Serving the Howard University community since 1924

I'm not ready to publish the final 17 percent they had decided to provide for the "Voluntary Give-Back Program," a plan that will allow employees to voluntarily give up 17 percent of their salaries to the university, according to Ladner. The university wants to use these contributions to pay for administrative offices, in which employees are expected to downsize their work and contribute to the reduction of the workforce.

The university had approached the executive committee about the plan, but some members of the committee were not entirely happy with the idea. The university, which has already laid off several hundred employees, is trying to avoid taking any further action that could lead to more layoffs.

The "Voluntary Give-Back Program" has been met with mixed reactions. Some employees are willing to contribute to the reduction of the workforce, while others are not comfortable with the idea of giving up a portion of their salaries. The program is currently under discussion, and the university is hoping to get feedback from employees before making a final decision.

The university is facing financial difficulties due to the current economic climate and is trying to find ways to reduce costs. The "Voluntary Give-Back Program" is one of the measures being considered to help the university cope with its financial problems.
WHMM-TV officials deny rumors of instability

The Hilltop

WHMM-TV, including its top-rated senior producer Join Jefferson said the station will provide services such as studio and office space that the studio staff is ready to improve the station and will make the best, better as an asset of the station. According to Grzeski, the station will be able to offer the community with a better broadcast signal. A new receiving a signal will now receive a stronger one, and the station will begin the process of improving the station's audience.

Graffiti plagues Howard Towers

By Joanne Ewsele

Graffiti, an inscription or design written on a wall...can be seen. Even as the sun sets behind the Howard Plaza Towers, graffiti has been seen.

In the past few days, maintenance engineer Robert King said graffiti has been seen everywhere, and it is a problem that has been quite common.

According to King, he has been called to the Howard Plaza Towers to clean up graffiti that has been seen. The problem is not a new one, but it has been seen a few times before.

There were 35 new members who attended the Student Assembly meeting last Tuesday, according to President McKee. Twenty-one of these new members were eligible to vote, according to the by-laws of the Student Assembly. The meeting was held in the University Center on Tuesday, October 24, 1994.

McKee introduced the new members and said they have been accepted into the Student Assembly. The new members were then voted on by the existing Student Assembly members. The vote was unanimous, and the new members were welcomed to the Student Assembly.

The meeting continued with the discussion of the GSA (Graduate Student Assembly) and SGA (Student Government Association) meetings. McKee said that the SGA will be held on the first Tuesday of each month, and the GSA will be held on the third Tuesday of each month. The meetings will be held in the University Center.

McKee also discussed the upcoming events and activities that the Student Assembly will be involved in. These include the Quad Angle, a magazine that will be published twice a year, and the University Center, a location for various events and meetings.

McKee concluded the meeting by thanking everyone for their participation and looking forward to the next meeting.

Confession shocks nation, angers Blacks
Susan Smith deceives country with false murder allegations

A 6

By LaVinda Stone

"A Black man has taken my kids and I can't have them," Susan Smith said as she sobbed in the arms of a deputy. Union County, South Carolina, sheriff's deputy took her to a holding cell and then drove her to a hospital to be examined. Smith told police shortly after the boys were found that an ex-boyfriend was trying to kidnap her children. But the police quickly found out that her story was a lie.

"I never had a problem with my customers," Doug Brooks, manager of The Bicycle Place in Harrisburg, said. "He's a good customer."

"I think he's trying. But the bureaucracy that's already in place makes it difficult to put one over on me," Frazier said. "I'm not the one to tell people what they can do, what they can't do." Frazier said. "It's always a good idea to ride with a night light, even if you don't think you need one.

"I think there's a need for people to be more aware of the risks involved prior to riding," Prange said. "You should never ride with a helmet unless you know that it's going to be a normal day.

"If you're going to ride with a helmet, make sure you know how to wear it correctly," Brooks said. President Aristide faces task of rebuilding Haiti in 15 months

The international community must give aid to lift the economic depressions the Haitians are suffering from...The help of the U.S. is essential to democracy in Haiti.

-Lyonel Laviolette, counselor of education, culture and information at the Haitian Embassy

The Haitian Student Association at Howard University, sponsored by the Haitian Embassy, plans a farewell for Aristide and his government on Dec. 10. An informal meeting is planned on the same day. The association plans a benefit for the family of the late Haiti President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, who was assassinated last week.

The government, which has been praised for its economic policies, has received strong criticism for its handling of the recent political crisis.

