Students Prepare to Protest Dorm Searches

By Ruth L. Tisdale

Howard University said. "These searches might have inconvenienced me, but the safety and security of all of our students is our priority.

"Many students agree with the premise of the Resident Advisor's role. They should be able to search rooms if the need becomes necessary, but the procedure that the Resident Advisor should follow needs to be standardized.

"When someone came into my room at 2 a.m., they did not just knock on the door. They asked me if I was a resident or not, as if they didn't already know who I was. was a resident?" Gibbs said that the people who conducted the search should have been more professional when they conducted the dorm searches.

"In the specific case of Meridian (Hill Hall), there were three people who were found during the dorm inspections," Gibbs said. "These searches might have inconvenienced me, but the safety and security of all of our students is our priority." Gibbs said that he made sure that resident officials were very professional when they conducted the dorm searches.

The time at which most of the searches took place was another concern of students.

"They (Resident officials) came at 4 a.m. to search my room," senior political science major Mercedes White said. "I was awakened by people banging on the wall, and then more people began to enter the fields."

The community-based Dental Education Program will be implemented in the next few years. In the interim, the curriculum will be altered in order to have graduates who are more culturally competent and can communicate better with the populace in the neighborhoods they are serving.

This program will help students get more experience on more advanced cases," Claude Small, a first-year dental student said.

This effect has been made possible by a grant of $1.5 million by the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and its Based Dental Education. See DENTAL page A10

Grad Trustee Ready to Begin School Year

By Danielle Surgoins

"With goals that include improving the graduate and professional programs, establishing more joint degrees, and bridging the gap between the board of trustees and the students, Grads Trustee Charles Coleman is prepared to begin the new school year. Coleman said that he hopes that his new initiatives will help put the graduate and professional schools on the same level as the rest of the university. "As Graduates Trustee, I have been asked to take on a leadership role in the development of educational initiatives which will foster the continued development and improvement of our graduate and professional schools, so that we are on par with the growth rate of the university as a whole and maintain our position as the leader of higher-education in black America," Coleman said. "I am excited to work with both the board and the students to enhance the prestige of our graduate and professional programs and aid us in becoming competitive as possible."

"I believe that it's necessary to conduct searches for the security of our students, but last night seemed excessive; I don't think anyone with any sense in this school would be out just looking and searching."

Student parents and expecting parents have joined forces to form the Parent-Student Support Group to help the transition into parenthood become a less difficult process. The Parent-Student Support Group was formed in 1999 and was officially chartered in the spring semester of 2003.

The group was formed as a support system for students who are parents in college. The Parent-Student Support Group creates a sense of belonging because everyone, no matter what their background may be, shares a common bond, Moore said. "Our parents have many friends that also have children that are in college. Howard University students are known for being social, yet some students are single parents who are not like the average student. "I wouldn't let a club take away from my grades; it just forced me to be able to fully commit. I would quit before that happened," Holmes said. "I would quit before that happened," Holmes said. "If you organize, everything goes hand-in-hand with organization and time management. If you organize everything will work out and you will be a well-rounded individual," said Public Directions Director of the College of Arts and Sciences Student Council, Tavonkeya Word said.

US Plans to Stop Suspect WMD Vessels

The United States plans to suspend all visas for countries whose citizens are suspected of carrying weapons of mass destruction. The plan, which was announced in August, is designed to stop the flow of technicians to land and inspect cargo ships from the US, citing the need to prevent the proliferation of dangerous technologies. The US government argues that it could disrupt the work of weapons inspectors and undermine international efforts to disarm weapons of mass destruction.

Chemical Disarmament

Saric, also known as GA, is a deadly human-made nerve agent that turns its victims into a cloud of gas, making them disoriented and unable to move. Saric is being developed for use in chemical weapons, despite claims by some that it is a less deadly alternative to other chemical weapons.

Vouchers Debate Leaves Blacks Exploited

The voucher debate, which is being waged in many states, is particularly hard on African Americans, who are being pimped by private schools in many states. The voucher programs are seen as a way to privatize education and reduce costs, but they are often used to maintain segregation and exploit minority students.

