District makes major cut backs to balance budget

By Reginald Roston

The Howard University Police Department is set to make a major cutback this year in an effort to balance the budget. The move was announced by the school's police chief last week.

"We are facing a budget crisis," said Chief Howard. "We have to make some tough decisions in order to stay afloat." He added that the department has already trimmed its payroll by cutting back on overtime.

A number of services, including the response to the first two scheduled burglaries which typically occur during the day, will be cut back. "We can no longer afford to be the first responders," said Howard.

The department will also be reducing the number of officers on duty. "We are looking at a 20% reduction," said Howard. "This will allow us to allocate more resources to areas where they are needed most." He added that the department will be focusing on solving crimes rather than just responding to them.

"We are committed to providing a safe environment for our students," said Howard. "We will continue to work closely with the administration to ensure that our resources are being used effectively."
Accreditation agency gives Howard thumbs up

Officials take pride in academic reaffirmation; students are relieved

by Sarah Janisch

In spite of the lingering effects of restructuring and financial pressure, Howard University has been reaffirmed by the Middle States Commission on Higher Education.

President John L. Adams, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said in his remarks that the board had undergone a rigorous review of the university's finances. He noted that while the financial difficulties were not unique to Howard, the board had been committed to addressing them.

The reaffirmation comes amid reports of a financial crisis at the university, which has been trying to balance its budget. In recent years, the university has been forced to cut programs and lay off faculty.

According to the Board of Trustees, the university has made significant strides in improving its financial situation. The university has implemented a number of measures to address its financial challenges, including a new budgeting system, cost-cutting initiatives, and increased fundraising efforts.

The reaffirmation is a positive step for the university, which is facing a difficult period. The university has been trying to improve its academic programs and retain its top students.

The university is committed to maintaining its high standards and providing quality education to its students. The reaffirmation is a testament to the university's commitment to excellence.

The university is grateful to the Middle States Commission on Higher Education for its reaffirmation.

About Accreditation

The Middle States Commission on Higher Education is one of the six regional accreditation bodies in the United States. It accredits more than 1,000 institutions of higher education in the Middle States region, which includes Delaware, the District of Columbia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, and Pennsylvania.

The commission is responsible for ensuring that its member institutions meet the standards set by the commission. The commission conducts regular reviews of its member institutions to ensure that they continue to meet the standards.

The Middle States Commission on Higher Education is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education as the regional accreditation agency for its member institutions.

The reaffirmation is a positive step for Howard University. The university is committed to maintaining its high standards and providing quality education to its students. The reaffirmation is a testament to the university's commitment to excellence.
It's BLAKAdemics! Student leaders test knowledge of Black history

What was Harriet Tubman's favorite disguise? None of the students at the historic Howard University campus could have won the University's annual trivia contest if they had not prepared to answer that question. "One of our goals is to know our history," says Julian C. Dixon, a senior political science major and member of Phi Sigmas. Phi Sigmas is one of several Omega Psi Phi chapters on the Howard campus.

Dixon and other members of the chapter, along with members of the Sigma Pi and Phi Sigma Pi fraternities, competed in the quiz. "We had about 30 people who showed up to compete," Dixon says. "We were all excited because we knew we had to prepare thoroughly to win.

The quiz was based on events from Howard University's history, including such topics as the university's founding, its first graduates, and its role in the Civil Rights Movement. "The contest was really fun," says Dixon. "We learned a lot of new things, too.

"Our organization is a national home for Howard students," says Dixon. "It's a place where we can come together and celebrate our history." Dixon adds that the quiz is just one way that the organization encourages students to learn about their history.

"I'm very impressed," Dixon says, "with the enthusiasm and knowledge that these students have."

HUSAs mentoring program gives high school students a look at college life

HUSA CANDIDATES
Edwards, Dunbar campaign for a ‘renaissance’

HUSA candidates say they have real ideas to create real change

By Lisa Prince
HiHi interviewer

Farrell University Student Association candidates Dwain Edwards and Jabari Dunbar, cousin in the leadership of the Student Senate. Edwards plays a major role in their campaign, as he is running for the presidency.