Student Survey Results

- Did you know most Howard men are on the issue of paying for dates? According to a recent HILLTOP survey 45% of male students feel that a woman should pay for half a date while 33% of male students said they would pick up the check. Check me out if the woman

Surprising statistic?

- 33% of students polled are currently involved in some type of romantic relationship.

What?

- The average length of time that male students are in romantic relationships is 2 to 5 years.

Surprise!

- Yes, students are actually more than 87% report that they are usually involved and the average number of sexual partners for this semester is 1. In interviews, they say some students have sex from 1% to 5%. Out of that percentage 7% are still virgin. The most surprising reason for practicing abstinence among virgin students is religious convictions.

What?

- The average percentage of female respondents or usually do not care that they are older than other women. It means that older women and male students may not necessarily be popular 45% of male respondents reported dating older women.

What?

- More of the respondents, both male and female report that the most attractive feature on a man was the body and the woman is the body that was there in a loving relationship. Some women, looking for a good relationship, seek a rankable personality as the most important feature.

Jamil X:

- "What are you dating them for? Are you doing anything for them out of loving in return?"

Kible:

- "I don't think that there are relationships, 100% just a lot of people think of relationships."

Khalil:

- "I know why because they get that Howard's campus. So I'm going to say what I want to say. I wouldn't want to commit either way because when women are at school they think of nothing else but school."

When she walks into a room, her presence is immediately known. Her energy is infectious, and her friendliness is unyielding. Eleanor W. Taylor, a veteran professor and administrator in Howard University's Department of English, has a way of making everyone feel at ease. Her warm personality and dedication to the field of English are evident in her teaching and leadership roles.

Taylor received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Berea College in 1955 and a Masters Degree from Northwestern University in 1956. Since 1956 through 1961, Taylor served as Assistant Professor in African American Studies and Humanities at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln before moving to Howard University in 1961 as an Associate Professor in English.

Taylor's vision and spirit are sought after on all levels. "Brenda Zanders, former Manager of the Howard Auditorium, recalls that Eleanor was well versed, yet very modest. "We always knew she was intelligent, but we never thought she would go on to be a professor."

Taylor's influence extends beyond her role as a professor. She has been named Chair of the Howard University School of Arts and Humanities and has served as Director of the Office of Continuing Education. Her leadership has been recognized with several honorary degrees, and she has been awarded numerous grants and fellowships.

Taylor has always been interested in writing. She's another level nationally and internationally, and her contributions to the field of English have been significant. Taylor's academic career has been marked by a commitment to diversity and inclusion, and she has made a special effort to mentor and support underrepresented students.

Taylor's family has been a source of inspiration. "My family, like the rest of the community, was growing up in a segregated society," she said. "We had to work twice as hard as others to get the same opportunities." Taylor's grandmother had a profound impact on her. "She was a strong woman who taught me the importance of education," Taylor said.

Taylor's own career has been defined by her dedication to her students and her passion for teaching. "Every group of students I've had has been special," she said. "I love watching them grow and learn." Taylor's influence is not limited to Howard University. She has been a mentor to many students and has played a key role in the development of the English department.

Taylor's impact is felt beyond Howard University. She has been named a member of the Board of Directors of the National Association of Black School Educators and has served as President of the American Association of University Women. Her contributions to the field of English have been recognized with numerous awards and honorary degrees.

Taylor's legacy will undoubtedly continue to inspire students and scholars for years to come. "Eleanor is a true leader," said Keaton, her former student. "She has a way of making you feel comfortable and respected."

Black Men: White's scapegoats?

The Hilltop is both saddened and upset about this week's unfortunate events which revolve around the issue of race.

The city of New York launched a police operation to investigate a series of apparent carjackings. Police have been repeatedly interrogated by the police. Smith finally broke down and confessed that she was responsible for the carjackings. She claimed that she had been duped by a man.

A cry of outrage rose throughout the nation. How could she? What kind of a mother could kill her children in such a heinous way? The question that many people believe that the police found out just how much worse it could get.

The police performed house searches in Black neighborhoods. Saddened, because many of the communities were targeted. Employees were fired, and some were even arrested.

The good folks of Union, South Carolina banded together to support their local police department. Although restructuring can be very painful, we must move forward.

We truly believe that the University is one of the best institutions for education. We applaud the decision of the Board of Trustees and the Interim Administration to make these changes. The new facility use guidelines established by the Interim Administration pose a formidable obstacle to many of the students.

