New registration procedures please students

By Alphonso Taylor

As the beginning of the school year nears, students look forward to some of what the registration process holds in store. For many, that time has come.

Registration procedures for students have changed this year. More organized and more convenient, Robinson said. "I think the students were more prepared this year. More students attended." According to Robinson, "we didn't have any problems with this year's registration."

HUSA gears up for progressive year

By Kervella Mathieu

HUSA cabinet also led preparation for the Million Man March and has been stepping up its efforts to provide accountable leadership for the students, the community and the community at large.

"We felt it was important to stand up and speak for the students," President Kofi Rashid said.

HUSA is optimistic and enthusiastic about their mission to "promote positive change," said Rashid. "We are stepping up to the challenge to actualize the party." Rashid

The successful kickoff of the Million Man March (UGSA) Welcome Back to School orientation has been an important event of the year. President Shawn Hill has already put their plan into action, and the Department of Student Affairs is stepping up to meet Howard's student leaders.

"We want the students to have a voice in the process," said Rashid. "We want them to feel comfortable expressing their opinions and participating in the planning of their organizations," said Rashid. "We also want to make sure that the students are involved in the decision-making process." Rashid said.

The Howard Carnival, which will take place on October 12, will be held to promote positivity on campus.

"The Carnival will be a celebration of the Howard community," said Rashid. "It will also be an opportunity to know each other and to express our creativity.

The Howard Carnival is scheduled for October 12, with Howard students expected to attend.

UGSA is pleased with the response from the community and the student organizations.

"We have heard from many of our local organizations," said Rashid. "They are excited to be a part of the Howard Carnival and to participate in the planning of the event.

"The Howard Carnival will be a great opportunity for the community to come together and celebrate," said Rashid. "It will also be an opportunity for the students to express their creativity and to participate in the planning of the event.

"We are looking forward to the Howard Carnival," said Rashid. "It will be a great opportunity for the community to come together and celebrate." Rashid said.
Emergency call box and light

By Alain Joseph

Selena Lloyd, a graduate student in the School of Social Work, said that the new shuttle service might be especially helpful to students who live in Torrance. Lloyd also said that the system is composed of an orange call box, a light signal and a pedestrian emergency call box. She said that if a person witnesses a crime or needs immediate assistance, they can call the box. The system is connected to the university's main security room.

Campus Pal organization's new shuttle began operation last week. The system is part of a larger project that includes the installation of security systems in all buildings and light poles across campus.

Dear Student Colleagues:

Thirty-four Septembers ago, I was a first-year student here, living in Cook Hall and wondering what the future would hold. During my stay on this campus, I was embraced by the entire University community and given an opportunity to grow, a sense of direction, and exposure to the core values that inspire me to this day.

I have traveled fairly extensively since my student days here and have held leadership positions on two campuses, but I can testify clearly to the truth of that familiar old saying: There's no place like home. I am grateful to the Board of Trustees for giving me the opportunity to return to Howard University as its president. It's great to be back home. My family and I look forward to spending many, many years here.

As I begin my presidency, I consider building a mutually rewarding and respectful relationship with you, our students, of paramount importance. To that end, let me assure you that I share your concerns about a number of key issues. Let me cite a few.

• Keeping the channels of communication open between us. You should know that throughout my career in higher education, I have made it a special point to be available and accessible to students. It is a pattern I vow to continue at Howard. With this in mind, I have designated Thursdays and Fridays, from 4pm to 5pm for student appointments.

• Maintaining the quality of the academic programs. This entails ensuring that academic programs have all the resources -- faculty, library, laboratory, computer, and others -- to foster excellence. I also recognize that there are two sides to this equation. The other side is your willingness, as students, to work and to work hard. You must demonstrate that you understand the standard for all of our activities at the University must be excellence. Plain and simple: We simply cannot settle for anything less than excellence, and you should demand nothing less than excellence from the University.

• Enhancing the quality of student life here at the University and that includes everything from improving the conditions of our residence halls and widening access to recreational and co-curricular activities to addressing the issue of campus safety. Nothing should take precedence over providing a safe and secure environment for our students. Please be assured that, even in this difficult fiscal climate, I am determined to make resources available for this purpose.

• Recognizing the value of student participation in the life of the University. I have always been a strong supporter of student government and student participation in organizations and other activities. I recognize fully that HUSA and other student organizations serve as valuable training grounds for leadership, enabling our students to eventually manage and lead complex organizations. It follows from this that I intend to be supportive of HUSA and its goals and look forward to working with its leaders and those of other student organizations during the academic year.

As the first step in this process, this fall, I will hold a retreat with HUSA and other student leaders to discuss areas of mutual concern. The event is part of a series of retreats we are holding with members of the Howard family to address issues, seek solutions, and develop strategies to meet the challenges facing the University.

You, our students, are the living embodiment of Howard's specialness. In the grand and glorious Howard tradition, you are the future. I want to assure you that I will do everything in my power to ensure that Howard continues to provide the kind of rich, nurturing environment that fosters leadership. At the same time, I want to remind you that you must do everything in your power to take advantage of the opportunities such an environment makes possible. We are all in this together.

I was one of the many young men and women who came to Howard with vague dreams and vague hopes. Howard helped me focus both. The University served me well, as it has countless others.

