Campus 1868

The year was 1867. It was the beginning of the decade which celebrated the centennial of American independence. During this decade, the American purchase of Alaska from Russia at two cents per acre was ridiculed; General Custer's troops were massacred by the Sioux; the 14th and 15th amendments were proclaimed as part of the U.S. Constitution; the first inter-collegiate football game was played between Princeton and Rutgers. This same decade witnessed the debut of cigarettes in America and the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson before the U.S. Senate ... and, this was the decade in which Howard University was born—one hundred years ago!

On November 20, 1866, several prominent members of Washington's First Congregational Church met at the home of Deacon Henry A. Brewster at 1823 I Street, N.W. At this meeting, the idea which gave birth to Howard University was conceived. Among those present at the meeting were Dr. C. B. Boynton, Rev. B. D. Nichols and Gen. Oliver Otis Howard.

Established at this meeting was the plan for the creation of a Theological Seminary which would have in view the training of colored men for the ministry. Because of his leadership, his farsighted vision, and his role as Freedmen's Bureau Commissioner, the name given the institution was the "Howard Theological Seminary," in honor of Gen. Oliver Otis Howard.

The second meeting of the Congregational Society was held on December 4, 1866. At this time, the name of the school was changed to "The Howard Normal and Theological Institute for the Education of Teachers and Preachers." On January 8, 1867, the name was again changed, this time to the present "Howard University." Plans for the establishment of a Medical and a Law department were also introduced at this time.

In January, 1867, the charter (Act of Incorporation) was introduced to Congress by the Hon. Henry Wilson. Not fully satisfied with the Charter, the Society revised and sent it back to Congress. On February 6, 1867, the final amended form was presented to the House and Senate of the 39th Congress. After passing both houses, it was sent to President Andrew Johnson, and was approved by him on March 2, 1867.

The University was officially opened on May 1, 1867. At this time the University was located in a small frame building on Georgia Avenue, just below "W" Street. It had two academic departments, Normal and Preparatory, and an initial enrollment of four students. Ironically enough these were white students, the daughters of founders, Nichols and Robinson.

It took another year before the Collegiate, Law and Medical departments were placed in operation. The Theological department, for which Howard was originally founded, did not open until four years after the original opening.

The immediate problem facing the trustees was finding a suitable site for the University; a tract of land large enough to accommodate all departments. A committee of two, Gen. Howard and General Eliphalet Whittlesey were appointed to find an available tract of land.

After encountering severe difficulty and hostility, and finding land owners unwilling to sell to a Negro University, a farm of 150 acres on a summit overlooking the city was purchased. The purchase of the land was financed by the Refugees and Freedmen's fund.

By 1869, two men had served as president: Rev. Charles B. Boynton, serving from March to August 1867, and Dr. Byron Sunderland, from August 1867 to November 1869.

General Howard served as president from April 1869 to November 1873. He had been offered the presidency several times before, but prior to this time he did not want to relinquish his position on the Freedman's Bureau. Under his administration, the physical plant was improved, high academic standards were emphasized, and funds were raised for expenses and an endowment.

By the end of Howard's term in 1874, the University had grown from its original two academic departments to eight; including the Normal, the Preparatory, the College, the Medical, the Law, the Theological, the Military and the Musical. The enrollment had increased from four students to five hundred.

Requirements for admission at this time included passing examinations in arithmetic, reading, spelling, English grammar, history, and geography. In addition, a knowledge of Latin was necessary to enter Law and Medicine.

Howard continued to grow and prosper, and in 1926 Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson became the first Negro president. Under his administration, every school and college was completely reorganized and headed by eminent scholars.

During this time, there was a substantial increase in scholarly publications, including books and monographs, written by the faculty. Three important journals in American education were founded and are still published regularly by Howard University. They are the "Journal of Negro Education", the "Journal of Religious Thought", and the "Howard Law Review".

In 1926, the University comprised eight schools and colleges, none of which held national accreditation. When Dr. Johnson retired in 1960 there were ten schools and colleges, all fully accredited.

Dr. James Madison Nabrit, Jr., a noted constitutional lawyer and educator, who was serving as Secretary of the University and Dean of the Law School was elected President of Howard in June, 1960. In his six years in office, Dr. Nabrit has administered a program which has seen the curricula expanded in every area and the physical plant increased in value by 15 million dollars.

One of the most cosmopolitan institutions of higher learning in the United States, Howard University started originally as an institution designed to meet a critical need of the newly freed Negro people. It is today, both national and international in scope of its work, its student body and its influence.

Since its establishment in 1867, Howard University has graduated almost 25 thousand persons.

Howard is people; more than 1,000 teachers, 1,500 non-teaching employees and a student body in excess of 10,000. It is from the contributions of these people, that Howard University has exceeded even the fondest dreams of its founders, to provide the kind of environment in which scholarship can develop and flourish.

It is to these people—faculty, administration, and especially students, that we the BISON staff of 1967 dedicate this Centennial section.

Buildings

The Main Building, built in 1869 and razed in 1935 served as the first Administration building; below, the Howard University campus in 1910

A very interesting history of Howard University can be told by its buildings, past and present. From its very beginning, Howard administrators placed much emphasis on the superb construction of campus buildings. From the original building, the physical plant has grown into one of the most modern on the East coast, with many of the buildings erected since 1955.

During the early period of Howard's existence, the buildings contained many advanced features for their time, such as large recitation and lecture rooms, all superbly constructed. The University site itself was surpassed by few existing institutions.

If someone had read a description of Howard's campus in 1907, it would have read as follows: "The University buildings are modern structures and are all located on the main campus with the exception of the Medical School building, which adjoins the hospital grounds at the south, and the Law School building which is on Judiciary Square. They are heated with steam and lighted by electricity. They are in the charge of a superintendent of Buildings and Grounds and a competent engineer with several assistants. Pains are taken to keep the buildings always in a sanitary condition, and the healthfulness of the campus and surroundings is attested by the fact that no disease has ever become epidemic in the institution, and there has never been on the grounds a death from typhoid."

Buildings

Many of Howard University's Buildings had a personality all their own. The main building was known for its commanding tower and beautiful view of the city. Miner Hall, which stood on the east side of the university facing the reservoir was the home of 140 young ladies. The basement of the building served as the university dining hall. Clark Hall, the men's dormitory was located on the north end of campus and housed 130 rugged young men. The building was named for Mr. David Clark of Hartford, Connecticut who donated most of the money for its construction. The Law building was unique in that it was the only building not located on campus.

Miner Hall, the famous women's dormitory was a campus site from 1869 to 1961. The new Home Economics building now stands in its place

The people who have passed through Howard University whether as students, professors, or administrators, who have helped distinguish the name of Howard University are far too many to be named here. Many of them are still serving here, others are out of this city but are still associated with Howard. The people are many and the list is growing longer every day. But we could not conceive of Howard's academic history without paying tribute to Howardites such as slave-born George W. Cook, who came to Howard in 1874 and seven years later, graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He saw ten administrators come and go for he served his Alma Mater as tutor, professor, dean, business manager, secretary-treasurer, and acting president; Charles Drew, Spingarn Medal recipient, served as professor and head of the Department of Surgery from 1941-1950. Leading authority on the preservation of blood plasma, he directed the medical division of the British Blood Transfusion Association and served as first director of the American Red Cross Blood Bank; E. Franklin Frazier, renowned sociologist, author and lecturer, received his B.A. from Howard in 1916 and was with the sociology department here from 1934-1960. Author of ten books and 100 published articles, was the 1st Negro to be appointed a fellow of the Library of Congress or to become President of the American Sociological Society; Dwight O. W. Holmes, class of 1901, nine time Howard Letter man, served as President of the General Alumni Association 1911-1915, Registrar 1919-1920, Dean, School of Education—Loved Howard much and served her long and well; Ernest Everette Just, zoologist whose researches in the biology of the cell won international recognition. Served as head of the Zoology department for twenty-six years. Spingarn medal recipient in 1915 for work in physiology for improving standards of Negro Medical schools; Alain Locke, Phi Beta Kappa at Harvard, Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, student at University of Berlin prior to coming to Howard where he was a professor of philosophy for over 40 years. Noted for his studies of the Negro's contributions to American culture and art, Locke was instrumental in the development of Howard's fine arts program; Kelly Miller, scholar, author, inspirer and teacher of youth. An untiring investigator in sociology, a persistent student in mathematics, and an outstanding promoter of racial betterment. Compiled for the U. S. government the first Negro Census and served Howard as a Dean and distinguished professor from 1899 to 1935; William B. West, served as dean of men for twenty-seven years and taught Marketing History and Salesmanship. Was twice elected President of the National Association for Deans and Advisors of Men; Carter G. Woodson, Historian and Author, Dean of Liberal Arts 1919-1920, Spingarn Medal Recipient, 1926. He became the great popularizer of the study of Negro History in the colored schools and colleges, and Negro History Week, which he established. Author of numerous books, he founded the Association for the study of Negro Life and History and published Journal of Negro History.

Student Activities

At early Howard, though there were many worthwhile activities, there was little or no large-scale organization of the many other activities with which the students were concerned. This was in part due to philosophy, emphasis, and university structure of the times—not only at Howard but throughout most universities.

Other Greek organizations, all international now, soon followed. Omega Psi Phi Fraternity in 1911, Phi Beta Sigma in 1912, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority in 1913, Zeta Phi Beta in 1920 and Sigma Gamma Rho in 1922 were conceived here at Howard University.

Chapters of other Greek organizations already established soon began to appear here. Alpha Phi Alpha, Alpha Phi Omega and Kappa Alpha Psi fraternities are such groups.

"The earliest campus athletes," according to Dr. Frank Avant, Howard's oldest returning alumnus, "were small groups of students assembled on campus to play leap frog, run races and practice boxing." One day, the nine year old son of one of the professors threw a football into such a group of students, and in the next instant, Dr. Avant became the first student to kick a football on Howard's campus. Soon afterward (in 1892) football became an organized campus sport.

The Howard-Lincoln game was the highlight of every football season. Graduates of both schools came from far and near to see this meeting of two of the best Negro teams at that time. The attendance at these games averaged around 17,000 people. Most of the games that were played in Washington took place in Griffith Stadium, for Howard's stadium could not accommodate the overflow crowd.

In fact, as soon as football became an organized campus sport, the first games were played in 1892 against Lincoln University. In 1894, the team received a challenge from Norfolk to play a post-season game on Christmas day. "That game put Howard University on the map for education as well as for football," Dr. Avant declares, "because the next year we didn't have dormitory space and I think the record will show that."

To Fulfill These Rights . . .

Lyndon B. Johnson
June 4, 1965

Our earth is the home of revolution. In every corner of every continent, men charged with hope contend with ancient ways in pursuit of justice. They reach for the newest of weapons to realize the oldest of dreams: that each may walk in freedom and pride, stretching his talents, enjoying the fruits of the earth.

Our enemies may occasionally seize the day of change. But it is the banner of our revolution they take. And our own future is linked to this process of swift and turbulent change in many lands. But nothing, in any country, touches us more profoundly, nothing is more freighted with meaning for our own destiny, than the revolution of the Negro American.

In far too many ways, American Negroes have been another nation: deprived of freedom, crippled by hatred, the doors of opportunity closed to hope.

In our time, change has come to this nation, too. Heroically, the American Negro—acting with impressive restraint—has peacefully protested and marched, entered the courtrooms and the seats of government, demanding a justice long denied. The voice of the Negro was the call to action. But it is a tribute to America that, once aroused, the courts and the Congress, the President and most of the people have been the allies of progress.

Thus, we have seen the high court of the country declare that discrimination based on race was repugnant to the Constitution, and therefore void. We have seen—in 1957, 1960 and again in 1964—the first civil-rights legislation in almost a century.

As Majority Leader, I helped guide two of these bills through the Senate. And, as your President, I was proud to sign the third.

And soon we will have the fourth new law, guaranteeing every American the right to vote.

No act of my Administration will give me greater satisfaction than the day when my signature makes this bill, too, the law of the land.

The voting-rights bill will be the latest, and among the most important, in a long series of victories. But this victory—as Winston Churchill said of another triumph for freedom—"is not the end. It is not even the beginning of the end. But it is, perhaps, the end of the beginning."

That beginning is freedom, and the barriers to that freedom are tumbling. Freedom is the right to share, fully and equally, in American society—to vote, to hold a job, to enter a public place, to go to school. It is the right to be treated, in every part of our national life, as a man equal in dignity and promise to all others.

But freedom is not enough. You do not wipe away the scars of centuries by saying: "Now, you are free to go where you want, do as you desire, and choose the leaders you please."

You do not take a man who, for years, has been hobbled by chains, liberate him, bring him to the starting line of a race, saying, "You are free to compete with all the others," and still justly believe you have been completely fair.

Thus, it is not enough to open the gates of opportunity. All our citizens must have the ability to walk through those gates.

This is the next and the more profound stage of the battle for civil rights. We seek not just freedom but opportunity—not just legal equity but human ability—not just equality as a right and a theory, but equality as a fact and a result.

For the task is to give 20 million Negroes the same chance as every other American to learn and grow—to work and share in society—to develop their abilities—physical, mental and spiritual—and to pursue their individual happiness.

To this end, equal opportunity is essential, but not enough. Men and women of all races are born with the same range of abilities. But ability is not just the product of birth. It is stretched or stunted by the family you live with, and the neighborhood you live in—by the school you go to, and the poverty or richness of your surroundings. It is the product of a hundred unseen forces playing upon the infant, the child and the man.

This graduating class at Howard University is witness to the indomitable determination of the Negro American to win his way in American life.

The number of Negroes in schools of high learning has almost doubled in 15 years. The number of nonwhite professional workers has more than doubled in 10 years. The median income of Negro college women now exceeds that of white college women. And these are the enormous accomplishments of distinguished, individual Negroes—many of them graduates of this institution.

These are proud and impressive achievements. But they only tell the story of a growing middle-class minority, steadily narrowing the gap between them and their white counterparts.

But for the great majority of Negro Americans—the poor, the unemployed, the uprooted and dispossessed—there is a grimmer story. They still are another nation. Despite the court orders and the laws, the victories and speeches, for them the walls are rising and the gulf is widening.

Here are some of the facts of this American failure: Thirty-five years ago, the rate of unemployment for Negroes and whites was about the same. Today the Negro rate is twice as high.

In 1948, the 8 per cent unemployment rate for Negro teen-age boys was actually less than that of whites. By last year it had grown to 23 per cent, as against 13 per cent for whites.

Between 1949 and 1959, the income of Negro men relative to white men declined in every section of the country. From 1952 to 1963, the median income of Negro families compared to white actually dropped from 57 per cent to 53 per cent.

In the years 1955-57, 22 per cent of experienced Negro workers were out of work at some time during the year. In 1961-63, that proportion had soared to 29 per cent.

Since 1947, the number of white families living in poverty has decreased 27 per cent, while the number of poor nonwhite families went down only 3 per cent.

The infant mortality of nonwhites in 1940 was 70 per cent greater than whites. Twenty-two years later it was 90 per cent greater.

Moreover, the isolation of Negro from white communities is increasing rather than diminishing, as Negroes crowd into the central cities—becoming a city within a city.

Of course, Negro Americans as well as white Americans have shared in our rising national abundance. But the harsh fact of the matter is that, in the battle for true equality, too many are losing ground.

We are not completely sure why this is. The causes are complex and subtle. But we do know the two broad basic reasons. And we know we have to act.

First, Negroes are trapped—as many whites are trapped—in inherited gateless poverty. They lack training and skills. They are shut in slums, without decent medical care. Private and public poverty combine to cripple their capacities.

We are attacking these evils through our poverty program, our education program, our health program and a dozen more—aimed at the root causes of poverty.

