Students rally for role in University reforms

Questions arise about administration's exclusion of students from major decisions

BY JAMEL PRESSLY

Leah Woods

You work at Howard and you are working to benefit the campus, but do you know what do you do to your students? Do you call your students, and then you call your students? Do you make sure your students are involved in the process? Do you make sure your students are involved in the reforms?

What do you do to your students? Do you call your students, and then you call your students? Do you make sure your students are involved in the process? Do you make sure your students are involved in the reforms?

The University is making changes, but the students are not involved in the process. The students are not asked for their opinions, and the students are not involved in the reforms.

The administration is making changes, but the students are not involved in the process. The students are not asked for their opinions, and the students are not involved in the reforms.

The students are not being heard, and the students are not involved in the process. The students are not asked for their opinions, and the students are not involved in the reforms.

Students visit, exchange schools

By Aubonne Woods

Unlike most students who never visit another country, the students of Stanford University are among the fortunate who have the opportunity to live on other continents, meet people, and enjoy foreign cuisine. This year, the students chose to visit the University of California at San Diego.

Before leaving, the students were introduced to their hosts and the Stanford University president, Albert K. Reay. The president gave them a brief overview of the institution and its history. He also expressed his gratitude for the students' participation in the exchange program.

Upon arrival, the students were welcomed by the faculty and staff of the University of California at San Diego. They were taken on a tour of the campus, where they had the opportunity to explore the facilities and learn about the university's academic programs.

During their stay, the students participated in academic activities, including lectures, discussions, and workshops. They also had the opportunity to interact with students, faculty, and staff from the University of California at San Diego, which allowed them to exchange ideas and experiences.

The exchange program not only provided the students with an enriching educational experience but also helped them develop cross-cultural communication skills. The students had the chance to learn about different cultures, traditions, and ways of life, which expanded their horizons and strengthened their appreciation for diversity.

Overall, the exchange program was a valuable opportunity for the students to broaden their perspectives and gain insights into the diverse aspects of academic and cultural life.

Howard students experience latest in corporate technology

By_Byron Matheny

"The opportunity to be in the presence of innovative technology that exists in the corporate world is unique," said Byron Matheny, a senior computer science major. "Being able to see and experience the latest in corporate technology is exciting and educational."

Howard University's College of Engineering and Computer Science has established partnerships with several companies, including Google, Microsoft, and IBM, to provide students with hands-on experience in the field. These partnerships have resulted in opportunities for students to work on real-world projects and gain valuable experience.

"We are fortunate to have such strong partnerships with industry," said Matheny. "These partnerships provide our students with opportunities to develop their skills and build their resumes."

Howard students have the opportunity to work on projects for companies such as Facebook, Apple, and IBM. They have also had the opportunity to participate in hackathons and coding competitions.

"These experiences are invaluable," said Matheny. "They give our students a chance to apply what they've learned in the classroom and gain practical skills."

Overall, Matheny believes that Howard students have the opportunity to experience the latest in corporate technology and become competitive in the job market.

Sororities, honorary founders

By Crystal D. Davis and Alexis J. Henry

While many organizations celebrate their founding with a special ceremony or dedication, Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc. celebrated their 91st anniversary by choosing to observe their founding with community service.

"We are concerned about people," Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority,Inc. President Pearl D. Sanders said. "So we chose to observe their founding by doing work in the local community." The programs held programs this week on topics such as the future of the African American woman, career paths and utilizing their resources, or opportunities, will be held on Feb. 21, 1995 in the Black Culture Center. "We want to inspire young women to know that we think they can be whatever they want to be," said Sanders. "We believe that's important because with all the African American women that are in the community and especially with African-American females in particular, it's very important to have a role model or mentor and standing on their own feet."

Professor, renowned painter inspires with art

By Annya D. Anglin

"I think about color," said Alphonse Mucha, a Czech painter who revolutionized the art world with his unique style. Mucha was known for his vibrant colors and bold lines, which he used to create some of the most iconic illustrations of his time.

At the University of the District of Columbia (UDC), a community event was held to celebrate Mucha's birthday and to discuss the impact of his work on contemporary art.

The event was held in the Multipurpose Room of the UDC Fine Arts Building and featured a panel discussion with art historians and critics who explored the influence of Mucha's work on modern art and design.

The panelists discussed the importance of Mucha's work in the context of contemporary art and design, as well as his influence on the development of the Art Nouveau style.