The Midwest Independent School System, which was established to promote educational reform, has faced criticism for its methods of teaching. Some critics argue that the system is too rigid and does not allow enough flexibility for teachers to adapt to the needs of their students. Others argue that it is too lenient and does not provide enough structure.

Fixing the Power Problem

In the wake of the power outages that occurred last summer, officials are working to improve the way that electricity is distributed across the country. They are looking at ways to increase the capacity of the grid and to reduce the risk of blackouts.

Depo-Provera is 99.7% effective.

Not only is it 99.7% effective, but you need just 1 shot every 11 to 13 weeks to protect you from pregnancy. So, unlike the Pill, Depo-Provera is not your every day birth control.

Depo-Provera does not protect you from HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

You shouldn’t use Depo-Provera if you could be pregnant or if you have had any unexplained periods. You should not use it if you have a history of breast cancer, blood clots, stroke, or liver disease. When using Depo-Provera, there may be a loss of some of the bone mineral stored in your bones. This could increase your risk of developing bone fractures. Some women using Depo-Provera have side effects. The most common are irregular periods or spotting. Many women stop having periods altogether after a few months. You may gain weight when using Depo-Provera. About two thirds of the women in clinical trials reported a weight gain of about 5 lb during the first year of use.

Talk to your health care provider to see if prescription Depo-Provera is right for you.

Birth control you think about just 4 times a year.

Women Reluctant to Enter High Stress Jobs

By Chisachi Uyo

 Contributing Writer

 In an average week, Dawn Esty spends 29 hours in the office, the majority of which is spentolv2ing problems and research. At the end of a long day, she's ready to go. However, she's found that it's not a matter of being in her office, but rather the environment that she finds herself in that makes her work so difficult.

 "It's not a place where I feel comfortable," Esty said. "I'm constantly thinking about what I need to do next."

 Esty is one of many women who are hesitant to enter the workforce due to the high stress levels associated with it. However, there are ways to mitigate this stress and make the workplace more welcoming for women.

 "I think that a lot of the stress in the workplace comes from the expectation that women need to be perfect," Esty said. "They need to do everything right and not make any mistakes."

 To address this issue, some companies are implementing policies that allow for flexible working hours and remote work. These policies can help reduce the stress that women feel when they're expected to be perfect all the time.

Mass Room Inspections Create Student Unrest

Howard from A1

Paying the top 30 universities in the country classified as National Universities (having at least 500,000 square feet of library space) by U.S. News & World Report, the University of San Francisco, Temple University, Boston University, University of Southern California, University of Illinois at Chicago, and University of Southern California, were among the top three universities under tie for top 10.

According to Pryor, Howard's rise in rankings can be attributed to factors such as "strengthened efforts to recruiting and graduating outstanding students, resources, increasing faculty, significantly improving student-faculty ratios, and matriculating an academically talented student body." In addition to being titled one of America's best colleges, Hunter also ranked 10th of 50 as the "Best Value" among other things, the report said. Howard was placed 13rd position (Highly Commended) in the fourth tier.

This is not the first time Howard University has been recognized by the U.S. News and World Report. The latest ranking shows that Howard still made gains to be named one of the top 75 national universities.

Sounds of Dirty Country...

Music to Trap You

By Shara D. Taylor

Grade: A

Characterized by chart-climbing bangers, hip-hop production, and a mixture of acoustics, "Dirty South hip-hoppers currently enjoy the spotlight of the entire hip-hop community," says rapper T.L. Z. "The release is to solidify their place in hip-hop history along with their southern predecessors."

"Throughout Trap Muzik," T.L. Z. elaborates and tribulations of his life through his unique version of southern funk, taking listeners on a journey through reality. T.L. Z. "hopes to change the side of society that has been plagued with drugs and other social ills for so long."

"The album's lead single, a "24's" blazing airwaves, is the "Yah Intro," sung by T.L. Z. In the song, T.L. Z. "Let's Get Away" encourages the next generation to be patient with him despite any of his past indiscretions."