We will increase and accelerate and broaden this attack in years to come, until this most enduring of foes yields to our unyielding will.

But there is a second cause—more difficult to explain, more deeply grounded, more desperate in its force. It is the devastating heritage of long years of slavery and a century of oppression, hatred and injustice.

For Negro poverty is not white poverty. Many of its causes and many of its cures are the same. But there are differences—deep, corrosive, obstinate differences—radiating painful roots into the community, the family and the nature of the individual.

These differences are not racial differences. They are solely and simply the consequence of ancient brutality, past injustice and present prejudice. They are anguishing to observe: For the Negro they are a reminder of oppression. For the white they are a reminder of guilt. But they must be faced, and dealt with, and overcome if we are to reach the time when the only difference between Negroes and whites is the color of their skin.

Nor can we find a complete answer in the experience of other American minorities. They made a valiant and largely successful effort to emerge from poverty and prejudice. The Negro, like these others, will have to rely mostly on his own efforts. But he cannot do it alone. For they did not have the heritage of centuries to overcome. They did not have a cultural tradition which had been twisted and battered by endless years of hatred and hopelessness. Nor were they excluded because of race or color—a feeling whose dark intensity is matched by no other prejudice in our society.

Nor can these differences be understood as isolated infirmities. They are a seamless web. They cause each other. They result from each other. They reinforce each other. Much of the Negro community is buried under a blanket of history and circumstance. It is not a lasting solution to lift just one corner. We must stand on all sides and raise the entire cover if we are to liberate our fellow citizens.

One of the differences is the increased concentration of Negroes in our cities. More than 73 per cent of all Negroes live in urban areas compared with less than 70 per cent of whites. Most of them live in slums. And most of them live together—a separated people. Men are shaped by their world. When it is a world of decay ringed by an invisible wall—when escape is arduous and uncertain, and the saving pressures of a more hopeful society are unknown—it can cripple the youth and desolate the man.

There is also the burden a dark skin can add to the search for a productive place in society. Unemployment strikes most swiftly and broadly at the Negro. This burden erodes hope. Blighted hope breeds despair. Despair brings indifference to the learning which offers a way out. And despair coupled with indifference is often the source of destructive rebellion against the fabric of society.

There is also the lacerating hurt of early collision with white hatred or prejudice, distaste or condescension. Other groups have felt similar intolerance. But success and achievement could wipe it away. They do not change the color of a man's skin. I have seen this uncomprehending pain in the eyes of young Mexican-American schoolchildren. It can be overcome. But, for many, the wounds are always open.

Perhaps most important—its influence radiating to every part of life—is the breakdown of the Negro family structure. For this, most of all, white America must accept responsibility. It flows from centuries of oppression and persecution of the Negro man. It flows from the long years of degradation and discrimination which have attacked his dignity and assuaged his ability to provide for his family.

This, too, is not pleasant to look upon. But it must be faced by those whose serious intent is to improve the life of all Americans.

Only a minority—less than half—of all Negro children reach the age of 18 having lived all their lives with both parents. At this moment, today, little less than two thirds are living with both parents. Probably a majority of all Negro children receive federally aided public assistance during their childhood.

The family is the cornerstone of our society. More than any other force it shapes the attitude, the hopes, the ambitions and the values of the child. When the family collapses, the child is usually damaged. When it happens on a massive scale, the community itself is crippled.

Unless we work to strengthen the family—to create conditions under which most parents will stay together—all the rest—schools and playgrounds, public assistance and private concern—will not be enough to cut completely the circle of despair and deprivation.

There is no single easy answer to all these problems. Jobs are part of the answer. They bring the income which permits a man to provide for his family.

Decent homes of decent surroundings and a chance to learn are part of the answer.

Welfare and social programs better designed to hold families together are part of the answer.

Care for the sick is part of the answer.

An understanding heart by all Americans is also part of the answer.

To all these fronts—and a dozen more—I will dedicate the expanding efforts of my Administration.

But there are other answers still to be found. Nor do we fully understand all the problems. Therefore, this fall, I intend to call a White House conference of scholars, experts, Negro leaders and officials at every level of Government.

Its theme and title: "To Fulfill These Rights." Its object: to help the American Negro fulfill the rights which—after the long time of injustice—he is finally about to secure:

- To move beyond opportunity to achievement.
- To shatter forever not only the barriers of law and public practice, but the walls which bound the condition of man by the color of his skin.
- To dissolve, as best we can, the antique enmities of the heart which diminish the holder, divide the great democracy, and do wrong to the children of God.

I pledge this will be a chief goal of my Administration, and of my program next year, and in years to come.

I hope it will be part of the program of all America. For what is justice?

It is to fulfill the fair expectations of man.

Thus, American justice is a very special thing. For, from the first, this has been a land of towering expectations. It was to be a nation where each man would be ruled by the common consent of all—enshrined in law, given life by institutions, guided by men themselves subject to its rule. And all—of every station and origin—would be touched equally in obligation and in liberty.

Beyond the law lay the land. It was a rich land, glowing with more abundant promise than ever man had seen. Here, unlike any place yet known, all were to share the harvest.

And beyond this was the dignity of man. Each could become whatever his qualities of mind and spirit would permit—to strive, to seek, and, if he could, to find his happiness.

This is American justice. We have pursued it faithfully to the edge of our imperfections. And we have failed to find it for the American Negro.

It is the glorious opportunity of this generation to end the one huge wrong of the American nation—and, in so doing, to find America for ourselves, with the same immense thrill of discovery which gripped those who first began to realize that here, at last, was a home for freedom.

All it will take is for all of us to understand what this country is and what it must become.

The Scripture promises: "I shall light a candle of understanding in thine heart, which shall not be put out." Together, and with millions more, we can light that candle of understanding in the heart of America.

And, once lit, it will never again go out.

President Nabrit has been associated with Howard University since 1936 in the following capacities: Secretary of the University, Professor in the School of Law, Dean of the School of Law, Administrative Assistant to the President and Director of Public Relations. He was elected to the Presidency, July 1, 1960.

He received his undergraduate degree at Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia and his professional degree from Northwestern University.

As a member of the faculty of the School of Law, Dr.

Nabrit organized the first course in civil rights to be taught in American law schools.

His activities include membership in approximately sixty public service boards, committees and commissions, educational organizations, legal associations, social and religious organizations.

For the past two years President Nabrit has been taking over the position of United States Representative to the United Nations Security Council, a post which he was appointed to by President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Acting President Stanton L. Wormley

In naming Vice President Wormley as acting president, the University trustees selected a man who has been a member of the Howard faculty since 1938, when he was appointed assistant professor of German. A native of Washington, D.C., where he received his early education, Dr. Wormley holds two degrees from Howard, the Bachelor of Arts (1930) and the Master's Degree of Arts in German (1931). He also earned a diploma at the University of Hamburg (Germany), and the Doctor of Philosophy degree in German at Cornell University in 1939.

In August, 1964, Dr. Wormley was named the University's first academic vice-president.

Among the honors and awards which Dr. Wormley has received during his career are honorary life membership as a fellow of the American International Academy, the Star and Cross of Academic Honor, and Senate of the American International Academy.

William Stuart Nelson, Vice President for Special Projects, has primary responsibility for the Centennial Celebration and other significant unusual projects of the University.

Frederick Stanton, Secretary of the University, is responsible for matters pertaining to official records and functions of the institution as well as for coordination of the program of University development and alumni affairs.

Administration

James B. Clarke, Treasurer and Chief Business and Financial Officer, is responsible for coordinating the fiscal and business activities of the University.

Armour J. Blackburn, Dean of Students, is responsible for the coordination and development of programs in the area of student services.

Administration

G. L. Washington, Assistant to the President, assists the Office of the President in carrying out the various aspects of the University programs.

James H. Robinson, Assistant to the Academic Vice-President, assists that office in discharging its responsibilities.

Charles H. Thompson, Director of Self-Study Project, is responsible for conducting a general evaluation of the University's programs.

Carl E. Anderson, Associate Dean of Students for Administration and Student Life, assists the Dean of Students in the administration of the area of student services; coordinates programs of student life, financial aid, and graduate placement.

James L. Cary, Associate Dean of Students (M), is responsible for coordinating the housing program for male students and other programs related to the general welfare of students.

Edna M. Calhoun, Associate Dean of Students (W), is responsible for coordinating the Association of Women Students, housing and other programs of female students.

Administration

Benny J. Pugh, Director of Student Activities, coordinates student organizational activities and the operation of the University Student Center.

Charles A. Lyons, Jr., Director of Admissions, directs the program of admissions to all of the University's schools and colleges.

Wilmer A. Sojourner, Registrar and Director of Recording, is responsible for maintaining official records relating to the students' academic progress and for coordinating the registration program.

Dorothy B. Ferebee, Director of the University Health Service, directs the services maintained to safeguard the health of students and to provide them with necessary medical care.

Frederick P. Watts, Director of University Counseling Service, coordinates University programs providing counseling procedures and facilities.

Joseph H. Reason, Director of University Libraries, coordinates all library facilities at the University.

Administration

Robert W. Wilson, Director of Personnel, is responsible for the procurement and certification of employees for the University.

Ernest E. Goodman, Director of Public Relations, coordinates the public relations program of the University.

George W. Ward, Director of Physical Plant, directs the program of maintenance and security of the University.

Caspa L. Harris, Comptroller, is responsible for all disbursements and accounting matters for the University.

Thomas D. Lowe, Purchasing Agent, is responsible for the acquisition of all supplies, materials, equipment, and services for the institution.

George E. Miller, Director of Auxiliary Enterprises, coordinates special operations of the University such as food services, housing maintenance and the bookstore.

Evans E. Crawford, Dean of the Chapel, is responsible for weekly chapel services and for the program of religious life at the institution.

Ernest J. Wilson, Director of Foreign Student Services coordinates the program of special services as they pertain to foreign students at the University.

Goldie W. Claiborne, Director of Financial Aid, directs the program of financial assistance to students through scholarships, loans, and part-time employment.

Charles H. Bush, Supervisor of Off-Campus Housing, assists students in locating suitable off-campus accommodations.

The Centennial

The Centennial objectives are to review and evaluate Howard University's progress during its first one hundred years; to fashion new goals toward which Howard University will strive during its next one hundred years, to examine critically the changes which are likely to occur in society and the responsibility of every university in the presence of these changes, and to identify and assume Howard University's special obligations incident to the current and anticipated changes in society. It has been written that a university's anniversary, by its very nature, is a period of retrospection, of projection, of homage and of rejoicing. During Howard's centennial celebration, particular attention is being paid to the will of the Founders to build an institution devoted to the neglected but forgetting none on account of sex or race or land or origin. In addition, the fact is being emphasized that the past of Howard University is distinguished by the early opportunity afforded to qualified members of that minority for teaching and administrative leadership. During the centennial celebration the roll of these men and women were called and their names engraved on the memories of this generation of Howard students. In addition, the noted historian, Dr. Rayford W. Logan, is recording a history of Howard University. However, emphasis is not only being placed on Howard's past. For four years, under the leadership of Dr. Charles H. Thompson, the university community has been engaged in a self-study to help chart the future course of every area of university life. In addition, the Centennial Commission of nine distinguished American educators representing great institutions of higher learning in America has for more than a year, in consultation with university officials, given the most thoughtful and understanding consideration of Howard's future role. No aspect of Howard's life is being overlooked by these two studies, one by experts from within the university, the other by experts from without. The possibilities of new, even spectacular, achievements by Howard are under review. The sights are high and the will to go forward is strong. The Centennial celebration is also portraying the Howard of the present. The broad character of Howard's thinking today appears in its Centennial theme, "The University In A Changing Society." The Howard of today is proud of its past. It is dedicated to making its future one of greatness. Howard is also a part of today's world of universities, today's world of higher education. It is raising, therefore, the question as to its responsibility and every university's responsibility, to the society to which it is a part. Our society is in the grip of swift and sometimes disquieting change. During the Centennial year an attempt is being made here to define the responsibility of all universities in the presence of this change. This is being achieved in special university-wide programs. Central in this time of change, however, there is a responsible searching for the role Howard will play. The ancient university bore the hallmarks of learning and wisdom, and its influence upon our society today can be recognized. In the midst of current swift and bewildering changes, it is to the modern university that society should be able to turn for guidance. Howard's birth, its historic and current preoccupations, mark it for an illustrious future role which society sorely needs and must not be denied.

ACADEMICS

Academics

Academic Deans

Helping students in their quest for the ever-elusive truth and knowledge is the arduous task of the academic deans. They guide our academic careers while we study under their influence and administration. Their business is the academic success of students. The deans coordinate programs, set-up academic policies, and regulate the tread of progress made by the various schools and colleges of the University.

They carry a large burden in keeping this team, which is the university, functioning, but the ultimate responsibility rests with us, the students.

Reading Laboratory Workshop

A five week reading workshop for elementary and secondary school students was a summer program under the directorship of Dr. Gertrude H. Williams. The program had as its purpose, the enhancement of the reading ability of the students. This was accomplished through small reading groups with three or four children to a teacher. At the end of the program, the reading laboratory held an open house to which parents, friends, and the Howard community was invited to witness the accomplishments of the students.

Research for Science Students

Howard received a grant from the National Science Foundation to support thirty-seven able secondary school students as research participants in physics, chemistry, zoology and in certain laboratories of the Medical School and of the Dental College. The students came from all over the country and all were rated as above average students. They participated in established programs under the directorship of Dr. Herman Bransom, Professor and Head of the department of Physics here.

NDEA Institute For Teachers Of Disadvantaged Youth

Under the directorship of Dr. Clifton R. Jones, the NDEA Institute for Teachers and Supervisors of Disadvantaged Youth provided the participants in the Institute with broadly based knowledge of the cultural factors which influence the behavior of this population. The program focused on community processes, culture of the disadvantaged, problems of the disadvantaged, and field practice in order to make case studies. The institute and Dr. Jones are pictured below.

Financed by a $600,000 grant from the Ford Foundation and an additional gift of $20,000 from the Field Foundation, FASP is a four-year project designed to prepare Negroes and Americans of Spanish-speaking extraction for careers in foreign affairs. The program is directed by Dr. Vincent J. Browne, professor of government, and is conducted in conjunction with the State Department, Agency for International Development, and the U.S. Information Agency. The project consists of a summer internship program at federal agencies in Washington, D.C. and a year of graduate study at selected universities throughout the country.

Peace Corps Training Program

Howard has served as a training center for 481 Peace Corps Volunteers in the past five years. Fifty-six volunteers who were later assigned to the newly independent South American country of Guyana were enrolled in an intensive two month training program here this summer. The new corpsmen, all college graduates with outstanding academic records, ranged in age from 21 to 26. Project coordinator is Dr. Winston K. McAllister, Associate Professor of Philosophy.

The daily 10-hour training schedule at Howard included classes in community development, world affairs, history of Guyana, technical studies, and cross cultural studies. In addition, the volunteers were trained to conduct physical education exercises and spent a portion of their time student teaching at summer institutes being conducted on the Howard campus.

Sir John Carter, Ambassador from Guyana, and Prime Minister Forbes Birnham assures volunteers of a warm welcome ... that all of Guyana will cooperate with them.

Upward Bound — Pre-College Program

Upward Bound's Pre-College Program, under the directorship of Mr. Leroy Giles, is designed to stimulate youth from economically disadvantaged families to continue their education beyond the high school level. Participating students are exposed to full-time residential summer programs including academic work, work shops, and cultural recreational activities. An essential objective of the Pre-College Program is to strengthen Mathematics and English proficiency through use of research materials prepared by Educational Services Incorporated, and to create an excitement about learning which will reinforce the possibility of success in college. The summer session was open to sophomores, juniors, and seniors and 400 were here. Of the 200 seniors, 170 are now in college.