"Mucha was a master at using color and line to create a sense of movement and energy," said one of the panelists. "His work has had a lasting impact on the way we think about design and how we use color in our everyday lives.

Another panelist added, "Mucha's work is a reminder of the power of art to communicate and inspire. His use of color and line is still relevant today and his legacy continues to shape the way we see the world around us.

The event concluded with a Q&A session, during which the audience had the opportunity to ask the panelists questions about Mucha's life and work.

Washington Post sports columnists advise writers

By Michael Wilson

Michael Wilson, a sports columnist for The Washington Post, offered advice to aspiring sports journalists. He said the key to success in sports journalism is an expanded knowledge of all sporting events.

"The most important thing you need to know about sports is that they're bigger than you," Wilson said. "You need to think about the bigger picture, the bigger picture, the bigger picture.

Wilson also emphasized the importance of networking. "The key to success in sports journalism is building relationships," he said. "You need to build relationships with other journalists, with coaches and with players.

The event was held in the Phillips Center for Performing Arts and was sponsored by the UDC Athletic Department.

The panelists discussed the challenges of covering sports and the importance of staying up-to-date on the latest trends and developments in the field.

"The key to success in sports journalism is to be on top of the latest developments," said one of the panelists. "You need to be able to stay ahead of the curve and to be able to provide your readers with the latest information.

million by eliminating free rail-to-bus

Authority (WMATA), which is in charge of Metro services.

At the 1995 fiscal budget hearing by the Committee on Regional Affairs, it was decided that in order to cut the subsidy, the District and the city would have to pay an additional $3.2 million, which would come from the city budget.

The city budget, however, is looking at ways to cut costs, which could affect the subsidy.

"We want to continue to provide full service, says WMATA's Deputy Director of Operations, "but payments are arranged differently."

Metro officials are concerned that any cuts in service could affect the ridership.

"This year we're looking at ways to cut costs, but we don't want to see any cuts in service," a Metro official said.

Republican leaders positioned for power in Congress

BY Clay McFadden

With a charge of fines cutting a different agenda, issues of health care and crime are coming into the political equation. Republicans are already positioning themselves for what could be a year of big changes in Congress. The House Republican leadership restructured itself Monday, with Newt Gingrich in charge of the House and Tom DeLay as majority leader. Gingrich said the plan is to focus on the issues that the Republicans have been perceived as losing in the past—health care and crime. The move comes as the country faces a number of challenges, including a budget deficit, a slow economy, and a rising tide in support for the Democratic Party. The Republican leadership has been working to distance itself from the President, and to highlight their own agenda. The move also comes as the Republicans have been trying to distance themselves from the President's recent health care proposals. The Republicans have been criticized for their handling of the health care debate, and they are hoping to use the move to distance themselves from the President and highlight their own agenda. While leadership, their can be no leadership in a final meaningful community, there can be no real leadership in the African community. AFRICARE President C. Payne Lucas said Wednesday at the Hilltop that a few cases in which leadership was needed, in areas such as food and medical assistance, there was no leadership. According to Mr. Lucas, leadership is needed in Africa, but it is not found in the African community. He said, "There are many things wrong with Africa. There is no more to be done. The only thing that can be done is to help Africa in its current state, but it is not in Africa's interest to help itself."

So many things are wrong with Africa, it is said. There is no more to be done. But the task must be done. The need for leadership is not going to go away. Mr. Lucas also noted that leadership is needed in Africa, but it is not found in the African community. He said, "There are many things wrong with Africa. There is no more to be done. The only thing that can be done is to help Africa in its current state, but it is not in Africa's interest to help itself."

A new highway is being built. With speed limits, red signals, traffic and other cars on the road, it is unlike any other freeway ever constructed.

There are two main features of this superhighway. First, it will have gates every mile where you can leave and get back on. Second, it will be a toll road where you pay for the privilege of using it.

Oh my god!
Our people still can't figure out" What's going On" Even though " We all in the Same Gang". Niggas With Attitudes keep bringing us towards "Self Destruction"
Have you heard the "Rebel Music" Or is it that "Niggas are Scared of Revolution" "Slavery is back in Effect"and it didn't even "take a nation of millions to hold us back"
But you "Do what cha Like" Cause this ain' t nothin' but "The Same old Song"
I mean sure every man has a " Fantasy" But can we really say to ourselves "What a wonderful World"

To My Love
I will hold you in my arms Every day and every night Where nothing can harm you As long as I squeeze tight. I will try to keep you happy And love you with all my might In the hopes that we will stay together So that you'll be mine for the rest of my life

The conversation continues

A. Tim Buntine: I think men want a partner, someone they can have a good time with and someone that has their best interest in mind.