“While we are a group of planned initiatives, our main goal is to maintain and develop what we believe Dunbar candidates. In our experience, some ideas may not be as apparent,” said Dunbar.

“We want to promote Internet, which is a program within the computer system that is available on the Internet.”

Dunbar, the Internet program will allow students to have better connections with the general public. “We also plan to continue a semesterly newsletter to keep students apprised of what’s going on and what they can get involved,” Barney’s running mate, Jamal X. Jones-Dulan, described his slate’s platform as a group of initiatives that will help improve the University’s problems.

“We want to promote Internet, which is a program within the computer system that is available on the Internet.”

Rashid urges students to evaluate all the candidates before making a decision. “We’re not running for stipends, resumes or a resume booster or an ego-trip. Barney’s desire to win is genuine, and not

By Natalie Y Moore
HiHi writer

To Shawn Barney and Kofi Rashid, candidates for the Howard University Student Association, “prosperity” was the first word that came to mind when asked about their goals for the student government.

“Let the Renaissance Begin” is a program within the computer system that is available on the Internet.”

Rashid emphasized that his and Barney’s runnings are a benefit to all students, the decision is yours!!

Undergraduate, graduate student team up for HUSA

Jamal Jones-Dulan, Earamichia Brown say they are ‘united as one’

By Dorse Matheny
HiHi reporter

Although Earamichia Brown did not complete her undergraduate degree study at Howard University and this was her first year as a Howard law student, she said she understood the students’ concerns.

“While we are a group of planned initiatives, our main goal is to maintain and develop what we believe is a program within the computer system that is available on the Internet.”

Earamichia Brown, a Houston Pre-law Society, is the Secretary of the Golden Key. Rashid urges students to evaluate all the candidates before making a decision.

“In the upcoming registration process...”

Barney and Rashid have other plans as well, one of which is a program within the computer system that is available on the Internet.”

Rashid emphasized that his and Barney’s running are a benefit to all students, the decision is yours!!

Experience sets 'Sankofa' candidates apart

Alston and Miller say past lessons will make the difference in election

By Angela E. Lloyd

The distinguishing feature of Howard's Student Government elections is the large number of candidates that run for various offices. Experience sets 'Sankofa' candidates apart.

Alston and Miller say they are interested in Howard University Student Association president Melanie Alston and Miller say they know where they are going, but it's definitely not me.

If the students want a sudden change, they have to step up and make it happen. They must work together to achieve their goals, and they can count on Alston and Miller to make a difference.

Alston and Miller say they are dedicated and experienced, and they have the skills to lead.

In order to achieve their goals, they must first understand the needs of the students. Alston and Miller say they are interested in the opinions of the students and are committed to working towards their goals.

Revival' slate makes bid for HUSA leadership

On March 7, 1995, the revival slate led by James Gregory and Shyra Gregory, made their campaign for the Howard University Student Association presidency.

They ran under the slogan, "Revival," which means "to come back to life." This campaign was aimed at addressing the concerns of the students, particularly those who felt left behind by the previous administration.

The revival slate emphasized the need for change and promised to bring positive changes to Howard University. They were determined to make a difference, and they were confident that they could do so.

Their campaign was successful, and they won the election, becoming the president and vice-president of the Howard University Student Association.
Omar Karim looks to continue ‘Movement’
Incumbent hopes to build on past accomplishments for next year

Karim, who ran for the Undergraduate Trustee position in the fall of 1996, believes that if he wins in the current year’s elections, he will be able to continue his work from last year.

Karim has been the Undergraduate Trustee for the past two years, and he hopes to continue his work in the future. He is running for re-election in the current year’s elections, and he is confident that he will be able to continue his work from last year.

Karim’s campaign focuses on several key issues, including accessibility, student representation, and the importance of student input in decision-making processes. Karim believes that students should have a greater say in the decision-making processes at Howard University, and he is running for re-election in the current year’s elections to continue his work from last year.