OF

School of Religion

Instruction in religion was begun at Howard University January 6, 1868 for those "accredited as preachers and others looking forward to the work," and continued with the Reverend Danford Nichols, M.D. as instructor until the establishment of the Theological Department in 1871. During these years, instruction was given in a frame building on Seventh Street, now Georgia Avenue, above Florida Avenue. Upon the completion of the Main Building in 1870, the School was transferred to that structure which continued to be its home until October 28, 1929, when it occupied for the first time the remodeled building at 2460 Sixth Street, N.W. On October 20, 1939, the School moved into its present quarters, Carnegie Hall, Sixth Street and Howard Place, N.W.

In 1871 the Theological Department was organized under a dean of its own. The name was changed in 1906 to the School of Theology and again in 1917 to the School of Religion.

In 1897 the Evening Institute was organized to aid pastors and Sunday school workers. The Institute had no admission requirements, but those who attended the lectures for four years and passed examinations were granted a statement attesting to these facts. This type of work was discontinued in 1916. In 1919 evening classes were begun with the same admission requirements and with the same grade of instruction as in the day school. Such evening classes were discontinued in 1935. Instruction by correspondence was begun in 1909. The Extension Department, enlarging the scope of the Department of Correspondence Study, was instituted in 1920. The correspondence course was abolished in 1933. Also, in 1920, the Theological College, with a four-year combined college and theological course of study, supplanted the old Diploma Course of three years.

In 1932 the Theological College was abolished. Only college graduates have been admitted since that time. Since it was necessary to give all Theological College students enrolled in 1932 an opportunity to graduate, the combination course was continued for them through June 1936. Since that time the School has operated wholly on a graduate level.

During its years of existence as a separate division of the University, the School of Religion has enrolled some 2,350 students.

The School of Religion seeks to train men and women of superior intellectual and moral caliber who will be capable of a total spiritual ministry to individuals and groups in their most urgent personal and social concerns. By means of a balanced equipment of practical and academic disciplines, the qualified religious educator, YMCA secretary—aims to nurture, preserve, and enhance existing values in the community which make for ultimate character and personality development, and so for responsible Christian citizenship.

Through the utilization of all available facilities and resources in the School, the University at large, and in the City of Washington, the School's efforts are concentrated upon the adequate training of students to fulfill the highest personal and professional standards for service through religious and educational institutions. Students so trained will be prepared to render a variety of services in the areas of personal development, community relationships, Christian education, and the several vocations contained in the world mission of the Christian church. This work requires the developed skills of sincerely dedicated, ethically sensitive, and highly competent candidates.

Classes in the history of drama make students aware of the art they are studying.

COLLEGE OF FINE ARTS

Freehand Drawing class gives students an opportunity to work with dimensions.

The art department provides its students with a variety of majors and minors that range from history to education, from painting to design. The department is a small one but provides adequate equipment for the students to carry out a multitude of projects that sometimes lasts for many weeks. At the end of each year the different sections within the department hold an art show comprised of the best work from the various classes.

Art History seminars provide an insight in the development of art.

"Shoes Talk" was the subject of a lesson given by Mr. Richie of Rich's shoes demonstrating the numerous ways of effectively advertising shoes.

"Ten Afro-American Artists of the Nineteenth Century" was the title of an exhibition commemorating the Centennial of Howard University held in the Gallery of Art in the College of Fine Arts.

The exhibition was assembled chiefly to illustrate that which the Afro-American artist achieved in spite of the chilling limitations of social and historical factors which opposed him in colonial days and virtually throughout Nineteenth century America. It was also intended to distinguish the productions of that number who by dint of talent and perseverance escaped the dark oblivion into which many of their contemporaries have disappeared. Most important of all, the exhibition was an effort to show as large a group as possible of major works by Afro-Americans which though but little known to Americans are gradually winning esteem for their originators.

Artists featured were Joshua Johnston, Patrick H. Reason, Robert S. Duncanson, Eugene Warburg, Edward Bannister, Julian Hudson, Edmonia Lewis, William Simpson, Henry Ossawa Tanner, and Annie E. Walker.

SOCIAL WORK

School of Social Work

Social Work training at Howard University began in September, 1935, with a program of professional courses in the Department of Sociology. In October, 1944, the Board of Trustees of the University voted to establish a full-fledged professional School of Social Work. This decision was put into operation at the beginning of the 1945-1946 school year.

The School was established for the following purposes: (a) to provide professional education at the graduate level for qualified students planning to enter the field of social work; (b) to provide opportunities for professional education to persons employed in social agencies; (c) to conduct and promote research in the field of social welfare; and (d) to offer leadership in the development of professional social work education and practice and thus to contribute to the improvement and extension of health and welfare services.

The curriculum has been developed on the premise that professional education for social work is designed to enable the student to acquire a body of knowledge about human behavior and institutions, and methods of problem-solving in social relationships; to develop ability to use such knowledge skillfully and responsibly in problems of individual, group, and community relationships; to develop the attitudes necessary for the sensitive and disciplined use of self as a helping person; to develop a spirit of inquiry and the capacity to augment and test social knowledge, methods and techniques in the light of social needs, social purposes, and social results; and to develop habits of integrating knowledge, thought, and feeling into an effective and efficient means of doing.

Yugoslavia's Dr. Eugen Pusic (center) president of the Thirteenth International Conference of Social Work, explains his views on international developments in social welfare with four colleagues during the School of Social Work Centennial Lecture. In his address, Dr. Pusic called for an enlarged concept of social welfare under which peoples throughout the world can be secure from the forces of nature and free from the subjugation by other men. From left to right are Dr. Leon Keyserling, well-known economist and chairman of the President's Council for Economic Advisors during the Truman Administration; Dr. Ellen Winston, U.S. Commissioner of Welfare; Dr. Pusic; Dr. Martha Bascombe, senior social welfare advisor, Office of Technical Cooperation and Research, Agency for International Development; and Dean Inabel B. Lindsay of the Howard School of Social Work.

30-Years of Service

As a child back in St. Joseph, Mo., Inabel Burns missed the first three years of school. There was no point in going. She would not have been able to read or write because she could not see. Her paralyzed eye muscles refused to work and one eyelid would not open at all. But, with home coaching and plenty of medical care, she was able to enter the fourth grade and went on "with braids down my back and big hair-bows" to Howard University to graduate at the age of 19. Today, Dean Inabel Burns Lindsay is the only woman dean of an academic division of a Washington area university. She heads the Howard University School of Social Work, which she pioneered and built into one of the largest in the nation. Her 30 years labor of love for her alma mater has included the writing of an endless stream of professional papers, setting up countless professional institutes, all forerunners to the war on poverty. She has always made time for a personal role of community leadership, as has her husband

Arnett G. Lindsay, real estate broker now semi-retired. The path from the Missouri-Kansas-Nebraska border to the Capitol was not a direct one. As a young Howard student ready to graduate Dean Lindsay paused on the threshold of a career in teaching to take a look at the world beyond the classroom. She and ten other young women of the Class of '20 who had completed their credits in advance of June graduation formed a seminar group to occupy their time. And this gave them all a window on the world outside. "I learned a little Italian but more important, I found out about the new field of Social Work." She received a scholarship from the then 10-year old Urban League to study in New York at the New York School of Social Work, now a part of Columbia University. After receiving a master's degree from the University of Chicago she returned to Howard University. There she taught and helped build the School of Social Work. It became a two-year master's degree program. The School of Social Work has grown to 210 full-time students and is one of the fifteen largest in the United States. At this point in history, there is about an equal division of social workers being trained for private and federal work. Dean Lindsay notes a substantial increase in the numbers going into community work. "This is with pleasure," she adds. After 30 years at Howard University as one of the most distinguished alumni, Dean Lindsay is looking forward to retiring at the close of the academic year. She hopes her new leisure will permit her to travel. She has made many trips for the Department of State. In 1960, during a year's sabbatical, she helped to establish Jamaica's School of Social Work and developed staff training for the Virgin Islands Department of Social Welfare. She has served on many Capitol antipoverty projects, including development of the Baker's Dozen Youth Center, now a part of Howard, and Shaw renewal planning. She was a delegate to the 1966 White House Conference on Civil Rights, and is a member of the District Public Welfare Advisory Board. In recognition of community leadership Dean Lindsay was honored at the first of Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson's Do-ers Luncheons.

OF

College of Pharmacy

The College of Pharmacy was organized in 1868 as a division of the then Medical Department, but gained departmental status two years later, and became a college in 1882. The College now offers a five-year program leading to the Bachelor of Science in Pharmacy degree. The College is accredited by the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education, and is approved by the New York Department of Education. Its diploma is recognized in all states.

The major purpose of the program of the College is to prepare students for the intelligent practice of pharmacy. The course of instruction and activities of the program are so designed as to enable students to acquire the educational, pharmaceutical, and scientific background necessary for rendering a highly specialized professional service to the public and to other members of the health professions. This service is rendered by graduates of the College, who serve not only as retail pharmacists, but as hospital pharmacists, laboratory technicians, manufacturers' representatives to the medical profession, researchers, and teachers.

Emphasis is placed upon the development of the professional, ethical, and moral conduct of students for the purpose of inculcating a sensibility of civic and professional responsibilities; the development of the students' appreciation and interests in the total field of pharmacy; and the advancement of the profession of pharmacy through faculty and administrative contributions of the College of Pharmacy.

College of Pharmacy

Students in the College of Pharmacy must be alert in their work, one mistake and the entire experiment is a useless pursuit. The instructors in the college train the students not to make errors in their work. Careful preparation of each formula is needed. The work is hard but the students are very determined in their work and apply themselves to their work.

Prescriptions are filled by students in the college for the college pharmacy. Students are responsible for supplying the pharmacy with most of its medicine.

Conscientious students will result in good pharmacists.

Research, experiments and many hours of concentration go into the preparation of the formulas and medicines which are part of the students' practical experience.

College of Pharmacy

Many displays and exhibits are a part of the students' practical experience in their work. Many lecturers and job consultants come to the college to promote their companies' opportunities.

The School of Nursing

The School of Nursing, which is an integral part of Freedmen's Hospital, was established in 1894. Since that time it has exerted a prominent role of leadership in the community by providing a program for the education of professional nurses. Freedmen's Hospital School of Nursing is a fully accredited school which offers a three year program under the direction of its own faculty, and in cooperation with Howard University and other affiliating hospitals. After the transfer to Howard University in the near future, FHSN is to become a new college of the University under a program leading to the B.S. degree in Nursing Education.

MEDICINE

College of Medicine

Organized in 1868, the College of Medicine offers a four year program leading to the Doctor of Medicine degree and cooperates with the Graduate School in providing instruction for advanced degrees in Anatomy, Biochemistry, Pharmacology, and Physiology. The primary aim of the College is to prepare students for the practice of medicine and for careers in teaching and research. Through precept, laboratory experiment, and clinical experience the College provides the foundation upon which students of medicine can build their professional lives. An educational experience in depth is provided for those students in the Graduate School who are studying for the Master of Science or Doctor of Philosophy degree of the College.

Construction is currently underway of a new ultramodern hospital which will provide a greater amount of much needed facilities. This edifice will serve as the nucleus of the new Howard University Medical Center, to be also comprised of the Medical and Dental Colleges along with the schools of Nursing and Pharmacy. It will be located on the site of Washington's Griffith Stadium.

ARCHITECTURE

School of Engineering and Architecture

Organized in 1910 as the School of Manual Arts and Applied Sciences, the division became the College of Applied Science in 1919 and the School of Engineering and Architecture in 1934. Today the School offers a five-year program leading to the Bachelor of Architecture degree and four-year programs leading to the Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering, Bachelor of Science in Electrical Engineering, and Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering degrees.

On the basis of a program which includes in the early stages general training in fundamental engineering, architecture, and liberal arts subjects and in the latter stages specialized training in various professional areas, the School of Engineering and Architecture aims primarily to prepare students for future entrance upon active careers as civil engineers, electrical engineers, mechanical engineers, and architects.

The objective of the Department of Architecture is to train students in the principles of Architecture and its practice. Both options offer instruction for a general understanding of the profession of Architecture, including aesthetics, environment, design fundamentals of modern building construction, professional practice and building economics. The first three years of work is identical in each option, and specialization is begun in the fourth or upper junior year.

Engineering is the profession in which a knowledge of the mathematical and natural sciences gained by study, experience, and practice is applied with judgment to develop ways to utilize, economically, the materials and forces of nature for the benefit of mankind. The Civil Engineer plans, designs and supervises the construction of most of the large fixed structures that are necessary for the welfare of society and the conduct of industry and commerce. The Electrical Engineer is trained in fundamental principles and laws of electricity and magnetism, and the application of these principles and laws to Electrical Engineering. Students in the Department of Mechanical Engineering are trained in the utilization of nature's sources of energy and materials for the benefit of mankind through the development and application of prime movers, machinery and processes of manufacture.

The architectural program is the students' first step toward becoming professional architects. It is a five year course and during this time the student learns the technique of creating synthetic environment (the ordering of space) for man's use. Unity, harmony, proportion and rhythm are only a few of the tools the student learns to use.

Much of a student's philosophy comes outside the classroom through informal bull sessions with his fellow students and his instructors. Howard's student chapter of the American Institute of Architects is an excellent place to become acquainted with not only classmates and instructors, but with the profession itself, and the men who are now actively practicing architecture.

Since the basic function of architecture is to deal with the living problems of human beings, the role of the architect combines those of the psychologist, the philosopher, the technician, the administrator and the artist, in addition to the more obvious duties of the profession.

One entering the profession today must see his work in relation to the community, and to do this, he must coordinate the many and varied phases of the profession through his own ability to perceive and think through a problem. Not only must he be able to perceive what is needed, but he should be able to evaluate his observations and balance the resulting requirements so as to gain the most satisfactory result. He must play the part of a well-qualified judge, and he must be intellectually honest if he is to fulfill his professional obligation.

The Howard Engineer

Pictured above are members of the Howard Engineer staff. The Howard Engineer begins its nineteenth year as a student publication by and for the School of Engineering and Architecture, Howard University, Washington, D.C. It has grown from a paper called "The Slipstick", first published during the school year 1947-1948. "The Slipstick" was once almost unknown, lacking national advertising, and was completely supported by the Student Council. In 1952 "The Slipstick Paper" became standard size for an engineering college magazine. In the same year "The Engineering College Magazines Associated" suggested that the "Slipstick Magazine" change its name because Clemson College had the same name. In the following school year "The Howard Slipstick" was changed to "The Howard Engineer" which is presently a publication that is national in scope.

The purpose of the magazine is to keep the students informed as to the activities within the school, new developments in industry, and to represent the school at other engineering and architectural colleges throughout the country. Other materials that will be and have been featured in our magazine have dealt with: Art, Music, Literature, Poetry, Drama, etc. The purpose, therefore, is to broaden the scope of the readers of "The Howard Engineer". It is the policy of "The Howard Engineer" to report on the activities of the various students' organizations and to communicate with them to announce any events that they might be holding in advance so that students will be aware of them. The staff has prepared articles on the latest developments in the different engineering and architectural fields. The material for these articles is gathered from our correspondence with many of the top engineering and architectural companies in the country.

OF

The College Of Dentistry

The College of Dentistry was organized as an integral part of Howard University in October 1881, and thus became the seventeenth dental school founded in the United States. Dr. James E. Hodgkins was appointed "Lecturer on Practical Dentistry" ... and "six students enrolled for the course". Additional appointments of dentists were made to the faculty in 1883, and in October of that year a systematic course and program in dentistry was begun. One of the two beginning students graduated with the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery in 1885. Since that time Howard University has conferred more than 1800 degrees in Dentistry.

