Thomas Narven Lewis Collection
Collection 62-1

Prepared & Revised by:

Manuscript Division

Scope Note

This collection which spans ½ linear foot, relates to Thomas Narven Lewis a Liberian who was educated in America, and returned to his country to make major contributions to their education and culture. The papers were donated and compiled by Augusta H. Clawson who sorted these materials from the papers of her father, Frank Clawson. Frank Clawson befriended and aided young Lewis while he was a struggling student in America. In fulfillment of an academic requirement, Augusta Clawson researched Lewis using the letters in her father's possession and made inquiries to the institutions Lewis attended. The result being an excellent biographical sketch on Lewis, dated 1934.

Most of the letters in the collection are from Lewis to Frank Clawson while Lewis was a student at Lincoln University from 1898 to 1903. There are also letters written to Frank Clawson from 1909-1932 after Lewis returned to Lower Buchanan, Grand Bassa, Liberia as a physician and educator. This group of correspondence describes life in Liberia and the effect of World War I in Liberia, plus other political issues.

Also included are correspondence between Augusta Clawson and individuals from whom she requested information on Lewis. Included in her research notes are some personal papers relating to his educational pursuits at Lincoln University and transcripts listing exact courses and grades. Also included is a picture of Thomas Lewis with his three sons dated 1931.

One of Lewis' major contributions to his Liberian culture was the reduction of the BASSA language to a written one. After considerable effort he had the matrix made for a character that would fit a printing machine.

Scope Note

The highlight of the collection is a book printed in BASSA, a Bassa alphabet chart and other printed material in Bassa plus notes on the Bassa Alphabet. In his correspondence to Clawson, Lewis explained how the alphabet was made printable and the controversy it created with the British Authorities in Liberia who authorized only the English language to be taught.
