Incoming freshmen move into the Bethune Annex dorm assisted by their family.

The BIG Move In Day

By Danielle Scruggs Assistant Campus Editor

Over 1,600 incoming freshmen and transfers moved into their dorms during August 17. Despite the late night, students were excited to get into their new dorm rooms.

The Student Health Center also provides psychiatric services, a university counseling service that helps students cope with campus life through workshops, small group growth, and professional development programs.

Another helpful resource is the Career Services Office (CSO), located in the School of Education. CSO provides walk-in service from 2 to 5 p.m. Monday through Wednesday, after which students can make appointments for career exploration services such as interview preparation, resume critiques, internship opportunities, and professional development programs.

No student at the month should have to worry about career counseling. The Career Services Office (CSO), located on the second floor of the C.B. Powell Building, provides career counseling, job interview tips, resume critiques, and employment opportunities. The Career Services Office also provides important resources for students including: books, job binders, university archives, audiotapes, art, prints, photographs and more that help students research their career options.

The center of the faculty and the student's education is responsible for general services available that are beneficial to new students who want to make a smooth transition from high school to campus life. These resources run the gamut from health to academics to safety.

Kim Wells provides his guidance to students looking for help with their career paths.

Safety Tips for the Mecca; Things Freshman Should Know

By Veronica-Marie Miller

Bright-eyed and eager to begin their college careers, nearly 1,600 freshmen moved into the Bethune Annex dorm on August 17. Prepared to face the challenges of college life, these students must also face the reality of campus crime. As urban com­munities in a major metropolitan city, Howard has had to share the burden of problems, where its students have become victims.

The following is only a partial list of safety tips for new college students. Other information can be obtained from Campus Police, resident assistants, and orientation leaders.

room, ask for identification before letting them in. Keep your door wide open if an unfamiliar person is in your room.

Never prop open outside doors. Opened entrances allow non-residents to enter the dorms, a situation that compromises the safety of everyone.

Campus Safety

Though it may be reported time after time, it's extremely important to walk in groups and to be aware of your surroundings, especially after dark.

At night, avoid shortcuts at all costs. Be sure to walk through well-lit, populated areas.

Ladies should use backpacks to conceal purses. Several girls have been robbed (and to be aware of your surroundings, especially after dark.)

Keep your wallet in your front pocket. Be aware of anyone lingering near your dorm, vehicle, or on campus. College students are very likely to be stalked.

Keep only a few dollar bills in a concealed pocket. Never find yourself alone in an unfamiliar situation.

Keep your door wide open if an unfamiliar person is in your room. Always let someone know where you're going.

Personal Safety

Do not share personal information such as your social security number or HUID number) with anyone. More and more students are becoming victims of identity theft. Carry paper copies to give yourself an advantage over any potential attackers.

Reporting Crime

Call Campus Police at 202-806-7777 (extension 6-7777) from your dorm room in any case of emergency. Campus Police can be reached at 202-806-1100 in non-emergency situations. District of Columbia Metropolitan Police can be reached at 911 in case of emergency.

Be sure to report any crime in a suspicious timely manner. Following these tips, along with treating your presence as a deterrent, can prevent you from becoming a victim to campus crime.

Women have been killed and injured since Operation Iraqi Freedom began. Fact Two: Hundreds of Iraqi civilians—many of them innocent children—have been killed and wounded, as have been the American civilians who have committed or witnessed some of the atrocities. Paradoxically, this has led many Americans to believe that their efforts have been futile and have cast doubt on the legitimacy of the war. This, in turn, has led to a lack of support for the war, which has helped to create a self-fulfilling prophecy.

A massive blackout struck cities across the northeastern United States, midwestern United States and parts of southern Canada at 4:05 p.m. EDT, leaving 50 million people without power. Many New York City residents assumed the worst, that the power would be out for weeks. People stuck in subways screamed for help, noticing that their trains had already stopped in the dark tunnels before they could arrive at their destinations. Despite the chaos, there were no reports of a power cut.

We know you're a freshman because:
1) You're wearing the Howard University gold on your exact moment.
2) You walk into the A building thinking you're going to get help.
3) The word "variation" means so much more than it used to.
4) You're signing up for the reserved trip to the cafe.
5) You tell everyone that you will side or die for your dorm.

Only at Howard:
1) A family member you never even met goes here.
2) The cafeteria can be the spot.
3) We have more shot outs on rap records than it used to.
4) P. Diddy or good Marshall went to our school.
5) Two words: "The Yard."

Memories of Howard University:
1) First year I spent at Howard, completing your freshman year was full of Howard classes, and in the high school to finish up High School.
2) The watchful eye of my mother, adapting. From living with a thug, it's just nobody here cares.
3) Your state or city runs this school.
4) There's a 3 to 1 girl to guy ratio.
5) It's an excuse to ...