The modern building containing the Dental School, complete in every detail, was begun in October 1951, completed in December 1954 and occupied in January 1955. There are three floors above the ground and one below.

There are eight clinical divisions in the college make up: Operative Dentistry, Oral Dentistry, Oral Hygiene, Oral Surgery, Orthodontics, Pedodontics, Prosthodontics, and Roentgenology. Each clinic is divided into private cubicles so that all patients in all areas receive individual independent consideration, thus creating a personal, professional atmosphere of doctor patient relationship.

The University has developed a highly competent faculty and maintain a working relationship with the College of Medicine.

DENTAL HYGIENE

The course for Dental Hygienists was established in the College of Dentistry in 1934, graduating the first class in 1935. In 1947 it was extended to a two-year course of study leading to the Certificate in Oral Hygiene. The course is approved by the Council on Dental Education of the American Dental Association. Graduates are eligible to be licensed in all states and the District of Columbia through state board examinations. Dental Hygienists are employed under the supervision of a dentist in private dental offices, public schools, hospitals, civil service, armed forces, and industrial organizations to provide dental health instruction and preventive services.

OF LIBERAL ARTS

College of Liberal Arts

President Andrew Johnson in 1867 signed a charter which incorporated in the District of Columbia "a university for the education of youth in the liberal arts and sciences." The Collegiate Department, the first designation for what is now the College of Liberal Arts, opened on September 21, 1867, with an academic program which included courses in English, Greek, Latin, French, German, Spanish, mathematics, philosophy, and botany. By 1934 the College of Liberal Arts was organized essentially as it is today.

Accredited by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, the College offers curricula in 24 departments leading to the Bachelor of Science or Bachelor of Arts degree. Through its several objectives, the College seeks to develop in its students traits which characterize a liberally educated person. The aims and purposes of the College are to enable the student to acquire a broad general knowledge in the natural sciences, social sciences, and the humanities as a foundation for understanding the world in which he lives. It serves to strengthen and refine the student's power of communication, reasoning and judgment.

The College of Liberal Arts is dedicated to the idea that the dissemination of knowledge and the transmitting of knowledge into wisdom are the primary concerns of a liberal education. With these goals in mind, the College seeks to assist each student in developing a love of learning for its own sake and a reliance upon learning and the intellectual process in confronting the goals and problems of his personal life and his duties as a responsible citizen. It seeks to arouse in each student intellectual integrity, the ability to decide wisely with respect to ends and means, a spirit of inquiry and creativity, and a capacity for free intellectual adventure.

A special Honors Program, including extensive research projects in the students' major field of concentration, is available as early as the freshman year for students capable of work of high quality. The College maintains chapters of seventeen national honor societies, including Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Fall Mourned By Nation

The Howard University community was shocked and saddened by news of the death of Professor Bernard B. Fall who died while accompanying a U. S. Marine Corps combat unit on patrol in Viet Nam. Considered by many to be America's foremost authority on Viet Nam, Dr. Fall had been on sabbatical leave from his position as professor of government since September. According to U. S. Department of Defense sources in Saigon, Professor Fall was killed when he or a Marine sergeant whom he was accompanying tripped a booby trap while patrolling an area 12 miles northwest of the northern city of Hue. Dr. Fall was moving forward with the patrol in an attempt to take photographs.

A French citizen who was born in Vienna, Dr. Fall had been a member of the college of Liberal Arts faculty since 1957. In March of last year, Long Island University conferred the George Polk Memorial Award upon Dr. Fall "for his in-depth published commentaries on the Vietnamese war, its likely causes and possible consequences." Last year he was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship for a year's study of the Viet Cong. This was his mission when he was killed.

The School of Law

Organized in 1868, the School of Law has one of the most outstanding programs of constitutional law in the country. This program has grown with the demand for legal aid in all areas of human rights. The instructors, both past and present, have become renowned for their contributions in this field. The school provides intensive training in the history, philosophy, and principles of Anglo-American law and institutions. The Law School students develop the skills and attributes essential to successful pursuit of a legal career. Much procedure and advocacy experience is available to them through experience in the Moot Court. A legal aid office is available for area residents who are financially unable to obtain private legal advice. Included in the curriculum of the Law School is the oldest and most fully developed course in Civil Rights in any American law school.

The Graduate School

As early as the year 1870, provisions were made by the Trustees of the University for persons to receive the degree, Master of Arts, "by recommendation, of the faculty, upon the completion of one year of advanced study at the University and the presentation of a satisfactory thesis." It was further provided that graduates of the College, of three years' standing, who had been engaged meanwhile in professional, literary or scientific studies could receive the degree upon recommendation of the faculty.

In 1819 when graduate work at Howard was inaugurated on its present basis, only six teachers were engaged in giving graduate courses in two departments. Today, some 214 teachers are offering graduate courses in twenty-seven divisions. The purposes of the graduate school are to provide opportunities to qualified students to pursue programs of study and research leading to the advanced degrees of Master of Arts, Master of Science, and Doctor of Philosophy; to meet the special needs of those students who are not candidates for a special degree, but who desire further advanced work in certain fields of study; and in general, to stimulate and encourage research and scholarly activity on the part of students and faculty in the arts and sciences.

One of the most recent programs in the Education department is that which leads to the Master of Arts Degree in Student Personnel Administration. This year, the first four students to complete this two year program will be graduated.

Not only does the program offer the students opportunity to become fully acquainted with the history, philosophy, objectives, functions and administration of college student personnel work, but it also provides opportunities for students to evaluate the personnel services there through the first hand experience of working in each of them. Those students working in Admissions actually go on recruitment trips in addition to becoming involved in the actual administering of an admissions office. Much individual guidance is available to the students enrolled in this rapidly growing program.

The Bison football squad kicked their 1966 season off to a tremendous start when they soundly trounced a taller, heavier St. Paul's team 17-0. Outsized almost man for man, the Bison offense and defense exerted an effort which paid off in victory. Once again proving that the bigger they come the harder they fall, the Howard Eleven pulled the upset of the season by whipping Virginia State by a score of 12-8. For the second week the Bisons faced a larger, heavier team and emerged victorious. The Howard Gridmen suffered their first setback of the season when they tangled with Delaware State. The Bisons, hindered by injuries and other problems, battled gamely against the heavier team until they were overwhelmed 26-16 in the last quarter. The following week, although the Bisons played a superior passing game and were formidable on the ground, they weren't able to hold back the West Virginia State team and lost 21-13. However at the Centennial Homecoming game against Fisk University, the Gridmen broke their losing streak won with a score of 7-6 before a crowd of over 9,000 fans and countless television viewers. The team dropped its third game in a hard fought Hampton battle in which the opposition came from behind in the last half to defeat Howard 32-19. The tangle with Livingston was a shut-out for the Bisons, 13-0, who showed fine defensive but unproductive offensive action. The Bisons ended their 1966 season with a 27-6 victory over winless and, until the Howard game scoreless, Morehouse College.

The Athlete — Main Concern Of S.N.A.P

Ewart Brown, chairman of S.N.A.P., speaks to the student body about the purposes of S.N.A.P.

Under the auspices of the Howard University Student Assembly, a committee was formed at the beginning of the fall semester with the purpose of presenting to the administration a proposal, the enactment of which would serve as a means of improving the athletic program of the university.

The committee contacted 156 universities and colleges asking for diversified information surrounding their athletic programs and policies. This data was used as a means of constructing comparative charts which would be of assistance in formulating the proposal. Alumni associations were contacted, also, for suggestions and ideas.

S.N.A.P. held a mass rally to inform the students of the committee's work and intentions and sponsored a university-wide referendum to decide whether the student body supported the proposal. The referendum drew a record number of voters, over 4,000.

The proposal was for the establishment of a system in the athletic policy of the university which would provide increased aid for the student athlete. Athletic talent and academic status would be the guidelines for such assistance, which would possibly consist of tuition, fees, rent, and food waivers.

Goodman Says SNAP of Athletic Aid Plans

Cites Failure of Students Movements Here Since 1926

Mr. Ernest Goodman, director of Public Relations at Howard, has predicted the failure of a student movement seeking the adoption of a progressive athletic policy by the University.

In an article which appeared in Friday's edition of the Washington Afro-American, Mr. Goodman was quoted as saying that SNAP, or Students Negotiating For Athletic Progress, is indeed sad if it's simply a name employees of the press what true and other their superiors Goodman is ent

SNAP, Students Negotiating For Athletic Progress, a group to be introduced to the campus today, advocates a program in the University's athletic policy "which would provide increased aid for the student-athlete, will attract the student-athlete to the university, and will aid this person, using academic status and athletic talent as the criteria for such assistance."

The rally on main campus today at 1:00 will be to inform students of the committee's work and intentions, and will include speakers Ewart Brown, SNAP Chairman; Charles Franklin, Student Assembly president; Harold Orr, vice president of the Varsity H Club; Howard cheerleaders and the Fine Arts Quartet.

A university-wide referendum to decide whether the student body supports the proposal will be taken Monday, December 12. The voting will take place with approximately 35 voting stations located in key positions on campus.

SNAP was formed in September under the auspices of the Student Assembly with the ultimate goal of having a workable student-athletic aid program effective beginning September of 1967.

Letters were sent to 156 universities asking for information on athletic aid programs and policies. Letters were also sent to alumni requesting ideas and suggestions.

Ernest Goodman, Public Relations Director of Howard University, who was also interviewed in a story about SNAP in the AFRO-American, said in an interview Wednesday that since more study has been given the situation by SNAP, their proposal will probably receive more consideration from the faculty and administration.

"However," he added, "more consideration does not imply any change in policy and practice."

Mr. Goodman, who was himself a recipient of athletic aid, is in favor of an athletic aid program that is based entirely on need.

Is S.N.A.P. Doomed?

On Friday, November 26, the Washington Afro-American carried a front page story on the pre-natal death of a movement. In article which constituted the first major public announcement of the aims and purposes of S.N.A.P., the Students Negotiating for Athletic Progress, there appeared solemn pronouncements of doom and disaster from a high administration official.

Mr. "Ernest (Sonny) Goodman", director of public information at Howard was loosely quoted as saying S.N.A.P. will inevitably meet the same fate "other student movements" since 1926 who have attempted to change administration policy. Unfortunately, Mr. Goodman leaves us hanging as to reason

SNAP Proposal, Book Exchange Are Projects Of HUSA

The University-Wide Student Assembly has been active in many areas lately, including the recent Student Negotiating For Athletic Progress (SNAP) proposal for athletic aid, and the Book Exchange Project which will be operative for this coming semester.

SNAP's referendum Monday resulted in 4,223 votes for the adjenda of the next Board of Trustees meeting on January 4.

Brown pointed out that schools that had athletic aid programs received more alumni contributions to the programs because the alumni could see the "fruits of labor" in terms of fine athletes and good teams.

Faculty Guide SNAP Proposal

S.N.A.P. took another giant stride toward its goal last week with the formation of a faculty advisory committee to advise and direct the formalization of S.N.A.P.'s athletic aid proposal.

Suggested members of the committee include Dean Blackburn, Dean Hurst, Secretary Stanton, Dr. Barnes of the Athletic Department, Dr. Daughy, Dr. Barber, Mr. Clark of the Treasurers Office, Mr. Benny J. Pugh, Director of students Activities, and Mr. Wendell Roy of the office of Alumni Affairs. The committee will serve to aid S.N.A.P. leaders in preparing the final draft of their proposal for the Board of Trustees.

The freshman soccer squad completed a very successful season, out playing all their opponents in their five game season and scoring a total of twenty-nine goals. This success was due largely to the excellent condition of the players and the expert advice of Coach Chambers.

All the players were outstanding in precision, team-work and sportsmanship, but special mention should be made of Tyrone Walker who netted the most goals of the season, Roland Baptiste who was instrumental in many of the decisive plays, Norman McDonald who played a key role as link-man and also of goal keeper Gregory Dash and defense men Kenneth Kerr, Basil Bryan and Captain Roland Bullen who all excelled in the defense.

It is hoped that these players will show the same determination and skill in the coming years as members of the varsity soccer squad.

Although the 1966-67 Bison soccer team can boast of a winning season, the 6-4 record represents the most losses in one season in the soccer history of Howard.

When first year coach, Sydney Hall, was asked about his team's performance, he said that even though they had had a rather decent season, drastic changes will have to take place in order to produce a championship team. He added that poor participation and class conflicts have been major problems of the soccer team.

Taking all factors into consideration, however, the soccer team had a fairly good season.

The Bisons completed their regular schedule with little or no trouble this year. The team won 19 games and lost 5. The Bisons entered the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Basketball Championships rated as the number three team, behind Winston-Salem and Norfolk State. In the quarter-finals the Bisons defeated Virginia Union. The Bisons finally came in the championships with the second place victory for the Howard student body. The team received numerous awards for their efforts during the tournament and during the playing season. Three players from the team were selected for the CIAA Tournament Team. They were Aaron Shingler, Edward Taylor, and Frank Williams. The Bisons won the Team Decorum award, and the coach, Marshall T. Emery was selected as the coach of the year.

The Howard University Sharks ended one of the most successful seasons ever as they crowned their regular season with a record of 11-2-1 with a runaway victory in the 20th CIAA Swimming and Diving Championships, their sixth in succession. All in all, it was a satisfying year for coach Pendleton's charges as the Sharks swamped all CIAA competition and lost just two decisions in inter-conference competition. The season began auspiciously on Dec. 1 as Millersville invaded Howard. The first event, the 400 yd. Medley Relay, saw the Sharks establish a winning pattern as they came from behind to upset Millersville by two seconds. From that point on there was no stopping Howard as they rolled on to an easy 69-35 victory. One week later the Sharks went to North Carolina to take on J. C. Smith in Charlotte and A&T in Greensboro. The Sharks proceeded to break six pool records enroute to an 84-20. And a similar total of pool records in Greensboro to the tune of 86-18. Returning home the Sharks resumed their ravaging of the opposition as Gallaudet fell 23-31, Howard's fourth victim in as many outings. The new year dawned with the hope of an undefeated season, and the local boys made it five in a row over hapless Morgan State, 87-17, but three weeks later burst the bubble. Bloomsburg State, one of the best small college teams in the East, fought the Sharks to a 52-52 standing after coming from behind with their backs to the wall. Disappointed over the outcome the Sharks shrugged off the memory and proceeded to beat the ever dangerous Lycoming 62-42. Then on to more victories as the Sharks beat Hampton 72-32, Stoney Brook College 74-30, Monmouth 54-50, and returned to Morgan's pool to beat them by 75-28. The Catholic University team had no luck either as the Sharks scored 58-45 on them. Following this came Cheyney State who lost to the Sharks 88-14. Georgetown was the last of the season and the Sharks came through again with a 68-36 win. The Sharks in the Championships had the captain Lyn Lawson set the record for the 1650 yd. Freestyle and was selected as Outstanding Swimmer of the Year. Coach Pendleton can be proud of his championship team.

This year's cross-country team, which was composed primarily of first year men, posted its first winning season in the last three years. Through efficient and arduous efforts Coach Milner Johnson, former Michigan State high jumper, managed to harden his youthful corps of sophomores into seasoned veterans that formed the sparkling nucleus of a very well-balanced track squad.

Under the guidance of Coaches Johnson and Bell the roadrunners streaked to a 4-2 season record. The team was able to beat some of the top cross-country teams on the east coast. Coach Eddie Bell, former Tennessee A&I sprinter, attributes the team's success to their hard work and high spirit. The team was led by its star, Captain Mike Wilson.