Marsha Lewis: I think we want someone who can’t be just our partner or our man, but our friend, someone we can share with. We’re all been raised into situations where men are the providers, the breadwinners, and the leaders. It’s ingrained in our culture.

Warren Davis: I think a woman not being able to physically get you on her lap. In a way, it brings you closer to men, and you understand that you’re not the only one with a different opinion. It’s something that was talked about. I am having a hard time understanding the feeling because if I were in your position, I would do something different.

A. Tim Buntine: It’s like you want to take a test drive.

A. Warren: No. You just have to let the member or the opportunity of that happen. You're saying they're not going to be there for you. You're saying they're not going to be there for you.

C. Jamal: I want to comment on what you said earlier. It's like you want to test the waters a little bit, but when you get out of college, then you apply those things. I think you need to take more time and respect what you're saying.

D. Amara: What's that I've been saying. If that is what you want, then that is what you want. Is that the reason why they did not accept you? It was because you were too young or too old. It's something that was in your mind, and you need to take that into consideration.

E. Roger: I think it’s because you were not in your mind. You need to think of the person you are talking to. It’s something that was in your mind, and you need to take that into consideration.

Warren: Personally, for me, it's not my problem. What I want is that we think of the person you are talking to. We are all been raised into situations where women are not as much as men do, and it's not as much. I think it’s because you were not in your mind. You need to think of the person you are talking to.

Q. Does anyone want to say anything in closing?

A. Woman: Just to say, I am available to help you talk to your friends. You know what I mean?

Reflections

I didn’t start this discussion, and I didn’t waste my time. I just wanted to say that we’re all been raised into situations where women are not as much as men do, and it’s not as much. I think it’s because you were not in your mind. You need to think of the person you are talking to.

When I reflect back on my experience at Howard University Hospital, I felt tingly, a little short of disgust. I think the hospital gives Howard University a bad name. There may be many great nurses and doctors that work there, but you don’t have anybody to help you.

The only positive aspect of the experience was realizing I had a family away from home. My sister, my friends, my family. If it had not been for them, I would have been alone. It’s about being in a crowd that you don’t know in a city that you don’t have anybody to help you.
Jazz group adds new twist to musical genres

Talented vocalists on "Entyme" on the verge of stardom

"Entyme is an amalgamation of hip-hop, R&B or rap music categories," Smith said.

"People are tired of being stuck with old school music with what you seeing," Young added jokingly.

"What you see here is what we hear."

"Our sound, like most Black music, has been influenced directly or indirectly by the church. Black music goes to different places, but it's still Black music," Young explained.

"We work together well mainly because we know each other and because we know each other's voices in the holy spirit. We are in tune with each other internally. That's what makes us unique. It's something you can never do anything our parents couldn't do, but we have to change it," Cleavon insisted.

"What you see here is what we strive for. The chemistry between the voices, the melody, the message and the listener. That's what makes us unique. It's something you can never do anything our parents couldn't do," Cleavon insisted.

"If you're going to toil for success, somebody has to get the work done. We're not saying we're not going to have fun, but we're going to work for what we want," Young added.

"Black music goes to different places, but in our music we have respect for our roots."

VIOLENT DEATHS: A touchstone for community response

Violent deaths are a touchstone for a community's response. When a violent death occurs, it is often met with shock, outrage, and a feeling of helplessness. This is especially true when the death occurs in a way that is unexpected or senseless, such as a mass shooting or a act of terrorism.

In such cases, the community often feels compelled to arm themselves and protect their families. This can lead to a culture of fear and suspicion, where people become more isolated and less trusting of one another.

It is important for communities to respond to violent deaths in a way that promotes healing and reconciliation. This can include providing support to those who are grieving, holding community events to bring people together, and working to prevent similar tragedies from occurring in the future.

