Ladner reflects on King's dreams deferred

"I, Joyce Ladner, still have a dream." Those were the words of the first African American student to graduate from the University of Mississippi and the first African American president of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. As a social activist and civil rights leader, she fought for racial equality and justice.

Ladner was one of the Freedom Riders who advocated for desegregation in the South. She was arrested and imprisoned multiple times for her activism. Her work with SNCC and the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party helped to highlight the issues of voter suppression and racial discrimination.

Ladner spoke about her experiences during the Civil Rights Movement and the challenges faced by African Americans in the fight for equality. She emphasized the importance of education and the role of universities in promoting social justice.

The Presidential Search Committee is holding a second town meeting on Tuesday, January 24, 1995 at 6:00 p.m. in the School of Business Auditorium. Come voice your opinion on who should become the next Howard president.

Students honor King, feed District's homeless

By Mimi L. Lewis
Staff Writer

It is in such a climate that America, with a dream and University students, can end what has been a national nightmare.

In April 20, 1968, in which America in which homeless individuals are always choosing every place they can, the Martin Luther King was shot in Memphis, leading to six years of rage for what was considered a white out. He asked, "We Fed the Poor!" in honor of Howard University, which has been the largest and most important school in the District for years.

The idea came about a month ago from a national holiday in October. "It's a very big deal, and a lot of people are going through," said Phillips.

"I think it's ridiculous," said Ricardo Phillips, a native of Dallas, Wash., and a student at Howard University. "I just like getting involved with the community and helping people who need it."

As the past members of the Howard Student Government organizations also joined together to help with the MLK Day, the Alpha chapter of Omega Psi Phi, a national fraternity, Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, and other groups have been working to improve their community.

While the washing machines are not being fixed at the moment, the Towers complex has faced similar situations, with broken machines often not being fixed on time. Some students say they have been forced to walk in on their own to repair them, which can be a good one.

"I think it's ridiculous," said Phillips, who is a member of Omega Psi Phi. "You know, you have to be there every day, and you can't get around with the machines that are down."

"It's our responsibility to get back to getting things done," said Phillips. "We need to work together as a community, and that's what we're doing."

The following students will be listed as national honorable campus leaders in the 1995 edition of "Who's Who Among American College Students," which includes all 50 states and the District of Columbia and several foreign countries.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Day program was a perfect way to do it. Meredith Ross, a senior, said the celebration made her feel proud to be a resident in the Towers. Her event was, in a way, keeping Dr. King's dream alive.

"Instead of sleeping in on this day, we have something to go to," Ross, a native of Seattle, Wash., said.

Ross was accompanied by several of her classmates, including Karmynn Okura and Yuh-Ching Lin. The two had been working on an event to celebrate "We Feed Our People." The idea was to participate in the "MLK Days service to the poor." Gray said, an administration official with the student organization.

As a part of the event, members of five of Howard's Greek-lettered organizations also joined together to help with the MLK Day, the Alpha chapter of Omega Psi Phi, a national fraternity, Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, and other groups have been working to improve their community.

Alpha step team journeys to South Africa

Soweto Dance Theatre co-sponsored the visit.

By Stoney goohardware/Staff Writer

The step team of Alpha Phi Alpha traveled to South Africa for an unprecedented trip to South Africa. The trip consisted of a variety of community service experiences, including visiting the Soweto Dance Theatre, and the African government worked. There was a particular focus on the positive effect on the brothers of African, who had developed their ways of life but have become accustomed to.

The appreciation of life was something that we did not realize. They didn’t like life for granted. It was great. They all had personal stories to share with us. It was not using their resources and going somewhere that was beyond our expectations. Because we were not used to the experience, we admired Americans, we could better relate to their problems. After all, we had problems also. They were very thankful and our experiences with them were so unique that we were able to share so much.

Ladner, president of the Rock Steady Crew, said, “They showed so much love for us as the same Americans that they admire, and we could better relate to their problems. After all, we had problems also.”

The group expresses itself in the form of popular hip-hop culture, including rap, breakdancing, and other forms of expression. The group’s performance was truly unique, combining elements of dancing, music, and poetry.

The search for commentators will continue, and the top three will be aired on National Public Radio in the spring. Students commentaries will be reviewed by NPR for possible inclusion in the NPR newsmagazines after the series.