Today, 100 years after the founding, Howard University graduates may be found among the leaders in government, business, education, the health professions, and civic activity throughout the United States and in many foreign countries. On the national level, Howard graduates hold such positions as U. S. Senator, U. S. Solicitor General, ambassador, memberships on U. S. commissions and regulatory bodies, and higher echelon posts with governmental departments and agencies. At least five are college presidents; several serve as judges and members of state legislatures; dozens have held offices in professional societies; others hold key positions in business and industry; and scores are serving as educational administrators and supervisors of social welfare agencies.

More than one half of the nation's Negro physicians, surgeons and dentists are graduates of Howard. The same is true of about 25 percent of the Negro lawyers. Of the Negro engineers and architects, it is estimated that more than 50 percent have studied at Howard. In addition, untold hundreds of educators, religious leaders, pharmacists, physical and social scientists, and leaders in the arts and humanities are Howard graduates.

But Howard's role has not been restricted to preparing leaders for the Negro community or for America alone. The first students to enroll at Howard in May, 1867, were white, as are an appreciable number of its students today. Among its white graduates have been a former U. S. Congressman, the founder of a local law school, the first woman physician in the District of Columbia, an associate director of the Peace Corps, and the former Commissioner of Public Assistance for the State of Pennsylvania.

Abroad, more than 50 percent of the physicians in the West Indies are Howard graduates. In the newly independent nations of Africa alumni of Howard are to be found at every echelon of government and throughout the professions. In the Middle East, India, and Iran in particular, Howard men and women hold positions of responsibility at every level of the economy.

Space limitations preclude the mention of all Howard alumni who have made significant contributions to the life and economy of our nation, and these are but a few of the 27,000 Howard graduates who are making notable contributions to society.

"... My years at Howard remain vividly in my mind for so many reasons: for the enduring friendships it was my privilege to make, for the kindling of an intellectual curiosity about many subjects and problems, for the opportunity it gave me to come in contact with so splendid a faculty, and for the further opportunity it has given me to remain, long after graduation, gratefully a member of the Howard community. During the course of my public life, I am called upon to visit many different colleges and universities throughout the land. Probably I am prejudiced, but I have yet to find an institution that is quite as wonderful and unique as my Alma Mater. May she continue to prosper! "The university plays many roles in the lives of its members—students, faculty, and administration. To me, its most important role is to prepare one for the necessary focusing and refocusing on life and society. Ever changing conditions demand that the educated man be able to adapt his skills, knowledge and temperament to meet the challenge of the moment. Yet, these same conditions demand an appreciation for the long-range implications of his acts.

Because Howard is an institutional symbol of our Nation's developmental change, it provided for many of us, three decades ago, insights valuable in today's world. Hopefully, those coming in later years have benefited similarly; and those in the future will receive even greater benefits from a university self-consciously pursuing its new roles in an unpredictable future."

PATRICIA R. HARRIS

"As an alumna, faculty member, and former Associate Dean of Students of Howard University, my ties to the University are manifold and deep. Each relationship to Howard has made it abundantly clear to me that our institution has special qualities whose value is yet to be fully comprehended. We who were students remember that talent, not family, wealth, or color, determined one's status among one's peers and with one's teachers. The range of appreciated talent was wide, including intelligence, apparent beauty (male and female), wit, and all the other abilities which distinguish one man from another. But none could insure his place in advance; only talent and energy prescribed the individual's place at Howard. The University was a microcosm of the realities of democracy. Each had an opportunity to try for the reward he wanted, and many in fact received the benefits they sought.

Success at Howard University as a student, while not a guarantee, has been at least a harbinger of one's ability to succeed elsewhere, as witness the United States Senate, the State Department and other governmental agencies, as well as other aspects of public life where Howard alumni are so often in the vanguard. The promise of the future lies in the product of our first one hundred years, Howard students, past and present."

I shall always be grateful for the privilege of attending Howard and having contact with its great teachers and excellent students. My own major Professor, Abram L. Harris, did much to inspire his classes in economics. Those of us who were in his classes will always remember him and the other distinguished faculty members.

"I am sure that the present Howard University faculty and student body will set even higher standards of excellence and achievement."

STUDENT LIFE

Robert C. Robinson

February 7, 1946—March 5, 1966

"To live in the hearts of those we leave behind is not to die."

Office of Student Life

That there is more to getting an education than attending classes, taking examinations, and worrying about grades is witnessed daily by the Student Life staff. The office of student life is constantly buzzing which results in the development of strong and responsible student leaders who remain responsible leaders after leaving Howard. The office of student life coordinates all student activities concerned with the university. The University Center, The Student Assembly, The Liberal Arts Student Council, The Hilltop, Campus Pals, Cheerleaders, Class Organizations, Fraternities, Sororities, and Majorettes are its direct responsibilities. The Office of Student Life coordinates plans for Homecoming, our biggest activity of the year, and also fosters the Christmas Week activities. It assists student organizations in the proper planning, scheduling and evaluating of their programs and activities. This office also approves of Howard's representatives in Who's Who Among Students In American Universities and Colleges. One of the largest areas that fall under the office is the supervision of campus elections. It is not unusual to find the student life staff working 15 to 20 hours a day, helping students effectively carry out their programs, listening to problems, or simply being sounding boards. But every kind of student, every personality finds a place of warmth, feels that he is welcome in the student center ... and he keeps coming back.

FRESHMAN WEEK

Freshmen Start Year Off With A Relaxing Week

The frantic pace of Freshman Week, filled with picnics, parties, receptions, and tests introduces the new student to the peaceful life of the Howard University student. Through all this turmoil freshmen somehow find time to make new friends, get settled down, and find out what being a college student is all about. Soon they will know the pleasure of going to classes every day, the pleasure of endless homework, term papers and book reports. Soon they will realize the excitement of anticipated holidays.

But now they are new, a little wary, a bit expectant of what there is to come. Now they peer into the future with all their hopes and dreams. Thus they will learn and soon they will know what it is to be at Howard.

Some male students are casually eating at Freshman Week picnic.

Students wait to enter the George Washington for the annual boat ride.

The Campus Pal Is The Best Person To Know

If you're a freshman or a transfer student, there is no one better to know than a Campus Pal. A Campus Pal is always ready to lend that helping hand. When you get separated from your baggage, a Campus Pal will run all over town with you until you find it. When you can't quite figure out what the class schedule book is all about, a Campus Pal will be there to tell you. When you've got to make that extra trip downtown, and aren't allowed to go alone, a Campus Pal will be ever-ready.

When you're so far away from home, and all you want is someone to talk to, just find a Campus Pal, the student with the heart of gold and an out-stretched hand.

Albert Council shares a joke with a freshman.

Freshman like to travel in numbers: for protection against upper classmen?

As a means of introducing their candidate to the student body, supporters of each candidate staged 10 minute demonstrations between 1:00 and 1:40 p.m. for four days. Climaxing each demonstration of songs and skits was the presentation of the candidate. Finally, after all vigorous campaigning had subsided, students voted for Howard University's 1966-67 Centennial Homecoming Queen!

The theme of "Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow" was carried through all of the Homecoming activities. "The Path of Her Majesty," the Centennial Coronation, brought back queens from years gone by, present queens from the various schools, colleges, and organizations, last year's queen, Miss Charlotte Fleming, and the five candidates for Centennial Queen. The Master of Ceremony and the ushers in formal attire added the necessary pomp and elegance to the ceremony. The cascading fountain with many-hued lights playing upon each droplet of water and the green plants surrounding it added a hint of the beauty of nature to complement the beauty of the queens.

The lights grew dim. All eyes turned towards the stage. The shimmering fountain upon it began to revolve, and on the reverse side was the throne and the natural beauty of Miss Robin Gregory, Howard University's 1966-67 Centennial Homecoming Queen. Miss Gregory, a native of Washington, D.C., is a major in art education and is on the Dean's List. Her activities include the Art Club, the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party, the Non-Violent Action Committee, and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

Laughter, tears, excitement and surprises were all an integral part of "The Time Tunnel," the homecoming variety show held in Cramton Auditorium on October 20, 1966. Alumni and guest artists, as well as students, participated.

The capacity crowd applauded the Counselors, a barber shop quartet, and the Six Cleats, of the Bison football team, as they sang memorable tunes from yesterday. The prize-winning skit given by Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., depicted the fads and ideas of today; and the Falcons presented the talent which tomorrow may launch them into stardom. First prize trophy in the show went to Spearman and Lee, a sound effects team with Spearman providing the sounds and Lee providing the accompanying antics. Second prize was captured by a flute and piano duet presented by Sherry and Leon. Debbie and Roy, a great singing combination, carried through the vogue of duets as winners by taking the third place trophy.

The audience went wild as popular recording artists J. J. Jackson and the Olympics made surprise appearances to highlight the show.

The Andrew D. Turner Memorial Drill Team shows its unique form.

The ingenuity of the members of Howard's student organizations was excellently displayed and put to work as floats were assembled for the parade of parades. Bands, majorettes, and marching corps from high schools in the District, as well as groups from Howard, participated in the parade.

Each of the floats constructed by the various student organizations depicted the general homecoming theme of "Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow." Prizes were awarded during the half-time activities at the football game with Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc., Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc., and the Air Force ROTC winning first, second, and third prizes, respectively for their floats. The prize for best representation of the homecoming theme went to the Army ROTC. And the award for the best all around organization in the float was received by Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc.

Decorated cars, representing classes, clubs, or schools and graced by handsome Howard co-eds added to the color and the length of the parade.

Bisons Vs Bulldogs

Wayne Davis brings down another Fisk runner for no gain.

Preston Blackwell, Howard's breakaway threat, is stymied by a Fisk tackle.

The centennial homecoming game against Fisk University provided a crowd of over 9,000 fans and countless other television viewers with all the excitement and thrills that a football game should. For the first time in Howard's history, and quite appropriately at this time, the game was televised on Channel 9, so that area residents had the opportunity to see the Howard Bisons beat the Fisk Bulldogs, 7-6.

The traditional pre-game activities were as interesting as the game itself. Several Schools sent bands and marching corps to perform. Howard's own prize-winning competition drill teams, the George R. Welch Drill Team of the Army ROTC and the Andrew D. Turner Drill Team of the Air Force ROTC gave the cheering fans a good example of the precision marching which has distinguished them as best in competitions across the nation.

During the half-time program the centennial homecoming queen and the queen from Fisk were presented. Our queen, Miss Robin Gregory presented the annually given award to the oldest returning alumnus. Half-time activities are never complete without the performance of the Howard marching band, and as was fitting for the centennial celebration, the band presented its peak performance of the season.

A Sound . . .
A Song . . .
A Memory . . .

Arousing the audience with a "down home" number, Jimmy Smith swings into "Got My Mo-Jo Working."

This year's concert, "A Sound, A Song, A Memory," was successful in bringing two capacity crowds to Cramton Auditorium, and in just as unique a manner, featured two guest artists, Dick Gregory, comedian, and Jimmy Smith, jazz musician. Both men gave excellent performances and received loud ovations from the audiences.

With warmth and frankness, Gregory made his witty yet significant comments on America's economic, social, and political situation. He did not fail to apply his wit to the situation and problems of the Negro in the United States, a field in which he is noted for his special interest and hard work. Of the many recent riots he said, "I'm sure glad things have calmed down in my hometown, Chicago, Vietnam. Two cops in Chicago are suing me for kicking and biting them while they were trying to throw me in front of a train." They are charging him with "assault and bitery."

After the applause had subsided and the master of ceremonies had thanked Mr. Gregory, the Jimmy Smith Trio took the stage and gave an equally arousing performance. A man recognized as one of the leaders of jazz improvisation, Smith's trio is composed of Nathan Page on guitar, Billy Hart on drums, and himself on organ. They swung into a recording from one of his earliest albums highlighted by a rousing drum solo by Mr. Hart. Throughout their performance, the audience could see the necessary cooperation between the members of the group which has helped make it so popular. Mr. Smith, who said he had always wanted to play at Howard, spoke of the audience as "very appreciative."

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

The Many Problems Of University Living Are Debated

The Student Leadership Conference is a beneficial annual event held one weekend early in the fall. Its purpose is to allow free expression of representative students, faculty members, and administrators on issues of common concern.

This year, the Conference was an official part of the Centennial celebration. Accordingly, the participants attempted a critical review of Howard University's progress its first hundred years and proposed resolutions for positive and necessary change throughout the second century. The conducive atmosphere of the Conference site allowed the opportunity for all in attendance to become acquainted on an informal basis. Conference productivity became, then, much more realistic.

Students engage in group discussion activity.

Student Leaders Fire Questions To Administrators During Hot Seat Session

Faculty and administrators are placed on "Hot Seat" to answer students' questions

Faculty and administrators participate in the discussion groups with the students

One of the most popular programs on the weekend schedule is the "Hot Seat." Leading administrators, including the President of our University, are invited to participate in this culminating question and answer period. Students address pertinent queries about University policy and procedures to appropriate panel members. Thus, many misunderstandings are clarified and the exchange of ideas is healthy for all.

This year, the guests included the Administrative Deans, Academic Deans, and other persons whose positions relate them directly to student life.

The discussion groups hold an air of seriousness for administrator Dean Calhoun and faculty member Dr. Edwards.

Santa is still the number one attraction during the Christmas season.

Christmas Week

The Christmas Week celebration gives the student body a chance to forget some of the day-to-day problems they must face, and join in the spirit of the Christmas season. Over the years it has become an annual and important affair in Howard University student life. During this week the campus takes on a festive, holiday atmosphere.

In keeping with the Centennial Celebration, this year's theme was "THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS RINGS OUT 100 YEARS."

The week began with the lighting of the University Christmas Tree, and the "Deck the Halls" party, which gave the Student Center a yuletide air.

Events included in this year's program were the Children's Party, Movie, President's Reception, Dance, Meditation Hour and Mid-day Activities. The most significant event during the week, was the Christmas Concert, given by the Howard University Choir and the Yale University Glee Club.

"We Wish You A Merry Christmas" sang the happy (?) carolers.

The Marching Band

Ready to enter the field, the members of the band show seriousness for their work.

The swinging trombones keep up with the high-stepping majorettes.

The Howard University Marching Band is a very important part of university life, and especially of the football season. This versatile organization is made up of musicians, majorettes and flag twirlers, and, of course, the ever-popular drum major. This year's band performed at all football games, both home and away. Under the direction of Mr. Penn, the band practices long and hard to prepare and perfect their half-time shows. Consisting of members from all schools and colleges, the band contains some of the best musicians that Howard has to offer. After they leave the field, their spirited playing can be heard in the stands; "rockin' their souls" rooting Howard on to victory.

Playing the tuba and marching at the same time takes a lot of energy, and desire.

The Cheerleaders Add Enthusiasm And Spirit To All Howard Sports

Dana and Derrell watch the game hopefully

The Howard University Cheerleaders hold as their primary purpose the active support of Howard's athletic teams. They act as mediators between the teams and the University community; bolster the spirit of the spectators and channel the spirit into cheers so that the teams will know of the school's support. The members of the squad function socially with the members of the teams and develop friendships which will help eliminate some of the impersonality involved in relationships between the teams and the rest of the University community. This year, for the first time, a Junior Varsity Squad was formed for the purpose of supporting teams which had previously been overlooked, and to cheer for the Junior Varsity Basketball Squad. These girls are led by Varsity Captain, Pat Parsons. Membership in both squads is open to any University woman with proper academic average and who excels in the try-outs. The Varsity squad contains twelve members and the Junior Varsity squad six.

R.O.T.C.

