to fostering a diverse and inclusive community."
Coordinator Jamal X says members are still learning the ropes

By Teresa Bailey

For the first time in weeks, the University held a general body meeting Tuesday, thanks to the attendance of most of its members.

"We didn't have a meeting for about a month," Coordinator Jamal X said. "The reason why this policy was established was because there was no interest in class. There were members who were interested in participating. We were not able to hold meetings because there were no representatives around the time that the meetings were scheduled.

Howard University Student Association President Chad A. Almon said that while there are legitimate issues for the association, it is important for them to have a president and executive board for leadership. Almon said, "In order to have a successful student government, it is important to have leadership and representation."

New School of Business dean stresses career

By Natasha Lindsey

Howard University President Dr. Joyce Ladner confirmed Monday that the University is still in the process of hiring a dean for the new School of Business.

"We have a strong interest in attracting a dean who is committed to the mission of the University," Ladner said. "We want a dean who will be able to lead the School of Business and help it to achieve its goals."

The search for the dean has been ongoing for several months, and the University has received numerous applications. Ladner said that the University is committed to finding the best candidate for the position.

New registration process promises for international students

By Crystal D. Davis

For many Howard University students, registering for classes can be a long and frustrating experience. However, a new registration process promises to make the process smoother and more efficient.

"We have implemented a new online registration system that will allow students to register for classes more easily," said Batia W. Lewis, Associate Dean of Undergraduate Affairs. "Students will be able to access the system from anywhere, which will make it more convenient for them."
Dorm security concerns students

Dr. Susan Williams, director of Campus Safety, discussed the problem of violent crime on Howard University's campus at a recent meeting of the Undergraduate Student Senate. Dr. Williams said there have been 20 violent crimes on campus in the past year, including eight robberies, six sexual assaults, and six physical attacks.

The University is working with the Metropolitan Police Department to increase security on campus. Additional police officers have been hired, and new lighting has been installed in high-risk areas. However, many students are still concerned about their safety on campus.

"I feel if we were paying for cable," said Jessica Gordon, a freshman in the School of Business, "I would be more protected." Gordon is one of many students who feel that the University should mandate cable in the residence halls.

"We have built a reputation with the faculty, students, and staff at Bruce Monroe, and they know that Howard students are dedicated and have the child's best interest in mind."

Big Brothers/Big Sisters program pairs positive male role models

Howard University has expanded its Big Brothers/Big Sisters program in response to concerns about student safety. The program pairs Howard University students with elementary school children in the District of Columbia to provide positive role models, particularly for male students.

"Many of the students we work with are looking for male role models," said Dr. Susan Williams, director of Campus Safety. "By pairing them with Howard University students, we are providing them with positive examples of what it means to be a successful, responsible adult."

Farrukh Vazir, a second-year pharmacy major, said he enjoys being a Big Brother. "I feel like I can make a difference in the life of a child," he said. "It's rewarding to see the change in their behavior and to know that I'm helping them get a head start in life."

Nine compete for Mr. Howard

By Venita S. Gerald

Five of Howard University's most vibrant personalities are ready to strum across the stage tonight as they compete for Mr. Howard 2016.

According to David Keene, coordinator of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, the contestants are "a diverse group of students who are dedicated to serving their community and inspiring others to do the same." The competition aims to raise awareness about the needs of young children and to encourage students to get involved in their communities.

The contestants, who are all seniors, will compete in categories including oral presentation, talent, and personality. The winner will be selected by a panel of judges, including Howard University President Wayne A. Spencer.

"It's important that our students understand the importance of giving back and making a difference in the lives of others," said Dr. Susan Williams, director of Campus Safety. "By participating in this competition, they are demonstrating their commitment to making a positive impact on the lives of others."

The U.S. Postal Service has deployed a new system to aid in the delivery of mail, which the service hopes will improve its operations in the District. The system, called Local, uses advanced technology and automation to increase efficiency and reduce delivery times.

The system is designed to improve delivery accuracy, reduce the need for manual routing, and increase the speed of mail delivery. The system also includes a number of features to improve customer service, such as real-time tracking and online updates for delivery status.

According to the Postal Service, the new system will allow for more precise routing of mail, reducing the need for manual adjustments and improving delivery reliability. The system will also use advanced analytics to identify areas where improvements can be made and to optimize delivery routes.

The Postal Service has been working on the Local system for several years and has invested millions of dollars in its development. The system is currently being deployed in several cities, including Washington, D.C.

The Postal Service hopes that the new system will help it to better serve its customers and improve its operations. The service has faced a number of challenges in recent years, including declining mail volumes and increased competition from other delivery services.