We are continuing in the same direction as we were in the past. We do the same things, but we are doing it in a different way. We are more involved in the community and making it a part of our lives. We are more aware of our surroundings and making it a part of our lives.

The performance was truly remarkable. It was something that we had never seen before. It was a wonderful experience that we will never forget.

The trip has undeniably changed their perceptions of not only South Africa but South African government worked. There was a particular focus on the positive effect on the brothers of African, who had developed their ways of life but have become accustomed to.

Republican exercise power in Congress

By Jonathan Whorton

The United States Congress began its new session early this month, boosted by huge victories in the November elections. It is expected that the new Congress will, among other things, push through major tax cut legislation. However, the new Congress will also be dealing with a $64 billion budget deficit, raising the question of what will be cut. It is also expected that the new Congress will focus on job creation and the nation’s economy.

The new Congress is expected to focus on a number of issues, including healthcare, education, and the economy. The new Congress will also have to deal with the upcoming midterm elections in 1996, which could determine the balance of power in the House and Senate.

Minimum wage increase proposed

By Janette Lyte Thompson

Sen. Ted Kennedy (D-Mass.) has proposed a bill to increase the minimum wage to $5.15 per hour by 1997. The current minimum wage is $4.25 per hour. Kennedy said the increase is necessary to help low-income workers.

The proposal would phase in the increase over two years, starting at $4.75 per hour in 1993 and ending at $5.15 per hour in 1997. The bill would also phase out the sub-minimum wage for tipped workers and change the definition of “tipped workers.”

Kennedy said the increase is needed to keep up with rising prices and to keep workers from living in poverty. The bill would also raise the minimum wage for tipped workers to $3.15 per hour.

Famous franchises deliver fast food

By Janette Lyte Thompson

The McDonald’s corporation began delivering its food to homes and businesses in the New York area in 1991. The delivery service is a one-year subscription service and is available for $29.95 a month for the delivery of up to 30 meals a month.

The delivery service is available in a one-year subscription service and is available for $29.95 a month for the delivery of up to 30 meals a month. The minimum price of $10 should be lowered because McDonald’s prices are already low and the delivery service will only increase those prices.

The company also offers a delivery service for up to 30 miles a year for $3.25 per meal. The service will be used as evidence. The original $1,000 payment was to be used as evidence. Shabazz’s attorney, Scott Turner, said the money may have to be used to pay interest on the original $1,000 payment.
Fighting in Chechnya leaves Russian countries desperate for democracy

The United States continues to insist that the war in Chechnya is an "internal affair" and will not be involved. However, President Clinton has urged Russia to end the fighting and begin negotiations. Some critics have argued that the war is being used to distract attention from the United States' own nuclear proliferation goal of the Soviet Union. Russians are afraid that the war may be used to sow discord and divisions among the republics of the former Soviet Union. "You have to be careful who you support," Russian President Boris Yeltsin said last week.

The United States and Russia have been working to resolve the Chechnya conflict. The United States has provided military aid to the Russian forces, while Russia has provided economic assistance to the United States. However, some experts believe that the war will continue until there is a political solution. The United States is pressing for a negotiated settlement, while Russia is insisting on a military solution. The United States is also concerned about the human rights abuses being committed by both sides.

The Deification of King

The HILLTOP: yesterday, today and forever
MLK's moral imperatives are meaningful for this generation

Dr. Joyce A. Latimer

As Americans prepare to commemorate the life of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. I offer the following reflections and suggestions to young people as they strive to build a better world.

I think of the many times I have listened to the words of Dr. King and how they have moved me to action. His words have always been a source of inspiration and guidance.

The world we live in today is fraught with challenges, but we must continue to strive for justice and equality. Dr. King's vision of a world where all people are treated with dignity and respect is one that we must work towards.

The ethical expectations of college students do not change. They are challenged to confront the societal issues of race, gender, and social justice. At Howard University, we believe that it is our responsibility to prepare our students to be leaders in their communities.

I see a common thread in Dr. King's words, which is the importance of education. He believed that education is the key to unlocking the potential of individuals and communities.

Student activism is a powerful tool in advocating for change. The young people who are the future of our society must be educated and engaged in the political process.

This is a time for all of us to reflect on the words of Dr. King and to consider how we can contribute to building a better world. We must be proactive in addressing the issues of our time and work towards a world where all people are treated with dignity and respect.