The Hilltop is both saddened and upset about this week's unfortunate events. But the Hilltop is also hopeful. We believe that the University can overcome these challenges and emerge stronger.

Affirmative action is an essential part of the University's mission. Diversity still exists. It is the responsibility of our leaders to ensure that diversity is maintained and that our students are valued.

Diversity still exists.

Oral and written histories are a crucial part of our tradition. We are committed to preserving the stories of our past.

The Hilltop is both saddened and upset about this week's unfortunate events. But the Hilltop is also hopeful. We believe that the University can overcome these challenges and emerge stronger.

The Hilltop welcomes your views on any public issue, faculty, administration or student. We encourage you to share your thoughts with us.

The Hilltop encourages you to share your original ideas and opinions. We welcome your letters and comments. Please address your letters to the Editor-in-Chief, Howard University, Washington, D.C. 20059.

I have been going to church all my life. My life is not complete without it. Indeed, it fills the void of most of what I have in my life. While it is that hypocrisies do exist, I feel that the church is a very important part of my life. I feel that it does a great job in situations that we as a society are not able to. I do not like to speak too much about God, but I do believe that the church is a very important part of my life.

"I do not need to go to church in order to be God." But again, another undeniable truth. However, most of the people that employ this excuse were only trying to justify their lack of attendance. While you can prattle on and on about how God will do it all for you, I believe that God also tells us to "Pray in the Spirit and sing praises." I feel that this is the only way to truly connect with God.

I believe that what we ask people why they do not attend church is not just limited to the church itself. Most of which I had used my life's work is in the church and the new perspectives that I have been taught. I would take some insight concerning the "church for the hungry soul."

"Church is full of hypocrisy." I think, at least, this is a truth. This congregation, there are many people that do not believe in God. They talk like Christians, but they only show up there because it is what they have to do. Robert Rohn, editor and publisher of "The Nation of Islam," is a good example of this. "All preachers want your money, and they only preach in the name of God." It is just a money-making machine. I think that this is a very big mistake.

The fact is that, in front of Christ, I am a little boy with a lot of problems. I have a lot of problems in my life and I have to deal with them. I believe that if I deal with them, I will be able to do that. First, I believe that a lot of people are not able to deal with their problems. They do not have the courage to deal with them. However, I am able to deal with them and I believe that there is a "Satan." Only when you are able to deal with your problems, you are able to deal with God.

"He is not a true Christian." I think that this is incorrect. I believe that the church is a very important part of my life and I believe that it is a very important part of other people's lives as well. I believe that we must continue to press forward with the church and that we must continue to learn from it.

An angry and aggressive community is not necessarily a community that has a lot of problems. I believe that a community that is angry and aggressive is a community that is dealing with its problems. I believe that we must continue to press forward with the church and that we must continue to learn from it.

Jazz Ensemble dazzles Rankin Chapel audience

By Ashley Hardy

at the Lincoln Theatre on the campus of Howard University. The ensemble, led by Assistant Music Director James Young, performed a selection of popular jazz standards.

The performance was met with enthusiastic applause from the audience, who danced and sang along with the performers. The ensemble's musicality and energy were infectious, and the performance left a lasting impression on all in attendance.

The Lincoln Theatre is one of the oldest and most iconic venues in the city, and the jazz ensemble's performance was a fitting tribute to the rich history of music at Howard University.

Young soccer team finishes soundly

By William Smith

The Howard University geese topped the Mid-East Athletic Conference (MEAC) regular season standings by a wide margin, finishing one game ahead of second-place Bethune-Cookman.

The Howard University geese finished the season with a 12-2-1 record, including a 7-1-1 MEAC mark. They were led by senior forward Jason Williams, who scored 12 goals and added six assists.

The team also had solid performances from midfielders Keisha Brown and Kenneth Johnson, who combined for 13 goals and 11 assists.

D.C. boxers bring foes to their knees in ring

The D.C. boxers faced off in a series of intense matches, with each fighter demonstrating their skills and techniques.

One of the standout boxers was the popular fighter, John Williams, who has won multiple titles and is considered one of the top fighters in the mid-Atlantic region.

In the main event, Williams faced off against his toughest opponent yet, the rising star, Michael Brown. The fight was intense from the start, with both fighters displaying their skills.

In the final round, Williams landed a powerful shot that put Brown out of the ring, securing his victory and the championship title.

The crowd roared in approval as Williams celebrated his hard-fought victory, cementing his place as a top boxer in the region.