"On the跟他 track, T.L. Z. 'Can't Say I Was Bad,'" T.L. Z. "When the track was played in the streets, the audience was on their feet. "Made in the Shade," T.L. Z. "The song is a tribute to the sound and style that has been the blueprint for the months to come."

"Overall, T.L. Z.'s "Trap Muzik" will last a lifetime."

All Her Son Could Do

By Jozen Cummings
Life and Style Editor

I never met my biological father, until I came to Howard three years ago. Now, as I adjust to my final year of college, I have also had to adjust to caring for a father who never cared for his own son. Within the last month, I've had to call an ambulance after he suffered a heart attack, make visits to the hospital to give him everything from candy bars to money, and care for him as he should have cared for me.

At first, I was bitter about all of this because before this past August I saw no attempt on his part to help me or make me feel as though I mattered. Nevertheless, I decided to step myself up to the plate and be a better son than he was a father. When I stuck to this attitude, my anger fell to the wayside.

That was until last week when I received a call from my sister telling me our mother was in the hospital. She had suffered a kidney infection and would be there for a couple of days. Two minutes later my father called asking me when I was going to see him again, and I became sickened at the sound of his voice.

Here I was, 3,000 miles away from the one woman who has done everything for me, and I couldn't get over there to help her. I didn't have the money to fly back to California, and I wasn't able to reach her as soon as I heard the news. All the years my mother took care of me when I was sick, and the one time she gets sick on me, I can't be the son I want to be to her.

The way things played out disturbed me. I could be a son to a thoughtless father, but I couldn't be a son to a mother who defined the very title. For the man who never remembered a birthday, I could wheel him around in a wheelchair. For the mother who never forgot a birthday, I couldn't simply be by her bedside or walk her to my car and take her home from the hospital.

Today, my mother's doing much better. She's back at work, grinding it out the way single mothers do. But until today, I couldn't get over this situation I had no control over. I had to find a way.

Bison Football Falls to Texas Southern, 20-27

By Sonya N. McDonald

It’s been said that old habits die hard, and some of them just simply refuse to die, even when a team hasn’t won a season opening game on the road in 15 years. However, the Bison didn’t just make a three-hour plane trip to Houston, Texas just to lose. They learned some valuable lessons that can only help them as they prepare for next week’s home showdown against Hampton University.

"We did a much better job of blocking than we did against Mount Union," coach Mike Pollard said, highlighting one of the many positives Saturday night’s game offered.

The offense didn’t seem that the game would favor the Bison. The Tigers began the season ranked number five in the nation, and Florida A&M later joined the list of the nation’s top 100 offenses, competing against the number one defense in the nation. It was a good game for both teams, with the Bison taking control of the game early in the first quarter alone, the Tigers running for 308 yards, yet growing frustrations at a defense that could only help them as they look to improve at the beginning of the season, at least.

"We thought we could run the football on them; if not for those turnovers we could have controlled the game," Petty said after the game.

When quarterback Gerred Watson was able to force a fumble by a ruthless Tiger defender. In a fit of vexation, Miller threw his only interception,Expertly intercepted by Bison cornerback Maurice Robinson, who ran it ten yards before Tiger defensive back Nathaniel Robin taken full advantage of the turnover with a successful PAT after the game.

"We’ve been working on our defense, and that’s been our problem all season," Petty said after the game.

As the Bison offense began to struggle on both sides of the ball, front four-year run in college football, the Washington Redskins. The former Bison cornerback enthusiastically attended mini-camp for the Redskins that they made a mistake when they cut him.

Make no mistake, Sejour isn’t leaving college early as an underclassman to play in the NFL. He wants the chance to become a professional linebacker or fullback in the NFL back next season.

"If nothing else is evident, it’s clear that Maurice Clarett is good. He is a Turban somebody to shake up the Big Ten. We need more, he could not be selected until the 2005 draft."