In addition to improving delivery, the Local system is also designed to increase the efficiency of the Postal Service's operations. The system uses a combination of automation, advanced analytics, and real-time data to improve the accuracy and speed of mail delivery.

The implementation of the Local system is part of a larger effort by the Postal Service to modernize its operations and improve its service to customers. The service has been working on a number of initiatives to improve its operations, including the development of new products and services, as well as the expansion of its digital capabilities.

The Postal Service has faced a number of challenges in recent years, including declining mail volumes and increased competition from other delivery services. The new system is designed to help the service to better serve its customers and improve its operations, and the Postal Service hopes that it will be able to deliver on its promise of faster and more reliable mail delivery.
Environmental racism threatens Black health

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The office of the Congressional Black Caucus issued a report on race and the environment emphasizing the need to address the environmental health disparities faced by African Americans.

"In the past, we have focused on environmental issues that affect all Americans," said Rep. John Conyers (D-Mich.). "But now we must focus on the specific needs of our community, particularly the African American community.

The report highlights several key points:

1. African Americans are more likely to live in areas with high levels of pollution.
2. African Americans are more likely to have higher rates of chronic diseases such as asthma, heart disease, and cancer.
3. African Americans are more likely to be exposed to toxic substances from industrial facilities.
4. African Americans are more likely to have less access to green spaces and clean water.

The report also calls for policies that address these disparities, including:

- Increased funding for environmental research and monitoring
- Strengthening enforcement of environmental laws
- Developing green jobs and economic opportunities in the environmental sector
- Increasing access to clean and affordable housing

"We must ensure that our community has the same protections as other Americans," said Rep. Conyers. "Our health and our lives depend on it."
Asian Students' Association adds cultural diversity to "the Mecca"

By Arthur M. Maltese

At the Asian Cultural Night, held Sept. 21 in the Student Center, hundreds of students of arts and crafts, indigenous clothing and the diverse language groups attended the event. The event was sponsored by the Asian Students Association, which celebrates different cultures and builds awareness on campus.

While there was no specific theme for the night, the diversity of cultures showcased included traditional Asian dances, music and foods from various regions.

The event featured performances by students representing different Asian countries, including China, India, Japan, and Korea. There were also traditional dances and music performances, as well as a display of traditional clothing and handicrafts.

Asian Students' Association's President, Grace Okereke, said, "It's an honor to host such an event. It's a great opportunity for students to learn about different cultures and share their experiences. We hope to make this an annual event."

The event concluded with a grand finale featuring a traditional dance and music performance, followed by a group photo of all the performers and attendees.

The event was well-received by attendees, who enjoyed the diverse range of performances and cultural displays. It was a great opportunity for students to learn about and celebrate the diversity of Asian cultures on campus.

Alumni find job hunting difficult

"Expect the worst." That advice fit protection graduate, Karlis Riles, as he was working college graduates. Riles graduated from Howard in May, and found himself with a degree in his hand but a job in his head. He had no experience, no job leads, no network. He felt frustrated and defeated, but he knew he had to find a job even with a degree from Howard University.

Riles says his chance of finding a job is 1.6 percent for the nation, according to a 1994 Business Review. "Graduates under the work force are in the battle of alternatives," Riles said. "They have to decide what to do next."

Riles was one of the students who attended the job fair. He said he was disappointed, but he had a better chance of finding a job at the fair than if he had not attended. Riles said he was able to network with several people at the fair, which helped him find a job.

"The job fair was a great opportunity to meet potential employers," Riles said. "I was able to speak with several people, and I feel confident that I will find a job as a result of attending the fair."
In these fast-changing times, banks that think in the past often get left behind. Today, the financial organizations that are close to the front line are those with the foresight to anticipate change and the ability to act rapidly. As one of the largest and most financially aggressive banks in the country, NationsBank is just such a financial organization.

And you can play a highly visible leading role. With our proven history of keeping our fingers on the industry's pulse, you'll be working in a very dynamic environment with other hands-on, street-smart professionals. While some may look like bankers, they definitely don't think like bankers, which is the way it should be.

Are You An Explorer?

500 years ago, doing business globally was a simple thing. All you had to do was navigate uncharted waters, watch out for sea dragons and hope to not sail off the end of the earth.

Today, it's a bit more complicated. If you know what you want but aren't sure how to get there why not let Sprint chart a career for you.

As part of a Fortune 200 company with sales over $11 billion, we've navigated our way to the edge of today's Information Services world. Why don't you come on over and explore what Sprint has to offer. We'll be interviewing on campus.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4th.
Contact your Planning and Placement office for more information or stop by Sprint booths.

Martin Marietta Corporation salutes the students of Howard University and looks forward to meeting with you at the job fair on October 5.