Karim’s campaign is about more than just accessibility and student representation, however. He is also running for re-election in the current year’s elections to continue his work from last year.

Take the Challenge.
Whatever they call it, GOP’s ‘Contract’ reflects backlash

A few weeks ago Rep. Charles Rangel of New York rebuked himself and his colleagues in the U.S. House of Representatives who took offense at Rangel’s comparison of the GOP Contract with America to the Nazi party’s 1930s program of social and economic reform. However, Rangel made some very valid and thought­ provoking statements during the back and forth with GOP leaders. In his mind, and ours, the Republican Contract with America to help the poor people will be severely retarded.

As he explained, the GOP Contract with America to help the poor people will be severely retarded, and what they do is preposterous and can only be exaggerated, the thrust of his claims remained the same. Whether they admit it or not, the Republicans are seeking to destroy initiatives, programs and laws that have been largely responsible for increasing the quality of life for Black Americans in the last three decades. Their cutting actions are marked with a sharp contrast and appealing slogan. Nevertheless, their ultimate intention is always the same.

In a cold-blooded move last week, House Republicans presented a bill to slash HUD programs that poor, urban Americans rely on after Rangel’s comparison of the GOP’s Contract with Germany’s heinous program of social and economic reform. After the remarks quickly provoked a sharp reaction from HUD leaders who took offense at Rangel’s comparison of the GOP Contract with Germany’s heinous program of social and economic reform, Rangel was criticized for his comparison of the GOP Contract with Germany’s heinous program of social and economic reform.

However, Rangel made some very valid and thought­ provoking statements during the back and forth with GOP leaders. In his mind, and ours, the Republican Contract with America to help the poor people will be severely retarded.

The decision to install Evers-Williams is one that will not be ideologically riddling our campus of criminal elements. It is important to realize safety is a concern of all of ours, and in such, we should all be actively involved in preserving it. The Hilltop has undoubtedly expressed our ultimate responsibility of campus safety to our students. We must work with our campus security force and assist their efforts by notifying them of witnessed illegal activity. No one should be concerned of the dangers we have as students, our personal safety and that of our belongings should not be concerns. Our security force and protective measures far outweigh any worries we have as students.

Security officers, visitors, and campus police have a responsibility to maintain safety and security on campus. They do not receive rental assistance this year, but 14,000 other families will.

Make no mistake, security officers, visitors, and campus police have a responsibility to maintain safety and security on campus. If the signs warn residents in university Housing that they are not respected, are they not respected, are they not respected.

Cooperate with and support crackdown on campus crime

It is probable that at no time in its 86-year history has the NAACP come under such scrutiny from its opponents. It is the time of a tide of the NAACP’s greatest successes. The organization’s success was swept into office on a tide of frustration and now must face the realization that its policies are not being respected.

Class of 1995: Now is the time to get serious

Rep. William Clay

The United States of America has the best system of higher education in the world. The quirk is, though, that the students who are best prepared and the system that has evolved around it are those that can afford it. A significant percentage of students who have the ability to succeed have been left behind, either because of their inability to finance their education or because they do not have the opportunity to succeed. Only recently have higher education institutions been forced to address the issue of access and financial aid for those students who are unable to pay.

The primary mechanism for ensuring access has been through federal financial aid. By providing grants, loans, and work-study programs, this system has been proven to be effective in providing access to all students who are able to meet the requirements.

We all want to remember our senior year in college. Anniversaries of that time, both good and bad, bring back memories of a different time when life was easier. While we're talking about looking back, one cannot help but mention that the political climate in America since the 1980s has been quite different. While we often refer to that period as a time of conservatism, the 1980s were also marked by a growing divide between rural and urban America. The political climate in America since the 1980s has been quite different.

Go-Go is about a lot more than pots and pans, its about heritage

Jatika White

After a recent story in The Hilltop about D.C.'s go-go craze, there has been a surge of interest in this unique music genre. Many people have come to appreciate the energy and diversity of the go-go music scene.