The George F. Welch Memorial Drill Team gallantly onward

Howard University has two branches of the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) on its campus. They are the Army ROTC and the Air Force ROTC. The purpose of the ROTC program is to train male students for positions of leadership in the Armed Forces. The ROTC program is divided into two phases. Basic training is compulsory at Howard. All male students are required to take two years of ROTC training if they are citizens of the United States, between the ages of 14 and 23 years and are not physically disabled, not transfer students with two or more years left to graduate, and are not veterans of the military services. Basic cadets receive weekly instruction in the basic military sciences and drill once a week. Advanced ROTC is offered to those cadets who have completed the basic courses and qualify for advanced training. Completion of either branch of Advanced ROTC will qualify the student for a commission as a second lieutenant in that particular branch of the service. There are numerous extra-curricular organizations affiliated with the military here on campus. There are two honor societies, three coed auxiliary units and other special units. Cadets from both Army and Air Force combine to form the Joint Forces Band. At present, Howard is the regional headquarters of the ROTC Band Association. The band also performed at the World's Fair. Each branch of the ROTC has a military police unit which maintains decorum on drill days. There are two memorial drill teams on campus. They are the George F. Welch Memorial Honor Guard attached with the Army and the Andrew D. Turner Memorial Drill Team connected with the Air Force.

Welcome Home Nabrit

"Welcome Home" lights brightened the campus, buildings were made spanking clean and people came from far and near to welcome James M. Nabrit, Jr., President of Howard University back home.

Dr. Nabrit received a year's leave from the position as President of Howard University on September 28, 1965. During this time, he served as Deputy Permanent Representative to the United Nations. The formal leave terminated January 15th and January 16th, Dr. Nabrit resumed his formal position.

The entire university community including faculty, students, maintenance, and cafeteria workers were invited to attend the reception that welcomed the president home.

Exchange Programs

Howard University conducts a number of exchange programs which are not only educational in themselves but they also help to foster good inter-university relations as well as good international relations.

The SPRING EXCHANGE is sponsored by the Student Councils of the various colleges and it takes place during the spring vacation. Upperclassmen in good academic standing, with an active interest in campus affairs are sent to schools throughout the nation. Jackie Brice was chairman and among the students who went to schools such as Antioch, Duke, Sarah Lawrence, Brandeis, Williams and Swarthmore were Beverly Stewart, William Wallace, Ben Waxler, and Roseann Green. These students stay for one week while a group of students from the visited colleges attend Howard. This year's spring exchange students to Howard witnessed our Charter Day exercises at which the United States President was a guest.

The SEMESTER EXCHANGE program involves an exchange of students from various colleges and universities with those from Howard for an entire semester. To qualify for this program, students must be upperclassmen with a 3.0 academic average. Whittier College in California and Sarah Lawrence are the two most popular colleges chosen by Howard students.

The EXPERIMENT IN INTERNATIONAL LIVING program offers any student interested in people of different cultures the opportunity to live with a family in a foreign country of his choice during the summer months. The requirements for going depend upon the country to which you travel. There are different language, age, and school requirements for each country. Among the students who visited more than ten different countries last summer were Merle Nichols, Charlotte Thomas, Barbara Penn, Suzette Garland, and Audrey Brodie.

Hilltop

The university-wide newspaper, the HILLTOP, entered its forty-ninth year of publication this year. It aims to air news of interest to the entire University community as well as thought-provoking and diversified material on its opinion pages, offering ample space for expressions from readers. While the staff does not deliberately seek out the controversial elements in the news, the editors seem to feel that a newspaper with which the reader always agrees one hundred percent must inevitably be bland, uninteresting and, worst of all, unread. The HILLTOP hopes to convince its critical service, the Associated Collegiate Press, that it merits the coveted All-American newspaper rating, but the paper's rating with the campus community is, in the staffers' view, even more important.

King Speaks On Peace

The Rev. Martin King Jr. delivered the Seventh Annual Gandhi Memorial Lecture. The lecture represents the opening to the Centennial Celebration of the University which is from September 1966 to August 1967. The subject of the speech was Pathways to Peace. The establishment of the Annual Gandhi Memorial Lectures at Howard University was inspired by a grant from the Taraknath Das Foundation of New York City. The general aim of the foundation is to promote human welfare and friendly relations and cooperation among nations. It has attempted to realize these aims by endowing a series of annual lectures at various American universities and by making awards and by making loans to students engaged in studies related to its aims.

Carmichael Comes Home

Stokley prepares speech for Howard audience.

"Can Any Good Come Out of Black Power?"

"You are black brothers and sisters, and you better come on home," warned Stokely Carmichael speaking before a Howard audience during a discussion on "Can Any Good Come Out Of Black Power?"

Carmichael shared the podium with Sterling Tucker, the Director of Washington's Urban League Floyd McKissick, Executive Director of CORE; and Rev. Walter Faunteroy, SCLC Director of Washington, D.C.

Carmichael, an advocate of Black Power, after reiterating his opposition to the war in Vietnam as being fought for American financial gain and against non-whites, turned to the question of Negroes' attempting to imitate white society.

The total discussion was in the form of a debate with Carmichael and Mc Kissick pro and Faunteroy and Tucker con. The discussion was chaired by Ronald Ross and Leonard McCants, both members of the Project Awareness Committee.

Questions were also entertained from the audience by all members of the panel. The discussion was followed the next day by a rally in front of the School of Religion headed also by the Project Awareness Committee.

Flowers Speaks . . .

"The Position Of The Liberal In The South"

Attorney General of Alabama, Richmond Flowers recent opponent of Lurleen Wallace for the Democratic Gubernatorial Candidacy spoke at Howard this fall. Mr. Flowers is the noted Alabama moderate who attests his political problems to a handful of people—primarily Ku Klux Klanmen—and some state political leadership which tolerates them. The attorney general was spurred to run for his party's gubernatorial candidacy when the state courts acquitted the admitted murderer of a white Northern clergyman. Flowers felt compelled to "show his determination for justice" and so he opposed Mrs. George Wallace to give the moderate thinking people a candidate.

Flowers is an excellent speaker who in 1954-58 was chosen as the State Senate's most outstanding young freshman and orator by the press. His oratory has done little good, however, in the state courts of Alabama where the record no Negro legal victories against whites, still stands. Flowers has been trying to get Negro jurors on the petit courts, without success.

This program was presented by the Project Awareness Committee in an endeavor to bring interesting people to the Howard community.

On January 16, 1908, at Howard University, a young woman named Ethel Hedgeman founded the first predominantly Negro sorority, Alpha Kappa Alpha. Incorporated in 1916, Alpha Kappa Alpha has since grown to include over 40,000 members in chapters throughout the United States, in Nassau, the Bahamas, and Monrovia, Liberia.

The purpose of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority is "to cultivate and encourage high scholastic and ethical standards, to promote unity and friendship among college women, to study and help alleviate problems concerning girls and women, to maintain a progressive interest in college life, and to be of service to all mankind".

The activities of Alpha Chapter are many and varied. The chapter objective is to gear its yearly program toward promoting and achieving the national goals and enriching campus and community life through social, cultural and service projects.

At the Boulé in August, 1966, at Los Angeles, California, Alpha Chapter was one of the most well-represented undergraduate chapter with four undergraduate sorors two recent graduates, and two graduate advisers in attendance.

On December 6, 1906, seven men at Cornell University founded Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, thus initiating a new trend in the concept of Negro college social life.

Beta Chapter became Howard University's first fraternity on December 20, 1907. This position of pre-eminence has been maintained by Beta Chapter, both nationally and locally.

Leadership is an intrinsic responsibility felt by Alpha men, as seen in the pioneering footsteps of Jesse Owens, in Olympic competition, the persistent drive of Dr. Martin Luther King, Nobel Peace Prize recipient; and the courageous impetus of Thurgood Marshall, United States Solicitor General. These, only a few of the outstanding achievements of Alpha men, are symbolic of our motto, "First of all, servants of all, we shall transcend all."

Beta Chapter, no exception, has presented the university with diversified program blending the cultural with the academic and social, and has inspired individual members to outstanding contributions on campus.

The men of Beta Chapter worshipped in the Chapel, supported the student government, played intramural games; discussed critical issues, serenaded the Quadrangle, and partied—together.

Brotherhood in the beginning perpetuated until the end.

Delta Sigma Theta Sorority which was founded at Howard University in 1913 is indeed proud to participate in this the Centennial Celebration of our great university. The one hundred years of growth of our institution does not represent a finale, but a preface to even greater achievements. We, the members of Alpha Chapter, Delta Sigma Theta express appreciation, confidence, and hope in the past, present, and future of Howard University.

The founders who laid the foundation for Delta Sigma Theta Sorority envisioned an organization which would serve humanity. A great deal of emphasis was put on education for it is only through education that we can improve our status and in turn aid our fellow man. Through operations such as the Library Service and Teen-Lift, Delta Sigma Theta has endeavored to make the dreams of the founders reality.

Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, an international and interracial organization was organized on January 16, 1920 on the campus of Howard University. The organization of the sorority was encouraged by two members of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity who felt that the campus would profit by the development of such an organization as sisters to the fraternity. As a result, Zeta Phi Beta with Phi Beta Sigma became the first official Greek letter sister and brother organizations. It was the idea of the founders that the sorority would reach college women in all parts of the country who were sorority-minded and desired to follow the ideals of sisterhood, finer womanhood, scholarship, and service, the ideals upon which the sorority was founded. To a large extent, this wish of the founders has been fulfilled in that the organization of chapters of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority has spread to all sections of the United States and parts of Africa with more than two hundred undergraduate and graduate chapters divided into nine regions. In keeping with the ideals upon which the sorority was founded, Zeta Phi Beta Sorority has done much work in the community at large. The sorority sponsors a national juvenile delinquency project which functions throughout the United States. Different aspects have been highlighted through special projects such as Foster Care, Tinker Shops, Vocational Guidance Clinics, and the development of youth groups. Annually, the sorority has a Harvest Tea to raise money for its scholarship fund and sponsors in February Finer Womanhood Week and a Youth Conference. Besides working wholeheartedly in the activities of the sorority at large, Alpha Chapter here at Howard University devotes the entire month of February to volunteer work at the D. C. General Hospital.

The Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc., was founded November 17, 1911. Since those days, the fraternity has grown from one chapter to 270 chapters in the United States, Canada, Germany, and Liberia, Africa. This year the men of Omega Psi Phi disseminated the spirit of Omega to all those with whom they came in contact.

With such a generated atmosphere developing, the "Ques" launched into their program for the year which includes: The Alpha Chapter Cultural Series, National Achievement Week activities; the annual Kappa-Que Basketball game for the benefit of the campus community chest; the annual Playboy Party and the Happy Que Year dances held in the university ballroom. The Ques have also held a series of coordinated social events with the Les Jeunes Hommes, a high school interest group and with the Alpha Zeta National Jewish Fraternity; the Alpha Chapter Anniversary Party on December 15th, commemorating the charter of the first Omega chapter; the National Omega Psi Phi Conclave in Boston; the fabulous Que Mardi Gras; the Talent Hunt held in Rankin Chapel; the Omega Psi Phi Memorial Day services, March 15th; and their Queen's Coronation.

The first chapter of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity was organized at Howard University on January 9, 1914. Since that time the Fraternity has expanded tremendously. There are now more than 190 chapters in the United States and Africa. In keeping with our motto, "Culture for Service and Service to Humanity", the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity carries on a three-fold program of Bigger and Better Business, Education, and Social Action. In addition to this three-fold program, two special observances are held: Carver Day and Founders Day.

In 1911, Indiana University gave birth to the fraternal bond of Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, a group formed with an ultimate goal, purpose, and objective of ACHIEVEMENT. Since that time thousands of men have pledged themselves to this bond, attained their goal, and at the same time aided their fellow man.

At Howard University in 1920, Xi Chapter originated with the same basic ideal and concept, but with an additional view of contributing to the social, cultural, political, and historical significance of Howard University, as well as the individual student. This year Xi Chapter has made great strides in fulfilling its ideals. The noble men of Xi Chapter have always been foremost in the ranks of student leadership whether it be ROTC, student government, student publications, or athletics.

The Fraternity each year sponsors a Kappa Fashion Kruise, Autumn Fling, Christmas party for children, Rush smoker, Flunkers' Fling, Sweetheart Valentine Party, and a Silhouette Ball. In addition the Fraternity sponsors numerous service and social functions and participates in virtually all areas of campus activity.

Xi Chapter continually strives to live up to its motto: "It is easy to be ordinary, but it takes courage to excel, and excel we must".

AWS Celebrates Festive Women's Week

Audrey Brodie, senior, College of Liberal Arts, smilingly accepts the Lucy Diggs Slove Woman of the Year award from Mrs. Dorothy Atkinson, Pres., Howard Women's Club

This year, A.W.S. combined tradition and innovation to make Women's Week a grand success. As in years past, the week began with Open House in Slove Hall and the Quadrangle. There was a program featuring the student participants in the Broader Horizons program who presented talks about the seven different countries they had visited. This program, given in the University Ballroom, revolved around the theme, "A Woman's World".

Innovation was also inherent in the light and sound production at the Women's dinner, the symposium series, and the inclusion of 33 delegates from 18 other universities, from New Jersey to Texas, who were present at most of the activities. The symposium series featured four speakers during two days who told of many job opportunities for women in the federal government. Mrs. Charlotte Moton Hubbard, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, and Barbara J. Watson were two of the featured speakers.

The Women's Dinner, the traditional highlight of Women's Week, for the first time in the 44 year history of Howard Women's Dinners, was held in the Statler Hilton Hotel. A fabulous light and sound production portrayed the history of Howard women during the last century. Who's Who Among Howard Women and the Woman of the year were also presented. This dinner was a delightful climax to a successful week of activity, fun and inspiration.

Dorm Life

A lot of time is spent conversing in the halls.

I wonder how many people she has waiting?

The dorm is convenient for studying?

After many long, hard hours of study, complete exhaustion eventually catches up to everyone.

Was this in the dorm?

Hair-cutting is a booming business, and many of the fellows avail themselves of this service.

Ping-pong is a popular pastime for the fellows, and the recreation rooms are usually crowded.

Open house gave the men a chance to see how the women live; they like to play cards.

It must be nice to be able to lie back on your bed and study.

A day in the life of a dormitory student has many phases. The day begins with classes, to which we are often late. Then comes the afternoon, and classes are over. Soon it is evening and the day is in its final stages. Some people study, others sign in or sign out, and some sit, patiently waiting for the girl or boy of their dreams. The days are long for some, and short for others, and ends for many on the steps of the quadrangle.

Vice-President Humphrey Speaks At Formal Opening

On September 19, 1966 at the formal opening convocation of Howard's centennial celebration, Vice-President of the United States Hubert H. Humphrey delivered the main address and was presented the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

The Vice-President noted and commended Howard for its many accomplishments in the past 100 years and pointed out that Howard has graduated about one-half of the nation's Negro physicians, dentists, lawyers and architects. This, he described as a tribute to Howard but also as proof that many major universities have done too little toward opening their doors to all qualified students. "America has squandered an irreplaceable part of its resources," he said.

For this centennial year Acting President Stanton Wormley said that the year's theme, "The University In A Changing Society," would be considered in three areas. The first, the university and the local community, was the theme of the Formal Opening and would be used throughout the first semester. The second, the university and the national community, would be the theme starting on Charter Day, and the university and the international community would be the theme of commencement.

University President James M. Nabrit, Jr., on leave from the university as Deputy U. S. Representative to the United Nations, cautioned in his closing remarks that the University pause not only to take pride in its past achievements, but primarily to map its future course.

CHARTER DAY — 100 years

March 2, 1967

The centennial charter day celebration was an auspicious occasion in every respect. A centennial conference on "The University in a Changing Society" held February 27th through March 1st initiated the activities. Keynote conference speakers included Dr. Max Lerner, Professor of American Civilization, Brandeis University, Dr. Rene Dubos, Bacteriologist and Professor, The Rockefeller University, Dr. Glen T. Seaborg, Chairman of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, and Dr. Huston Cummings Smith, Professor of Philosophy, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A crowd of 3,100 persons witnessed the actual charter day ceremonies held in the men's gymnasium. Among those witnessing the ceremonies was the daughter of Oliver Otis Howard as well as numerous great-grandchildren of some of the University's other founders.