In the end, violent deaths are a reminder of the fragility of life and the importance of coming together as a community to support one another. By responding to violent deaths in a way that promotes healing and reconciliation, we can work to build a stronger and more resilient community.
Haitians in the Dominican Republic find no rest, refuge

Debby McKay

Living life in a country that takes up the entire northern third of Hispaniola may involve interesting viewpoints of the current political situation and how one would like to bring about a change. What I read in newspapers and hear from locals, I have become involved with some aspects of the political system and the media side of things.

The problem of integration that works with both human and women's rights in Santiago and the small towns in the back of these communities, I expected people to speak about concerns such as lack of running water, malnutrition and corruption. Instead, the conversation was overwhelmingly geared towards the audience — how to best understand the environment, but not thought would come into contact.

Registration occurs when Dominican soldiers and police forcefully take Haitians back to Haiti. It is not easy for Haitians to become legal citizens here. Unlike the U.S., you go to any national police station and eventually apply for citizenship or acquire it through birth in American soil. Here if you are Haitian you are free.

One of the main problems was the lack of affordable fee. This is due to the fact that nearly all programs were paid for by donations from the U.S. government.

On the other hand, the Haitian people had been used to do field work in the cane fields, which is a very hard work and they never received a fee for their work. They were not too much educated and were used to work more and get more as they were used to the nature of work they had been doing. They were used to work more and get more.

There was a lack of good advice. The people had no idea how to do such things and where to go. They were just told to come to any police station and apply for citizenship or acquire it through birth in American soil. Here if you are Haitian you are free.

Ice-T takes creative control with 'Born Dead'

Body Count unscarred by controversial 'Cop Killer' album

By Miguel R. Rivas

The marriage between African-American jazz rhythms and Latin beats started in the 1940's with the help of late jazz trumpeter, Dizzy Gillespie. The marriage between African and Latin rhythms pushed the envelope in the music of the popular Dave Afrom, a "flying trumpet" named by Gillespie. Sanchez's dad especially worked with him. "He was so cool," Sanchez said. "He would sit down at the drums, because the best way to see a jazz spectrum is on the drums." Sanchez studied the conga drum at the age of eight and picked up the sax at 17.

Sanchez's adventure for jazz intensified when his sister bought him Miles Davis and Billie Holiday's "Lady in Blue," and he was hooked. "I had been playing since I was 12. I decided to go on the track because the first time I heard jazz it knocked me over," the saxophonist says.

Sanchez signed with Columbia Records, and his recent released his debut album entitled "The Departure." He's appeared on What's Happening?, playing a saxophonist who is the last in a long line of brothers. Sanchez confirmed that he would play in one of the most important theater of the century.

Osanyin Agye's independent film "Achilles Alas" will be released on November 18th. The film is a story of a young African man who is unable to adapt to the American educational system because of the lack of support and understanding of his culture.

The film will teach the viewers about the cultural differences between African and African Americans. It is important for African and African Americans to learn about the differences of brother and sisterhood.

The film is directed by Agye, a Nigerian playwright and actor. The film has been produced by the Department of Theatre Arts and箭's performance war well received by the audience. "I was thrilled. He [Dizzy] had never been a flute player," Sanchez said. "Although he was not very familiar with Gillespie, the popular album won the Grammy award and the album was well-received by the audience.

The marriage between African and Latin rhythms is a very important tradition in the history of music.我们可以看到,这篇新闻报道了Ice-T和Body Count的音乐作品和他们背后的故事。他们通过融合拉丁音乐和非洲音乐,在音乐界创造了一种新的声音。文章还提到了Dizzy Gillespie对非洲音乐的影响,以及这种音乐传统在非洲裔美国人生活中的重要性。

Undefeated Spikers capture NCAA bid

By Druma Harris
Hilltop Staff Writer

The Howard University women’s volleyball team completed an undefeated run in the MEAC, capturing their first conference crown. The Lady Spikers, under the leadership of Coach Cheryl Miller, finished the regular season with a perfect 17-0 record, and followed it up with victories in the MEAC Championship and the NCAA Tournament, where they earned the right to continue playing until the national championship game.

The Lady Spikers were dominant throughout the season, setting records for wins, block and kills. Their most notable victory was a 3-0 sweep of Virginia Union University in the MEAC Championship game, which earned them a spot in the NCAA Tournament.

Women’s basketball head coach Renee Williams said her team is also looking to contend for a conference championship. Williams said she expects her team to be led by senior forward Kisha Riggins and junior guard Kisha Smith, who both played well in the season opener against Old Dominion.