The NFL rule does not permit high school seniors to play in the CFL. NFL teams to make an example of the Canadian Football League. It's not allowed to play school for at least three years. For those who haven't been watching the CFL's saga, better known as The Young and The Restless, is stirring up a soap opera with as much drama and intrigue as 14 seasons of Running on the Street. Clarett and the Redskins are the latest to get caught up in the series finale. The Ottawa Sun reported that the former Bison cornerback has no preferences about being a professional linebacker or fullback in the NFL back next season.

Student Athlete Graduation Numbers Up, Higher Than General Students'

By Stacey Gates

Remember when you thought it was safe to assume that most student athletes were dumb jocks? It’s not safe anymore. In fact, it’s downright wrong.

A recent study by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCACC), found that currently, the percentage of American student athletes obtaining degrees (60 percent) is higher than the percentage of the overall student body (55 percent). The rate climbed two percentage points in the last year.

While the climb in numbers is a laudable achievement, an increase in graduation rates for African American males is cause for cheer among administrators and student athletes alike at HBCU’s across the country.

The number of graduating black male athletes has increased from 45 percent to 48 percent in the past year. Overall, the graduation rate for African-Americans is 52 percent, up four percentage points since 2000.

In a recent release, NCACC President Sandy Norrell-Thomas explained, “This is great news, but not unexpected.”

Norrell said the report shows that “student athletes will rise to the occasion and meet the challenges for academic success.”

Based on the six-year graduation period established by the NCAA, 59 percent of black student-athletes were graduates, compared to 62 percent of all HBCU students.

So what is the reason for the discrepancy in the numbers?

Howard's athletic department has instituted special programs to encourage academic success for all student athletes.

“We are offering better advising and a required study hall for all freshman athletes,” Howard Athletic Director Sandra Norrell-Thomas explained. “We've hired an additional academic advisor, we're renovating study hall areas, and furnishing laptops for students to use and check out during overnight trips.”

The Department of Education has been tracking student and student-athlete graduation rates since the 1980s, and reports the number of graduating student athletes is the highest it has been since 1984.

NCACC officials attribute the increase to Proposition 48. The 2002 class is the first class to graduate under the new provisions.

Proposition 48 regulates the NCAA's eligibility requirements for student athletes when they make the transition from high school to college athletics.

In order to be considered for participation in collegiate sports, students must have a minimum of 2.3 GPA in 13-approved core courses with an SAT score of at least 510 in a combination ACT score of 20.

The National Center for Fair and Open Testing reported that prior to the implementation of Proposition 48 in 1995, ten core requirements disqualified African American students at a rate approximately in more than double the rate of white students.

In the past century, NCACC, a fair mix by race of top athletic talent, has been a fertile field for black students who graduate within four years. In a few of the more demanding sports such as football and basketball, students may require five years.

RAPTURE: LEGEND IN THE MAKING

When it comes to the law, there are many different interpretations of what constitutes murder. The controversy thickened when a jury convicted Eunick Tate of first-degree murder. Ellis awakened from his sleep by a noise outside the house, and a moment later, he heard a commotion in the garage. The question of whether or not he should be punished for this is a matter of opinion. We believe, however, that there are other steps that could have called the police.

Our View:
When a jury convicted Eunick Tate of first-degree murder, some people argued that because little Tiffany Eunick was only 12 years old when she died, it was not appropriate for a minor. Tate obviously took the life of someone else.

A Minor Sentenced to Life
Life. The word usually implies a certain amount of freedom to exist in society. Tate nor his actions were considered in society. People harm their relations and then they are convicted of a crime. The crime committed was not considered in society. Tate has broken into the car and it is not considered worth a single dollar. Ellis acted without considering the consequences of his actions - the fatal outcome was not within his control.

Just how young is too young to sentenced a person to life without the possibility of parole? Many people say that because little Tiffany Eunick died, brutally suffering up to 120 injuries, the incident was a one-hundredth of a wave of societal action. People should have received some type of psychological treatment. The crime committed was not considered in society. Tate has broken into the car and it is not considered worth a single dollar. Ellis acted without considering the consequences of his actions - the fatal outcome was not within his control.

Prosecutors argue that because Tate turned down a plea bargain of a law hard sentence he deserves his life sentence.