Highlights of the program included conferring of the Honorary Degree, Doctor of Laws upon Senator Edward W. Brooke, the presentation of Alumni Awards for distinguished post graduate achievement to William B. Bryant in the field of law, Calvin H. Conliffe in the field of Engineering, and to Patricia Iversen in the field of literature.

Other highlights included the unveiling of the portrait of the Honorable Louis C. Cramton, painted by Professor James A. Porter, to be hung in Cramton Auditorium and the presentation of a centennial tribute to Dr. Modesai Wyatt Johnson, past President of Howard.

A surprise guest appearance was made by United States President, Lyndon Baines Johnson in which he promised to "... never turn back" from his commitment to the Negro's civil rights cause.

On the evening of Charter day, a gala dinner was held at the Sheraton Park Hotel at which Marian Anderson and William Warfield were guests. Howard University—100 years of education, leadership, service!

MADNESS

Fun And Games Mean Sprung Madness

Connie and Rick try for 20th place.

Sprung Madness has as its primary objective the raising of funds for our Campus Community Chest effort, but the concomitant yield of a fun-filled week of activities for the entire university community is appealing in its own right.

In addition to the more traditional offerings such as the ugly contests (UBOC, UPOC, UMOC), "Line of Dimes", "Sik-O-Limp-Iks", and Marathon Dance, the committee directed by Alfred Babington-Johnson, introduced a variety show and a carnival midway. This year's concert brought Miss Nina Simone to Cramton Auditorium in a very enjoyable performance.

Student Assembly

The Howard University Student Assembly is the university-wide student government. Its purpose is to provide effective representation and responsible involvement of students in activities of university-wide nature, as well as provide a forum for student ideas and solutions to student problems. The Student Assembly is constructed with a General Assembly and a Student Senate. The General Assembly is a body of representatives from approved student organizations with 25 or more members. The Student Assembly is responsible for all of the university-wide activities that are given on campus and is responsible for choosing the chairmen of these activities. Christmas Week, Sprung Madness, Leadership Conference, Student Publications, Cheerleaders, Homecoming, Campus Pals, Centennial Student Programs.

Religion Student Council

The Religion student council serves three purposes. First, it serves as a clearing-house for business matters which affect the student body. Students are given a chance to participate in this democratic council by expressing themselves on the issues which must be decided upon by the student body. The second purpose of the council is to bring the students and the faculty together to engage in discussions and forums. The scope of the discussion includes such topics as social and political issues and current theological issues. To add to the variety of this occasion the program committee recruits outstanding lecturers, scholars, and students to contribute to the discussions. Third, the council provides a means of recreation for the students and faculty. Programs are planned for relaxation.

One of the most rewarding activities in which a pharmacy student may participate is the Student Council. Since the administration recognizes and encourages the right of the student to exercise initiative in the organization of student activities, the Pharmacy Student Council has become one of the most important student organizations in the University. The council is responsible for presenting the students of the College of Pharmacy with many varied activities such as dances, picnics, and lectures as well as providing the voice of the students to the University as a whole.

Social Work Student Organization

The Student Organization of the School of Social Work provides the opportunity for students to become better acquainted with one another, to participate in group activities, to facilitate closer student-faculty relationships and to assume responsibilities relating to the school and the profession of Social Work. The organization serves as a channel for expression, action and information on matters of interest during their professional training, and it provides them with the opportunity to participate in both professional and non-professional activities of the University as well as the larger community.

Fine Arts Student Council

The Fine Arts Student Council is the official voice of the student body of the College of Fine Arts. The student council is composed of an executive council, consisting of four officers elected at large from the student body and the president and two elected representatives of each class who together represent each of the three departments of art, music, and drama. This year the student council is interested in discovering ways in which the College of Fine Arts can more fully meet the needs of the students and making the voice of the students an effective force in the school administration. The student council contributes to Homecoming Week, Christmas Week, charities, the Combined Federal Campaign, Sprung Madness, and the University Band. Centennial activities include: a Thanksgiving project, sponsoring a Howard-Yale Concert, a Student-Faculty-Alumni Reception, Festival of Fine Arts and Open House, and the Annual Awards Banquet in honor of graduating seniors. The student council also sponsors a Student Loan Fund for short-term loans to students in the College of Fine Arts.

Liberal Arts Student Council

The Liberal Arts Student Council is the official student governing body of the College of Liberal Arts. The Council consists of four generally elected officers and two representatives from each class elected by the individual classes. The Council sponsors a system of eighteen committees whose chairmen are appointed by the Council Appointments Committee. The purposes of the Council are three: (1) to serve as the vehicle for Liberal Arts student opinion; (2) to sponsor or initiate projects which benefit Liberal Arts students, the university as a whole, or the community; and (3) to serve as liaison between students and administration of the College of Liberal Arts. The Council sponsors projects of varying nature and scope. Through the Project Awareness Committee, the Council brings to campus outstanding personalities who discuss important issues of the present. The program "Can Any Good Come Out of Black Power?", which featured Stokely Carmichael, Floyd McKissick, Sterling Tucker, and Walter Fauntroy, was sponsored by Project Awareness.

Through the years the EASC has tried to provide an official and representative organization with powers to legislate, receive student complaints, investigate student problems, and to provide means for addition to control of student affairs. The EASC provides an official voice through which student opinion may be expressed and contributes to the welfare of the school by fostering school spirit and sharing in the total responsibility for the well being of the school. Each year the council schedules a series of activities to complement the university-wide activities. Participation in the Homecoming festivities and Christmas Fetes highlight the fall semester. Academically, the EASC also cooperates with the administration in sponsoring the auspices of the EASC. The spring of each year sparkles with activity during E and A week. Open house, including talented displays of student work and more guest lecturers is climaxed by the Jazz and Technology concert, reception or ball of the guest.

The International Club

The purpose of the International Club is to help integrate foreign students with their campus community and to provide opportunity for cultural exchange between American and foreign students.

Membership in the Club is open to all students attending Howard University. Since the University is noted for its large number of international students, the club serves as a forum for international relations. This miniature "United Nations" is an illuminating experience for all concerned and helps broaden the outlook of its members. The International Club is one of the only organizations which can claim membership from all segments of the University. Since its inception, the leadership of the club has rotated practically around all nations of the world. This Centennial year, the President, Mr. Ignatius Ukpabi is from Nigeria and the vice-president Miss P. Kennedy is from the U. S.

Aside from its regular activities of spotlight on different nations excursions, visits to various embassies, lectures and parties of various forms, its major activity each year is the International Week.

During the month of March, the Office of Foreign Student Services in conjunction with the International Club presents its annual International Week. This week is dedicated to foreign students on campus, is filled with excitement. A prominent speaker is usually presented and the "All Nations Night" program featuring talent from around the world is held. The International Soiree signals the close of the annual event.

Chi Delta Mu

The Chi Delta Mu Fraternity is an organization of physicians, dentists, and students in the professional schools of Medicine, Dentistry and Pharmacy. The idea in the founding of this fraternity was to bring together men of the allied sciences, men whose aims were mutual and whose ideals and professional ethics were of the highest caliber. Our goal is to develop character, determination and manhood. The fraternity was founded on January 30, 1913 at Howard University. Since that time the fraternity has grown continuously and now consists of 15 graduate and four undergraduate chapters.

American Pharmaceutical Association

The Howard University Student Chapter of the American Pharmaceutical Association was established in 1942. A section of the National American Pharmaceutical Association serves to introduce students of pharmacy to the duties, responsibilities and professionalism necessary for a successful career in pharmacy. Aside from the educational programs other activities include the attendance of several representatives at the annual Region II convention of the student A.Ph.A. This year, Howard had the hosting duties for the convention. The entire enrollment of the college of Pharmacy holds membership in the A.Ph.A. and receives monthly publications of the National Association.

Cook Hall Council

The Council functions as an organization to give the residents of Cook Hall an opportunity to participate in the many interesting and important activities that are sponsored during the year. It also endeavors to motivate the men to become responsible leaders in today's society. Programs included were Homecoming and Christmas decoration of the dormitory, community service project participation, several dances and the traditional Open House.

Cook Hall Tutorial and Advisory Staff

The Cook Hall Tutorial and Advisory Staff serves the dormitory in the dual capacity as academic advisors and understanding counselors for residents' problems. It also works closely with the Residence Hall Council in formulating a constructive program to be carried out during the year.

Seated: F. Black, W. Edwards, W. Daniel, C. Greene; Standing: J. Middlebrooks, E. Harrington, L. Boone, J. McCone, O. Ellington, M. Collins, C. Bentley R. Spearman, B. Lee, B. Bell

Drew Hall Council

The Drew Hall Council, consisting of ten elected officers representing the ideas and wishes of its fellow residents, is a duly elected organization under the advisorship of the head resident. The council has the sole duty of planning the programs and activities for the dormitory.

The first semester activities were limited and concentrated on the winning of three first place trophies, two during Homecoming and one during Christmas Week. These trophies were won for best house decorations and best car decorations. Other activities included a reception for the Drew Hall Queen and her Court, and a series of lectures on topics in the areas of English and Social Science.

The functioning of the second semester included the annual open house, several dances, service projects, and an extensive intramural sports program.

Drew Hall Advisory Staff

The Drew Hall Advisory Staff is made up of upper classmen who reside in the residence hall and serve for the express purpose of: (1) Orienting new students to the university's expectations. (2) Creating an atmosphere conducive to academic endeavors. (3) Providing tutorial assistance, friendly advice, and moral support to the residents. (4) Encouraging residents to develop their talents and resources to the maximum. (5) Assisting in the steering of the committees dealing with programs and projects within the hall. (6) Promoting good human relations in the residence hall. (7) Conducting themselves in an exemplary manner which will reflect credit to themselves and to the university.

Carver Hall Council

The purpose of the Carver Hall Council is to plan and execute the proposed activities of Carver Hall residents for the year. The council was elected late in October. Elected to the council this year were Gary Ayers, Douglas Wheeler, Turner Cainion, Norman Caldwell, Jesse McCallak, James Portlock, Charles Singleton, Thomas Stanford, Daniel Gould, John Beverly, and James St. Clair. It began to function immediately, under the leadership of head resident William A. Bryant. To date the council has carried out many of its proposals. The council planned the yearly election of Miss Carver Hall. The Homecoming festivities brought Carver Hall a second place award for house decorations. The hall also won first prize in this year's Christmas Week festivities for house decoration. The council also sponsored "A Night Of Entertainment" and an open house in March followed by a dance.

American Society of Mechanical Engineers

The organization is a non-profit one composed of some 60,000 engineers, including approximately 9,000 student members. A student in good standing enrolled in any approved engineering curriculum may apply for membership in the Society first as a Student Member, then, upon successful completion of the requirements for an engineering degree as an Associate Member. The purpose of A.S.M.E. is the advancement and dissemination of knowledge of the theory and practice of mechanical engineering, the presentation of proper perspective of engineering work and the opportunity to get acquainted with the personnel and activities of the Society as well as to promote a professional awareness and fellowship. The society creates a link between the student mechanical engineers and the parent body of engineers and more so the Mechanical Engineering Profession.

Business Club

The Business Club could well be defined as a functional organization. Its main goal is business exposure for its members. The Club strives to carry over the teachings of the instructors and information acquired through reading into real life experiences. The Club proposes to better prepare its members for their careers and to give its members an administrative experience gained through Club activity and work.

Economics Club

To promote a wider understanding of the problems of our society is one of the goals of the Economics Club. The members of this organization meet once a week to discuss and offer suggestions for improvements in the various fields of economics. Kappa Sigma Debate Society

Seeking to stimulate critical thinking, the Debate Society strives each year to foster an interest in current social, political and economic problems. This society is much renowned for its intercollegiate debate and other forensic activities and holds many titles in these areas. Tryouts for the Debate Society are held at the beginning of each semester and are open to any interested student.

H-Book

The H-Book was created to inform the incoming freshmen of Howard tradition and policy. The H-Book was first published in 1936. Since that time, this book has been an indispensable aid to the entire university community. Under the guidance of the editor and his staff, the book is modified and updated each year to include such pertinent material as a summary of the various campus organizations and their activities, and a capsuled view of the campus life. This year, being the centennial year, the H-Book had a special section devoted to the hundred years of Howard's existence. This section was composed of a history of the university, a historical explanation of some of the traditions, and a pictorial history of the university. From its small beginning, the H-Book has grown to its present position as an index of information for the university resident.

"Leadership, Friendship, and Service" are the cardinal principles of Alpha Phi Omega National Service Fraternity. These principles have been greatly exemplified by the men of Zeta Phi Chapter here at Howard, since its founding on May 25, 1948. Due to its vigorous service program in the past and this year, Zeta Phi Chapter has been recognized by our national office as one of the top 52 chapters in the nation out of a total number of over 380 chapters. This is our second consecutive year to receive this recognition. In an effort to improve the campus and community conditions, this year Zeta Phi's service program has included the following: Presentation of an Activities Board to the University, Holiday-Trans-Service Bureau, Administering All-Campus election, Operation of Lost and Found Office, Porting of Porters on Campus, Distribution of the Hilltop, Christmas caroling during Christmas week, and presenting a Christmas concert at the Episcopal Home for Children. Our Emergency Student Loan Fund has been increased to $350.

Gamma Sigma Sigma Sorority

Gamma Sigma Sigma Service sorority, Alpha Eta chapter, is one of the most recent Greek letter sororities to come to Howard's campus, receiving its charter on June 15, 1963. The national organization was founded in 1953. The purpose of Gamma Sigma Sigma is to assemble college and university women in the spirit of service to mankind. Its motto is "Unity is Service". Some of the activities of Alpha Eta chapter include selling tickets for campus activities, checking coats at campus functions held in the ballroom, ushering at university receptions and participating in numerous community as well as campus projects.

University Center Planning and Advisory Council

The purpose of the University Center Council is to serve as a policy and programming advisory council concerning the operation and activities of the university council. The University Council consists of an executive board and five committees. Lorraine Owens is chairman of the Executive board. Committees are: House Standards, Special Events, Educational and Cultural, Recreation, and Dance and Social.

This year proved to be a busy year for the University Center Council: sponsored programs included "Russians on Campus," A Harvest Hootenanny, A Computer Dance and Timothy Jenkins on "Is Howard Mediocre?"

The Council acquired a new office on the third floor of the University Center and looks forward to a new University Center.

Sociology-Anthropology

The Sociology-Anthropology Club was established to increase understanding of the dynamics of a changing society and to make an impact on that change. This has proved to be a challenging purpose, intriguing and rewarding, involving activities geared to sharpen and sustain student awareness with special reference to social conditions; to construct and cement intercollegiate bonds of friendship and cooperation, toward shaping a more cohesive generation of future community leaders; to stimulate social concern and a sense of personal worth and responsibility in the minds of the Howard studentry as well as surrounding community residents; to offer all possible services to community betterment and to broaden the perspectives of students interested in interpreting human phenomena. To fulfill these ideals, the club has sponsored a number of activities directly associated with the achievement of these goals.

Student National Education Association

The Student NEA is the professional association for college and university students preparing to teach. Its main purpose is to further the professionalization of those students by providing experiences perhaps not studied or explored in the classroom. As an organization the Student NEA should deepen the interests of capable students in teaching as a career, encourage the careful selection and guidance of persons admitted to teacher education programs; and through higher standards of preparation and the dissemination of information, contribute to a reasonable balance in teacher supply and demand.