Martin Marietta Corporation designs, manufactures, integrates and operates systems and products in leading-edge technologies, including aerospace, electronics, information management and energy, and produces materials for construction and industrial applications.

A severe immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) has occurred among homosexual and drug-injecting drug users. The movies have been made. The songs have been sung. Yet, even today, many people remain unaware of this deadly disease.

AIDS seems to be a relatively new phenomenon. But that is not true. AIDS has been going on since the late 1970s. The first full-length animated feature film to treat an acute attack of asthma is "Cats in Boots." It was released in 1994.

The National AIDS Minority Information Education Program is a minority organization funded by the Centers for Disease Control.

The Discovery Channel's AIDS Clinical Trials Unit is one of the world's first ethically sanctioned getting in a line experiment.

AIDS is a widespread epidemic. The so-called "CATS in Boots," AIDS is by far the deadliest. AIDS is deadlier than any other disease. AIDS is definitely a global concern.

At the end of last year, 97,794 African Americans were reported to have AIDS. Of those, 50,000 have already died.

"Hollers" is his first novel, made into a major motion picture. McCall has written many books, but this one is top of his list. McCall's debut offers a vivid perspective into the lives of young black men in America.

McCall, who was born in Harlem, New York, grew up in the Projects. He attended Howard University and later attended Columbia University Law School. He is a journalist and has worked for various publications, including The New York Times and The Washington Post.

McCall's novel, "Hollers," is a powerful portrayal of the lives of young black men in America. The novel follows the lives of six young men, all from different backgrounds, as they navigate the challenges of growing up in a world where they are often seen as threats.

The novel is a powerful reminder of the importance of education and the need for young men to be able to see a future for themselves. It also highlights the need for betterment of the criminal justice system, education, and the need for social change.

McCall's novel is a must-read for anyone interested in understanding the challenges faced by young black men in America.

The Soul Food Joint delivets quality home-style cooking for reasonable prices.

By Kim Johnson
Hillard Staff Writer

With all the story about chick-fil-a, KFC, and McDonald's, it's nice to know there's still a place that cooks like your momma made it.

Specializing in good food, good service, and "just the way momma would cook."

Located at 200 NW, NW near the corner of 12th and U St., the Soul Food Joint was just across the street from a local business idea a few months ago. With the help of two friends, the owners, Robert and Brown Nichols participated in a Small Business Idea Competition in December. The duo is now the owner of The Soul Food Joint.

"Someone on campus came up with the idea that we use this building off the ground level instead of just sitting about," Robert said. "We bought it for $488,000 and have been in business for almost two months now."

So that's why the "fat' Albert" jumbo cheeseburger is so spicy. The "Fat Albert" jumbo cheeseburger is a favorite among customers.

"The food is excellent," said one customer. "I've come here about three times since they opened, and the food is delicious. The waiter is always friendly and the service is excellent. A nice atmosphere with good food.""/

Alumnae take on a 'bebop muzak' world

By Kristin Johnson
Hillard Staff Writer

Stephanie and Susana Jones have seen the avant-garde theater world as it is today and have a unique perspective on the current state of the theater world. Stephanie and Susana Jones, who graduated from Howard University, are alumnae of the Department of English and are currently residing in New York City.

The show, which has been acclaimed for its innovative and dynamic performances, is a response to the increasing popularity of musical theater in the United States. "The Jones Twins, De Bop Muzak," was a joint collaboration started in 1995 by Susana, Stephanie, and their director, Walter Allen Bennett.

The show is based on the idea that bebop music was a reaction to the commercialization of jazz and the rise of the big band. "The show attempts to bring together jazz and the avant-garde theater world in a way that has never been done before," said one of the alumnae.

The show features a cast of eight performers who play various characters, including a jazz musician, a businesswoman, a writer, and a social worker.

The themes of the "Black Muzak" are those of the "Black Muzak" world, and the show is set to the music of bebop, jazz, and avant-garde theater music.

Top 20 Rap Down Homestyles All Time

The theme of this article is to highlight the diversity of rap music and its influence on the cultural landscape of the United States. The list includes some of the most popular and influential rap artists of all time, from Tupac Shakur to Jay-Z, with many others in between. Each artist is highlighted with their most notable album, their impact on the genre, and their influence on future generations.

This list represents the First National Black Press Conference in Brazil in 1968.

Where are the fans?

Since 1924

The Howard University Tribune featured its second loss in a row against Boston State University. This comes as a surprise to many students who are used to easily dismissing their opposition. Our two losses have come early in the season, we wonder? Was last year’s stellar season just a fluke? We have even introduced Bison T-shirts, that’s not a coincidence. Represented in large numbers at the Bison’s first home game, it is no longer automatic and the 12th man is going to play an important role at home games this year.