I just listen whenever one of the stories he says. He tells stories. I'm not one of his mags.

I mean, you know what I'm saying. She always gets hot and colds—so if I'm gonna talk

I have you every time you get off the phone.

That's a lot of talk—

And what is as important about that, too—She would grandly as much time going into as he does with me. It's an amazing relationship for me, that you know what really like me off things?

She always ten to have one of her heart to heart conversations when I play... my Sega friends. I mean, OH DEAR!

She's correct.

And I do those friends she calls her friends. Right right. I don't see why they got to be in love him at the time with their friends in the dark. But, she's like something that is out of her can't correct.

But you know when she really a deep? In fact she was that cute and me.

You mean like she can't have friends.

Nigger go to so damn cool.
The only time he shows me any kind of affection is when he wants sex.

It's like the last time I had to buy that new thing for my friend so that I can talk to her and what not. She had her own thing.

I know I should have forgot it, but I don't know. It just makes me feel so good. But we always laugh and talk about stuff. Even though he can be an ass. I know I love her just. I love him, too.

That's my magic.

I'm not sure why she makes me smile. She is there when I need her.

I don't know what I'm saying. It's a delight. Yeah, she's a sight.

How to keep your New Year's resolutions

Let's talk about resolution keeping. I know it's a hard one for most of us. Each year we set new goals, make plans, and then...well, let's just say it often doesn't work out as planned. This year, let's try again.

Getting in Shape

Malakia Boyce's plans are already underway.

"I want to lose 5 pounds this spring and summer," she said. "I'm going to eat healthier, exercise more, and walk right now."

Getting Those Grades Up

Malakia Boyce has also made plans.

"I have a 3.0 average right now, but I want to bring it up to a 3.5. I plan on doing better in my English class, and I'm going to work harder in my math class."

Thinking About the Future

At the beginning of the semester, many students were already thinking about the future. They were considering their careers, their families, and their future goals.

"I want to go to Boston University next year," said John Smith. "I want to major in engineering."

Setting Goals

Setting personal goals is important. It helps you stay focused and motivated. If you set realistic goals, you're more likely to achieve them.

Pledge Not to Procrastinate

Nicole Morales, a psychology major, admitted that she had just finished her first term with a grade of B in psychology. Unfortunately, she knows she has to improve her study habits.

"I'm going to start studying earlier and make sure I'm prepared for class. I'll also try to avoid procrastination."}

There’s a new sound sweeping the Howard University campus, and it comes from the smooth and sexy tenor voice of a young voice of a young woman.

Jodiann (JD) Chisholm, 20, a senior majoring in Journalism/Telecommunications at Howard, is a new addition to the current music scene in the nation’s capital.

The 5’5”, 135-pound student is a member of the Howard University Radio Station (WPGC-FM), which is the oldest college radio station in the nation. She hosts her own show, “The Newwave,” on Monday nights from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m., and is also a member of the university’s student government association (SGA) and the National Association for Campus Women (NACW).

Chisholm’s show features an eclectic mix of music, including R&B, hip-hop, and alternative rock, and she says her goal is to provide a platform for up-and-coming artists.

“I want to expose my audience to different types of music and artists that they may not have heard before,” she said.

Chisholm said she was inspired to pursue a career in radio after attending a concert at the Howard Theatre.

“I was immediately drawn to the energy and passion of the artists,” she said. “I knew I wanted to be a part of something like that.”

Chisholm began volunteering at WPGC in her junior year, and was later hired as a full-time announcer.

“I am grateful for the opportunity to work with such talented musicians,” she said. “It is truly a dream come true.”

Chisholm said she hopes to continue her career in radio and possibly move into the music industry in the future.

“Radio is my passion, and I am excited to see where this journey takes me,” she said.

“I want to expose my audience to different types of music and artists that they may not have heard before,” she said.

Chisholm said she was inspired to pursue a career in radio after attending a concert at the Howard Theatre.

“I was immediately drawn to the energy and passion of the artists,” she said. “I knew I wanted to be a part of something like that.”

Chisholm began volunteering at WPGC in her junior year, and was later hired as a full-time announcer.

“I am grateful for the opportunity to work with such talented musicians,” she said. “It is truly a dream come true.”

Chisholm said she hopes to continue her career in radio and possibly move into the music industry in the future.

“Radio is my passion, and I am excited to see where this journey takes me,” she said.