Chapel Ushers

Since its beginning, the Chapel Ushers have provided a worthwhile service to the Howard University community. Under the direction of Dr. Evans E. Crawford, Dean of the Chapel, the ushers perform their duties mainly in the realm of weekly religious services held in Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel. They also serve at special events of the university such as baccalaureate and commencement exercises. During the centennial year, they served with the Cramton ushers at the annual Gandhi Memorial lecture. During the course of the year, Dean Crawford invites the ushers to his home on many occasions for fellowship. At the close of the spring semester, they hold a banquet and the speaker is usually the faculty advisor, Mr. A. Mercer Daniel, Assistant Professor of Law and Law Librarian Emeritus. This year, the chapel ushers number well over sixty, coming from every state in the Union as well as the West Indies and Africa. Membership is open to anyone who has a sincere desire to serve the Howard University community through service.

Cramton Ushers

At every performance at Cramton Auditorium, no matter the time, the Cramton ushers are in attendance assisting visitors and students. Under the supervision of Dr. James Butcher, the ushers not only direct seating arrangements, but they also check coats, answer questions, and in general add to the gracious, entertaining atmosphere of the auditorium.

In the year 1946, the Student Council instituted the Campus Pals program to aid in the orientation of students to campus life and Howard University. Since that time the organization has grown, and now under the auspices of the University-wide governing body, the Student Assembly, it includes a select membership of 98 Pals. The essential purpose of the Campus is to assist the University staff in orientating new students to the University community. The program now serves new students in all undergraduate schools, but is by no means exclusive of students in the graduate schools. With increased student enrollment, the Campus Pal program has expanded. The activities now include an annual Freshman boatride, a picnic and dance, a pep rally, a movie and events on campus and the city tours. These Freshman Week events are the climax of an operation which begins in June with correspondence between the Campus Pals and all new incoming students. During the Freshman Week itself, the Campus Pals are invaluable in helping to ease the strain of transition for new students, both through personal contacts, and through the information booths set up at strategic places around the campus. By means of applications and personal interviews, Campus Pals are selected in the spring of each year to serve throughout the next school year. Periodically during the school year, Campus Pals are called upon to serve as official University hosts for approximately 1500 visitors who come to our campus. The Pals often conduct special tours for interested groups of high school students from all over the northeastern coast of the United States, and for various other clubs and organizations.

Homecoming Steering Committee

One of the most significant events which takes place during the school year is Homecoming. To plan, organize, and execute the activities of this week is the job of the Homecoming Steering Committee. There is a job that receives much criticism and little praise. This being the Centennial Homecoming, everything had to be perfect. Many long, long hours were spent in preparation for this event. However, the students leading the committees did an exemplary job.

Phi Mu Alpha

Phi Mu Alpha was founded on October 6, 1898 at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, Mass. Zeta Iota Chapter of Phi Mu Alpha was installed on Howard's campus on May 19, 1952. Charter members of the Fraternity still at Howard are Dr. Warner Lawson, Dean of the College of Fine Arts; Mr. Bernard Mason, Professor of Music Education, and Mr. Charles Cecil Cohen, Professor Emeritus of Piano. Today Phi Mu Alpha is the largest Fraternity in the world. Sinfonia has more than 250 active chapters and has about 40 alumni chapters throughout the United States. Zeta Iota Chapter of Phi Mu Alpha was the first chapter of Phi Mu Alpha in the Washington, D.C. area. We have tried throughout the years to make the four major objectives of our fraternity a fact for Howard University. OMA endeavors to advance the cause of music on Howard's campus; to foster the mutual welfare and brotherhood of students of music, to develop the truest fraternal spirit among our members and always encouraged loyalty to our Alma Mater, America, our country and to God. The Brothers of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Fraternity of America are well known to the world of music. Such great musicians as Leonard Bernstein, Quincey Jones, Harry R. Wilson, Van Cliburn, and William Warfield wear the Sinfonian Banner. Zeta Iota Chapter has plans to sponsor Music composition contests, Music awards, and advancement of the musical culture of Washington, D.C. as well as Howard University. Look at the musician you know he is most likely a Sinfonian.

United Pentecostal Association

The UPA was organized in February of 1966 under the leadership of Mr. James Lewis along with other Pentecostal Students on campus. The UPA was formed to give those students on campus who are of the Pentecostal faith an opportunity to fellowship in their manner of expression. The UPA also unites with the other religious bodies on campus in promoting general spiritual awareness among the student body. Among the other objectives of the UPA is the promoting of individual growth by developing high standards of physical, social, and spiritual qualities. Dr. Leon Wright and Bishop Monroe Saunders are serving as advisors to the UPA.

Walter H. Brooks Fellowship

The Walter H. Brooks Baptist Fellowship is a Christian organization for the Baptist students at Howard University. All meetings and activities are open to the public. The purpose of the club is to cultivate better moral and ethical standards among the students, and to make the students more aware of the community and the world around them. In order to further this purpose, programs with interesting speakers are sponsored, members of the club engage in volunteer community work and recreational and social activities are sponsored to promote fellowship. Along with the campus activities the organization is part of the National Baptist Student Union and sends delegates to the national convention each year. The Baptist club cooperates with other denominational bodies on campus in various programs.

Chess Club

The purpose of the chess club is to promote an interest in the royal game of chess among the Howard University student body and to build an unbeatable touring chess team. The chess team competes in four tournaments per year along with the annual school tournament which takes place in January. The team is selected from the chess club. The team has participated in and placed high in numerous intercollegiate and national tournaments. They have placed second in three national tournaments and they feel that first place is not far in front.

AWS

The Association of Women Students, once known as the Women's League, is one of the largest organizations on campus. Its membership is comprised of the entire woman student body of Howard. The AWS was formed and still maintains its purpose as the official governing body for women students. Among the many programs of the AWS are Women's Week, the Glamour Fashion Show, and Mother's Day Weekend. During Women's Week, activities vary from Open House in the dormitories to symposiums, to the highlight of the week, the Women's Dinner, where the "Who's Who Among Howard Women" and "Woman of the Year" are presented. Glamour magazine selects the "Best-Dressed" woman on campus at the spring fashion show. It is the goal of AWS to promote those principles which will insure maximum development of the individual.

YWCA

The Howard University YWCA, an affiliate of National Young Women's Christian Association, concerns itself with students on the college campus. It is an interdenominational, interracial, and international organization whose purpose is to build a fellowship of concerned students and faculty seeking to make the Christian faith relevant to life on the campus. Its membership is open to students of all faiths. The realization of this purpose is manifested in group meetings; in preparation for conferences with YWCA students on other campuses; in cultural and recreational activities; and in special projects which give opportunities for international travel.

Indian Students Association

In the midst of the colorful, international background from which the Howard student body emerges, there stands the Indian Students Association. Its main objective is to orientate the Indian students to the academic, social and cultural activities of the University community. The projects of the ISA are many. It arranges get-togethers, orientation parties, picnics, and Indian movies. The celebration of an Indian festival Dawali, or Festival of Lights, was held in November. The association holds a reception yearly for newly enrolled students.

Tau Beta Pi

The purpose of Tau Beta Pi, national engineering honor society, is "to mark in a fitting manner those who have conferred honor upon their Alma Mater by distinguished scholarship and exemplary character as undergraduates in engineering". Qualifications for membership are high scholarship and good character. The Tau Beta Pi tutorial program aids students in the School of Engineering and Architecture. This program has been in operation for three years and is available to all students.

International Pals

The International Pals is a newly formed subsidiary for the People-to-People Organization on campus. The primary objective of the International Pals is to create a brother-sister relationship between the American and foreign students on Howard's campus.

Caribbean Association

The Caribbean Association is an association of students from the entire Caribbean area, i.e. students from all West Indian islands as well as students from such mainland areas as British Guiana and British Honduras. The Association was founded in 1924, and officially launched in the following year by Dr. Eric Williams, then a Howard University professor and presently the Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tabago. Dr. Robert Martin, who is still a professor here, was also associated with the fledgling association in the capacity of faculty advisor. The present faculty advisor is Dr. Dalbert Williams, lecturer in the Department of Social Sciences. This year the Association's membership of one hundred and sixty members is its largest ever.

Political Science Society

The Political Science Society is interested in presenting to its members the two most important aspects of learning—the exposure to theoretical knowledge and the exposure to related practical experiences. With this in mind, the Political Science Society states in its Constitution that "the purpose of this Society shall be to aid in the development of the Howard University community, and to promote a clearer understanding of world politics and our national government through educational, cultural and social activities." In cooperation with the Citizenship Project, which sponsors a political education program at Howard University, the Political Science Society presents various and diversified speakers who have a direct contact with the political sphere of this country. Participants in the seminars which the Society presents range from candidates for public office to elected members of the House of Representatives and the Senate. To create a school awareness of the political sector of this country, the Political Science Society makes it possible for members of the entire student body to participate in mock elections and other politically oriented activities. Contests are given by the Society which will both stimulate student awareness of governmental issues, as well as create a situation for community-wide participation by the students.

America Chemical Society

The Student Affiliate chapter of the American Chemical Society affords those persons who have an interest in chemistry the opportunity to actively participate in extra-classroom activity. By being a member of this group the student is allowed to use such ACS facilities as the Regional Employment Clearing House, the National Employment Clearing House, and the Graduate School Clearing House, which is a service for students interested in graduate school. In addition, the student affiliate receives a subscription to the publication of the American Chemical Society.

Interfraternity Council

The Inter-Fraternity Council serves as the coordinating group of the men's social Greek-letter activities at Howard. Here the groups can come together to discuss and "iron out" any problems that may occur. Under the leadership of Louis Simpson this group has made great strides this year. The Third Annual All-Greek Weekend was a success. Activities of the "Weekend" included a dance, a song fest, and a Greek College Bowl.

Intersorority Council

The purposes of the Inter-Sorority Council are to develop a greater understanding among the social Greek-letter sororities, to seek solutions to common problems, and to assist each other and the university in improving the cultural, social, emotional, intellectual and spiritual environment of the campus and the community. The members of the ISC of Howard University represent the Social Greek-letter sororities of Alpha Kappa Alpha, Delta Sigma Theta, Sigma Gamma Rho, and Zeta Phi Beta. Included in their activities this year under the presidential leadership of Rose Gunn were a raffle to benefit the Centennial Scholarship Fund, a presentation on the "Fact About the Birth Control Pill" by Dr. Charles Townsend, and big sister programs to benefit neighborhood teenage girls.

Arnold Air Society

The Arnold Air Society is a national society for Air Force ROTC cadets who demonstrate exceptional leadership qualities, character, and scholastic abilities. The objectives of this organization are to further the tradition, purpose, mission and concept of the United States Air Force, and to create a close relationship between the Air Force ROTC program and the Air Force ROTC cadets.

Angel Flight

The Angel Flight is an organization of dedicated college women who have the interests of the United States Air Force, the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps program, and the Arnold Air Society at heart. Angel Flight exists for the same purpose that the Arnold Air Society exists . . . to further the cause of the United States Air Force by promoting the interest of the college man in the Air Force ROTC program. Angel Flights through their many activities, aid the progress of the Arnold Air Society and serve as a symbol of appreciation for the importance and the dignity of Air Force life.

Scabbard and Blade Honor Society

The National Society of Scabbard and Blade is an honor society for those advanced cadets who possess outstanding scholarship, loyalty and fellowship. Its purpose is to preserve themselves as educated men to take a more active part in the military affairs of the community and, above all to spread intelligent information concerning the military requirements of our country.

Armettes

Serving as a morale booster, the Armettes was established on the Howard University campus as the women's auxiliary to the Army ROTC. The coeds who comprise the Armettes show their interests and talents in organizing community-wide activities representing all of the members of the Army ROTC program. The organization too aids the cadets in administration of their organization.

Institute of Electrical & Electronic Engineers

The IEEE is an organization founded on the belief that the professional student who is out of touch with the advancements in his field is like a knight without an armour, a vector without a wing. In other words incompleteness characterizes his existence. The student branch of the IEEE endeavors to inspire professional curiosity in the Engineering student. This it does by keeping the student abreast of advances in Electrical Engineering, and to a more limited degree, by distributing information on developments in other scientific fields. Among some of the many projects of the student chapter at Howard, the IEEE under the proficient guidance of Mr. Redmond Stevens as President and Professor Thomas Getts as faculty advisor, brought to the campus many important speakers from industry and government agencies. The Howard chapter recently hosted the annual winter convention for the second region of IEEE.

Aerodettes

The Aerodettes is an organized women's drill team, sponsored by the Air Force ROTC. Recognition of the needs and interests of students gave rise to the organization in 1963. The growth of the organization has been due to the continued interest and support by these students. The aim of the Aerodettes is finer womanhood through physical and mental alertness. They represent the University in numerous parades, and trick drill meets. The Aerodettes are sisters to the Andrew D. Turner Memorial Drill Team and provide moral support for all drill teams at competitions. These young women have entered a field of knowledge and experience to which few have ventured.

Who's Who Among Students In American Universities And Colleges

It is indeed a coveted honor to be selected to be included in the group of students from universities and colleges all over the country known as "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and colleges." Who's Who originated thirty-three years ago with the two-fold purpose of providing recognition to deserving college students and of providing a reference for outstanding prospective personnel for employers. University officials at the various colleges are usually responsible for the students who are selected to appear in each year's Who's Who list. At Howard University, any senior may be nominated to receive this honor. However, this is not a popularity contest. A committee composed of faculty, administrative officers, and students consider a great many candidates. The final selection is made on the basis of the candidate's scholarship, leadership, participation in campus activities and his service to the school. A key emblem of gold or silver is the symbol of this distinguished selective honor.

This year was the year at Howard University that will not be forgotten easily. The Centennial Celebration of Howard University was a challenge for all persons concerned: students, faculty, and administration alike. The BISON has given a recording of the important and meaningful events that transpired during the year. We of the BISON staff have worked hard to make the yearbook a record of the year, highlighting the events that will live in the memory of all who have attended Howard University. I would like to express my thanks to all of the persons who have made the yearbook the success that it is. Alice Sykes who is the managing editor took the challenge of the editorship with fullest energy and the drive to get the job done. George Terrell the photography editor was always there with his camera ready to take that all important picture. Without a picture there is no yearbook. Art Greene and Art Shelton and Gregory Dash were the assistant photographers. They contributed highly to the yearbook also. The time, effort and energy they put into the book makes it interesting and enjoyable. The yearbook this year had a special section devoted to the Centennial Celebration. Kenneth Howard and Mickey Collins devoted their efforts in this section to give all readers a brief history of the school. Jackie Brice must be thanked for her undying efforts in the academics section of the book. Douglas Wheeler's ever present devotion to the sports area of the book makes it one of the most interesting this year. Nanette Smith, who worked on the senior section of the book worked very hard on this section and is to be thanked for her efforts. Dietra Handy, business manager, contributed much of her time in collecting and compiling the advertisements for the yearbook. Many thanks go to Miss Handy. Claudia McKoin devoted all of her time to the organization of the index. To her goes many thanks. And Robert Ferrill who designed the cover and the divider pages and who laid out many pages I thank very much. Last but not least I thank Herbert Dixon whose devotion time and effort on the BISON made the book possible. Herb was always on the job and never failed in any task. Many other people are to be thanked; the Public Relations office, The Hilltop office, Scurlock Photographic Studios, Mr. Earl Williams, photographer, Mr. Clive Davidson, photographer, and the office of Student Life. But the most thanks go to the advisor of the yearbook Miss Norlishia Jackson. Without the support of Miss Jackson the yearbook would have never gone to press. We the Bison staff and especially me owe much to our wonderful advisor Miss Norlishia Jackson.