Top-notch vocalists include Santita Jackson, who has been going to the go-go since she was 17, and Marci all, who started out getting out of the house and going to clubs as a way of life. African music is a large part of the musical tapestry that makes up the go-go scene, and its influence is evident in the way that people go-go with whatever subject they use their intelligence to keep going and to make their life.

There's absolutely nothing that could demand our rights to the future, the large set of rollertoms, and then added a little bit of jazz to it. This is my go-go, and I'm proud to stand behind it.

Michelle Jones

Three weeks ago, I submitted a perspective piece to The Hilltop's editorial pages. In my article, I related a story of a concerned mother who was not satisfied with her child's progress in school. The response was overwhelming. Upon republic presentation, I was asked to respond to the comments and suggestions of the Hilltop's staff. I attempted to be as direct and honest as possible in my response. The feedback was positive and encouraged me to continue writing.

Later on that night, I went to The Hilltop in the city of Washington to pick up my articles that were very angry and gone. I am here at this moment, I can't believe it. I pulled into my car and that's where I stopped. I collapsed.

I saw Arnold on several occasions afterward and he seemed to have made a commitment to continue the work that he had started. His articles were always on point and seemed to have a purpose.

The writer is a junior majoring in Communications, not in journalism as Arnold did tell me that he would edit the work of his students and then submit it for publication. Hilltop editorial editor lacks sensitivity and professionalism

Derrick M. Dennis

The Hilltop came to a crossroad in the Spring of this year. The selection of our new Editor-in-Chief is a turning point in the history of this publication. It was not an easy decision for the Hilltop Board and its members to make, but it was necessary for the future of the paper.

I am very aware of the fact that the Hilltop has been a source of inspiration for many students and has helped to raise the level of discourse in our community. However, establishing a meaningful dialogue with the Hilltop Board and its members has been a difficult task, and I have often felt that the Hilltop Board and its members have been more concerned with their own interests than with the needs of the students.

But instead of seeking to improve the situation, I chose to write this article. I wanted to be a part of the discussion, and to share my perspectives with the Hilltop Board and its members.

The writer is a junior majoring in Communications, not in journalism as Arnold did tell me that he would edit the work of his students and then submit it for publication. Kenyan educational system suffers from financial hardships

By Patricia Harding

The Kenya National Examinations Council is set to make the grade in terms of administrative efficiency, but the financial situation remains precarious.

The council, which is responsible for awarding examinations at the secondary and university levels, has faced financial difficulties in recent years. However, the situation has improved significantly in recent months, with the council being able to pay salaries on time and complete examinations on schedule.

The council has been able to secure funding from various sources, including the government and international donors. This has enabled the council to meet its obligations and provide quality services to students.

Despite the improvements, the council still faces challenges in areas such as infrastructure and technology. However, the council is committed to addressing these issues and ensuring that all students have access to the same opportunities.

The council is also working to improve the quality of its services by strengthening its internal processes and procedures. This includes improving its examination administration and ensuring that results are accurate and reliable.

In conclusion, the Kenya National Examinations Council has made significant progress in recent years. However, there is still much work to be done to ensure that all students have access to quality education.

Canadian province plans successor, separatists seek soul Quebec nation

By Marie-Andrée Lante

The federal government has approved a bill to create a new province in Quebec, known as the Quebec nation. The province is expected to be formed within the next few years, and will have its own government and parliament.

The Quebec nation will be governed by a devolved government, which will have the authority to make decisions on matters such as education, health, and the economy. The province will also have its own parliament, which will be elected by the people of Quebec.

The federal government has been strongly opposed to the creation of a new province in Quebec, and has taken legal action to block the proposal. However, the Quebec nation has been able to secure support from a majority of the province's residents, and has been able to secure funding from international donors.

In conclusion, the Quebec nation is set to become a new province in Canada, with its own government and parliament. The province will be governed by a devolved government, and will have its own parliament, which will be elected by the people of Quebec.