Our View:
A life sentence in not a punishment for a minor. Tate should have received some type of psychological treatment. The crime committed was not considered in society. Tate has broken into the car and it is not considered worth a single dollar. Ellis acted without considering the consequences of his actions - the fatal outcome was not within his control.

If you have walked around campus in the last few days, you have probably talked about the "dorm raids" that took place in Meridian, the Ballou Annex, and Cooke Hall last week. Most of these raids are left unreported and left unreported by the unreported intention of Residence and Graduate Assistants into their rooms.

While the protests and disorders are getting underway, we believe it is of utmost importance to first be informed of the facts before warranting any actions.

On move-in days, residents did sign a housing agreement that authorized morning dorm inspections. While this policy gives Residence Life the power to inspect rooms for maintenance and security purposes, it is supposed to be done within reason. (Out of respect for us as adults, these inspections should be conducted at a more reasonable hour, say 7 a.m. a minimum of 2 hours before students arrive at dorm dorm inspections (like last week's inspections) should be performed at a decent hour.

Because the "dorm inspections" took place in these different situations, we are led to believe that Residence Life自行了 for something specific. On the contrary, these were standard inspections that could have easily taken place at an earlier time. In the interest of security, our concern is not a priority. A dorm inspection is welcome if authorities have reason to believe that there is a threat to the safety of the residents at that particular time. In this case, we also have the right to know what they are looking for.

When there is no immediate security threat, there is no reasonable reason to intrude upon our privacy, to intrude upon our privacy, to intrude upon our privacy. dorm inspections (like last week's inspections) should be performed at a decent hour.

The only justifiable reason for a dorm inspection would be if there is an urgent need to search the premises for suspicious unauthorized persons or weapons. If there is any suspicion of a security threat, then by all means, inspections should take place, regardless of the hour. However, dorm inspections (like last week's inspections) should be performed at a decent hour.

The dorm inspections that took place last week should have taken place at a more reasonable hour.

Our View:
The dorm inspections that took place last week should have taken place at a more reasonable hour.

Howard's Gestapo Housing Policy
By Akendele "Afrika" Akehjah

Last week on Thursday morning, dormitory room inspections were performed in Meridian Hill, the Annex, and Cooke Hall, at the most distressful and inconvenient hour of 5 a.m. All residents attempting to attain a healthy amount of uninterrupted sleep before early morning classes were rudely awakened. Jarring knocks, loud opening doors, and the unexpected presence of strangers were received with an inadequate form of expression as to why.

I personally hold to the notion that nowhere is there a clear and present danger to the safety of the residents should such an arbitrary use of University power through performance of room inspections during such an ungodly hour be justified.

Most students who experience this behavior hold the same sentiment. Either they were unawares or they were extremely passive in its occurrence, often citing that the housing agreement they signed permits such actions. Tuey either were severely indifferent, or they were extremely fastidious, citing that the housing agreement signed permits such. I don't see how any student could ever be comfortable with a statement of indifference, and pacify himself/herself with the notion that nothing short of a violation of one's personal space, especially as it concerns the territory that was one's own, should even be permitted in the consideration of students' schedules or courtesy to our affairs even in the slightest.

Many argue that since the housing agreement you sign accepts your rights to privacy, or they are extremely arrogant before I have to get up for my 8:10 a.m. class. Upon opened and peered through room, closets and things were not as I had wished them to be. Issed such an arbitrary use of power may be exercised on the wards providing explanation to U Diversity's behalf.

Please.

It's so easy to sneak into dorms around campus if you're on the inside of our doors. But what about the people in all the time. I'm not being judgmental or talking from experience.

Many argue that since the housing agreement you sign accepts your rights to privacy, or they are extremely arrogant. This rally that really needs to be asked is, shouldn't be about dorm sweeps that are pretty unfair, something that one deems unfair

The Greek philosopher Aristotle once said that the first thing one should be clear about is to know exactly what one wants. The student body is too often confused and uncertain of what they are being asked to do. It is for this reason that the student body is confused and uncertain of what they are being asked to do. It is for this reason that the student body is confused and uncertain of what they are being asked to do.