Clinton’s aid reforms

Recently, foreign policy issues have dominated the United States foreign policy landscape. Clinton’s policy, guided by Paul Wolfowitz, is more focused on military power, but it is a policy that has made progress as it continues to do so.

The domestic agenda now requires a taken back on this high profile “new world order” theme; however, the president is expected to launch an important initiative soon on welfare reform. Along with the loss of men in the military and deficit reduction, welfare reform was one of Clinton’s most important initiatives. While it is not a high profile issue, the poor, however, are not being forgotten by the administration. The president will continue to work on welfare reform in the new year.

Freedom of speech has been a popular topic of debate in recent years. The present faculty-use moratorium has been the subject of much debate, as many students feel that it is a restriction on their rights. The issue of freedom of speech has been hotly debated by students seeking to denounce the moratorium that university officials have enacted. Using university facilities for their meetings and activities has been restricted, as the university has prohibited the group Unity Nation from using the university facilities. This has caused much concern among students, as they feel that their rights to freedom of speech are being infringed upon.

Unmuzzle the “Mecca”

There is a growing movement to open the door to the media and to allow for more free speech at Howard University. This has been a topic of much debate, as many students feel that the university is too restrictive in its policies. The university has recently relaxed some of its policies on free speech, allowing for more open discussion on campus.

Dear Editor,

Upon reading the editorial on the new crime legislation (February 28-29), I was compelled to write a response to the comments it made. The editorial seemed to focus on the issue of crime, which is a serious concern for many Americans. It is important to address this issue, but it is equally important to consider the rights of individuals and the impact of legislation on them.

The author of the editorial seems to suggest that the government should be more involved in the issue of crime. I believe that this is a reasonable stance, as it is the responsibility of the government to protect its citizens. However, the author’s suggestion to increase police enforcement and to make the death penalty more accessible is a cause for concern. These measures may not be effective in reducing crime, and they could have negative consequences for individuals who are affected by them.

I believe that it is important to consider the rights of individuals when addressing the issue of crime. The government should be held accountable for its actions, and it should be transparent about its policies. I urge you to consider these points in your future articles and to continue to promote meaningful and thoughtful discussions on important issues.

Sincerely,

So our parents all our national and international interests, and we believe them. They lead us in the path of righteousness, and we accept. Next, they present us with a choice. They say, "We have no say in the matter, but we can still make our choice. We can choose to go to church, and we can still attend a naturalistic one."

Most of us hesitate to go natural for two reasons. First, we are not familiar with the idea of not only hair but also beauty. We are not used to seeing beautiful women who look like we do.

In our culture, we are taught that we should not make ourselves beautiful. We are taught that we should not put a lot of stock into looking good. We are taught that we should not care about how we look. We are taught that we should not care about how others think of us.

The idea that we can make ourselves beautiful is not popular in our culture. We are taught that we should not care about how we look. We are taught that we should not care about how others think of us.

The naked truth about what some women dress the way they do

Alma Davis

Thinking the idea of an average woman would worry so much in society is not realistic. We are told that if we try to look pretty, it builds our self-esteem and confidence. We are told that if we try to look pretty, it builds our self-esteem and confidence.

Moreover, I believe that my hair is not a bad thing. I believe that if you have beautiful hair, you are beautiful. I believe that if you have beautiful hair, you are beautiful.

My hair is not the only thing that is beautiful in me. I have beautiful eyes, beautiful skin, and beautiful hands. My hair is just one of the many things that make me beautiful.

As a young child, I would try to put on makeup and dress up. I would try to make myself look pretty. I would try to make myself look pretty.

I have been told that my hair is not the only thing that is beautiful in me. I have beautiful eyes, beautiful skin, and beautiful hands. My hair is just one of the many things that make me beautiful.

HERE'S A CONTEST

YOU MIGHT REALLY END UP GETTING INTO.

This contest could open some doors for you in the automotive industry. Not to mention some doors on a new 1995 Nissan Sentra!

Introducing 'Nissan Designs for the Future.' A competition established by Nissan Motor Corporation U.S.A. in conjunction with the National Society of Black Engineers to discover new talent in the fields of automotive design and engineering. Just design or improve an original safety or environmental feature for the inside or outside of a car, or design the car itself, and you could win.

First you'll need to get an entry kit from your campus Career Center, your college's engineering school, or your NSBE Region 2 chairperson. Or receive an entry kit by following the mail-in instructions below. All designs will be judged by Nissan Research and Development on Nissan Design International, whose decision will be final.

Enter the "Nissan Designs for the Future" competition today. If you win you can open the door with a lease on a new car, but at the same time you'll have opened a door to your future.