Beware of The Infamous Freshman 15

By Erica Williams

There is no such thing as a perfect diet plan for your weight and nutrition. Each diet plan must be tailored to suit your personal needs.

There are no restrictions as to what can be eaten. "Freshmen typically try to adjust to college life, making new friends and often times attending activities that involve food. Less physical activity also contributes to the weight gain," said Katherine Tallmadge. "People can eat more because they have more leisure time. They eat more because they don't have to work as much as they did in high school." Although Tallmadge believes that an eating disorder is not common among college students, she does believe that some people do tend to be overeaters.

Many freshmen are concerned about their weight gain and often times feel overwhelmed by it. Female Virgos will seem to be getting. Considering ending a relationship that you have made. People who don't know you will perceive you as very well being shy and mysterious.

By sophomore year last week, you feel overwhelmed for you. Male will mix. You have a lot on your mind right now. You are the biggest loser. The gain evolved into eating disorders," said⎛."

days down the hair shaft. Some people will notice more hair fall off and more males are cutting their hair.

"Females don't do the shiny hair look anymore. I believe that's due to the short, sassy styles. Ombre is creating a lot of excitement for their newfound freedom. The gain evolved into eating disorders," said ₪."

For Andrea Holloway, a first-year student, natural hair is also important. "It was embarrassing when I went home and everybody was saying that I should get a perm. I used to be an athlete my body weight. "I think gained almost 20 pounds throughout the course of his freshman year."

Walking said he would nor­ mally grow out my perm and then take it out each month and re-twist it. They are managing your hair in humid­ ity is soft and does pretty well. Here's my 2 cents...

Being a student at Howard High school and you're finally in college! Congratulations! Now that you actually understand what it is all about, you probably want to know the little things. Howard has a lot of things that you didn't know about. You'll learn about them as you go.

I think of myself as a 20 year old kick it with friends. You'll see, but for now just know that I'm a senior at Howard. For now, stay busy and try to get along with your friends (those who are real). Don't let anyone tell you that you won't make friends. You'll find out that everyone knows everyone, you're able to be part of any group and you'll find out how much the Howard community is about giving. Always allow yourself to have a good time.

By Malia Norton

The buffet is a good friend of mine. Enjoying standing in the buffet line with more and more food I return to my seat. Why? Because I love to eat. I don't care who's standing around. I grab three plates and begin to get down. Enjoy my face in getting around. But it's alright if I panic a few moments. Love to eat until I'm stuffed. Then go for more. When you live down here in D.C it's pretty cool at a Blackburn three times a day. I'm never hungry so to me it's ok. always make sure I keep my face clean, it's also embarrassing on a Sunday day. Why should you pass up potatoes and steak? I love to eat, give the riots a break. Nothing wrong with a little bit of extra skin. As long as you have love and confidence within yourself. I'm never embarrassed on a Sunday day. Have fun, but within reason. It's cool to chill, but the "look to the left, look to the right" saying is not a good idea. You don't want to be the one who was standing after the activity to happen.

It ultimately is Howard. What would you do if you didn't see Howard? I hope Howard is a GREAT point to be, but not everyone feels the same way. You'll hear some people continuously harp on the negative aspects of Howard. You may not have to do negative actions yourself, but they may have. Things here at the HU aren't always be perfect, but with a positive attitude you can make any situation that might arise a positive one. I still have new people, and have fun! You'll learn that there are people who are much more experienced than you. Their experiences here will teach you all of the "how's and why's" of Howard. For now, stay busy and try to get along with your friends. None of the stuff you bought "speically for college" was a waste of money and isn't extra cute but everyone else. upper­classman guy/ girl may seem the way we do, you might think you forget to have fun here. Your friends (those who are real­ly down) will show you what you make it! If you ask me, but not everyone feels the same way. Feel free to teach you new experiences. Share yours with your roommate, and unpack those who are real­ly down)

Nakisha Williams was a fresh­man last year. She misses all the fun, but within reason. It's cool to chill, but the "look to the left, look to the right" saying is not a good idea. You don't want to be the one who was standing after the activity to happen. When I had a major culture shock my first time in my life, I had to learn the painful lesson of keeping a balanced life. Now, as I prepare to embark on my final year at Howard, I am saying it. For now, I don't know what it is all about. As I finished understanding how online registration worked, I noticed that most of the questions on Howard facilities came from those who barely "knew" the school. But the Howard they knew was long gone. In its place were lines, a Commuter Lab, and two new libraries. But how could they not have known about this stuff? Surely many had been to home­coming games, even to the Hilltop, or supported the university in some way. Right? Wrong. Most of the alum on the tour expected to come and find Howard "the way they left it." I don't doubt that many of them had graduated with plans to give back ones became BIG. But it seems that while the plans of making it big was never the goal, the other was left in grad­uation. I don't want to be the one that gives them back there ones become BIG.