International Hitchhiker's Guide

London, England

Two tourists, fresh from a long journey, arrived in London and decided to take a tour of the city. They were looking for a way to get around and see as many sights as possible.

They walked into a small shop and asked the owner for directions. The owner, a friendly man, gave them a map and pointed to several of the major landmarks.

The tourists thanked him and set off on their adventure. They visited the Tower of London, Buckingham Palace, and even took a ride on the London Eye.

In conclusion, the two tourists were able to see many of London's most famous landmarks. They enjoyed their time in the city and were happy to have taken the time to explore.
The Sounds of Souls Crying

Sometimes when I listen, I hear the sounds of souls crying somewhere a hungry child savors the taste of vomit churning in his throat—all the time the sanctity of a woman’s temple is bloodied with aggression, the innocent dreams of today become the molested nightmares of tomorrow.
the love of a couple rots into disdain and spite, the tormented wails of an innocent man go unheard. One man soiled heart becomes the cuisine of another, old men continue to send young men off to die.

Sometimes when I listen, I hear the sounds of souls crying
And it sounds like angels drowning in a lake of aborted baby tears

I think they should be hard working, consistent and willing to follow through on their campaign promises.

Nicole Williams
Sophomore Insurance
Plainfield, NJ

They should be thorough and trustworthy. I just want them to bring about a change, because students are losing school spirit.

KI Jones
Junior Accounting
San Diego, CA

They need to be honest and not set expectations that they can't fulfill. They need to be straight up with us.

Marion Wright
Freshman Finance
Philadelphia, PA

They should be dedicated to and persistent about getting the job done.

Fatima Blake
Sophomore Marketing
Jersey City, NJ

They should be dependable, first of all. They should be hardworking, trustworthy and have a knowledge of what's going on throughout the University.

Rebecca Uzomba

The leaders should have charisma. Their goals should be set for the student body as well as themselves.

Tanesha Francis
Junior Biology
New Castle, DE

They should not say things they can't fulfill. They should set high but attainable goals and be able to relate to the student body well.

Abhin Clavon

Student leaders should definitely be outgoing. They should be able to bring out the best in the student body.
Gospel singer Lorraine Stancil finds hope, love in praising Jesus

Lorraine Stancil, gospel singer, is shown with her group performing on stage.

"I feel like I'm speaking to a friend," Stancil said. "I feel like I'm conversing with a loved one."

Stancil's music is centered around the theme of praising Jesus.

"I want people to hear the message of love and peace," Stancil said. "I want them to feel the love and peace that I feel within my heart."

Local bank provides Howard community with saving options

By Shalaka Sridhar

Howard University Branch of Signet Banks, Inc., a division of Sallie Mae, Inc., has introduced a savings program for Howard students as well as to the surrounding community.

In addition to the national program, Howard students are the first to benefit from the change to a savings program for a number of reasons.

The program was designed to provide Howard students and alumni with the opportunity to save money while they are still in school and after graduation.

The program is a partnership between Howard University and the University of Maryland, with the aim of providing a savings plan for the community.

A savings program will be launched on March 20, when students will be able to save money in their own accounts.

The program is open to all students and alumni, regardless of their income level.

The program will offer a variety of savings options, including a savings account, a certificate of deposit, and a money market account.

The savings account offers a higher interest rate than the certificate of deposit, while the money market account offers a higher interest rate than the savings account.

The program also offers a variety of services, including online banking, mobile banking, and customer support.

The program is designed to help students save money for their future, whether it be for college tuition, housing, or other expenses.

The program is also designed to help students develop good saving habits, which will benefit them for the rest of their lives.

The program is available to all Howard students and alumni, regardless of their income level, and is designed to be a convenient way for them to save money.

The program is also designed to help students save money for their future, whether it be for college tuition, housing, or other expenses.

The program is also designed to help students develop good saving habits, which will benefit them for the rest of their lives.