We are in this together. Together we can ensure that Howard University not only survives, but thrives. Together, we can make a difference on this campus, in the nation, and in the world.

I have used this letter as a vehicle for sharing some of my thoughts with you. I welcome such opportunities, just as I welcome hearing your ideas, your dreams, and yes, even your complaints.

Please accept my personal best wishes for a productive and satisfying academic year.

You are here to learn and to serve. I am sure that you will continue to enhance the Howard legacy.

Sincerely,

H. Patrick Swygert
President
Reynolds announces resignation from Congress

BY JONATHAN L. WHARTON

The Hilltop.

After being charged with sexual assault, Rep. Mel Reynolds (D-Ill.), a member of the Black Caucus, has quit the U.S. House of Representatives, he said Tuesday. The former Black Caucus delegate was convicted on charges of sexual assault and perjury, and is currently serving a six-year prison term.

Reynolds was charged with assaulting three female students in 2000 while he was a law student at the University of Illinois. He was also charged with perjury for lying about his past and his involvement in the assault.

The Black Caucus has called for Reynolds’ resignation, and many members of the party have expressed outrage over his actions.

``I am deeply sorry for the harm that I caused to our community and our country through my actions,`` Reynolds said in a statement on Tuesday. ``I have been charged with sexual assault and perjury, and I am fully prepared to face the consequences of my actions.``

The Hilltop.

Reynolds, who is serving his seventh term in Congress, is the fourth member of the Black Caucus to resign in recent years.

``I am grateful to my colleagues for their support and understanding during this difficult time,`` he said. ``I will continue to work to make sure that our community is safe and secure, and that our country can begin to heal.``

The Hilltop.

Reynolds is the latest member of the Black Caucus to face criminal charges.

``I am proud of the work that we have done to promote justice and equality in our community,`` Reynolds said. ``I am committed to continuing that work, and I will do everything in my power to ensure that our community is safe and secure.``

The Hilltop.

Reynolds’ resignation comes as the Black Caucus faces criticism for its role in the ongoing investigation into the alleged sexual assault of a female student by a member of the caucus.

``I am deeply concerned about the ongoing investigation,`` Reynolds said. ``I am committed to doing everything in my power to ensure that justice is served, and I will do everything in my power to support our community and our country.``

Reynolds is the fourth member of the Black Caucus to resign in recent years, following the resignations of Rep. Jesse Jackson (D-Ill.), Rep. Emanuel Cleaver (D-Mo.), and Rep. Will Hurd (R-Texas).

Wednesday is street cleaning day at 11:00; I know this seemingly meaningless fact because I often spend my time in parking in front of my building at 10:30 a.m. While America is a nation that insists on faithful attendance, not just on any day but on Tuesday, the government doesn't bother to keep its promises. Thus, we have come to realize that there are no promises, only political expedience.

I thought that Black would understand that You are no longer my enemy, and that I am your friend. He knows that we are all Americans, but he also understands that we are a separate and distinct African-American group, different in our history, our experiences, and our future.

At best, affirmative action is a cruel and shortsighted deprivation of the promise that Black people who won America's struggle for freedom are entitled to. At its worst, it is an exercise in racial discrimination and social engineering.

I had invited many friends to a Black Nationalist symposium, but the only one who showed up was the poet Langston Hughes. He had made this his day off and I was pleased.

Thus, we have come to realize that there are no promises, only political expedience. In this sense, America is a nation of promises, but it is a nation of empty promises.

Once again, I had neglected a task and I felt very ashamed. Upon reflection, I realized that this was a task I had set for myself, not the task of the government. I had assumed that the government would take care of it.

This is not an indication of every city's efforts to ensure that all Black people have access to quality education. There are a few who have been working hard to ensure that all Black people have access to quality education. A few who have been working hard to ensure that all Black people have access to quality education.

I had promised myself, 'He must not let this man cleaning the streets make me feel like I'm not important.' Then I thought, 'Thank God I graduated from Howard University and that will never be the case.'

Once again, I had neglected a task and I felt very ashamed. Upon reflection, I realized that this was a task I had set for myself, not the task of the government. I had assumed that the government would take care of it.

I had forgotten that Dr. Edward W. Sojer, the founder of the Hilltop, had once written that the government should not be responsible for the education of its citizens. It should be the responsibility of the community to ensure that the education of its children is of the highest quality.

SIX MAJOR ADVANTAGES TO BECOMING AN ARMY DENTIST.

1. You won't have to make the initial investment it takes to setup independent practice.
2. No continuing investment in manpower and devoting the time it takes to maintain a staff.
3. Army dentists spend their full working days doing what they are trained for—practicing dentistry.
4. The Army trains enlisted dental assistants and hires trained civilians to be part of the dental team.
5. You'll have an opportunity to practice your profession here or abroad in the most up-to-date facilities imaginable. If you are so inclined, teaching opportunities exist.
6. Beyond professional rewards are the emotional ones. As a dentist in uniform, treating soldiers, your days will be spent in the service of your country.

Howard grad heads Heart & Soul magazine

When Stephanie Stokes Oliver accepted Howard University's special communication student award in 1979, she was honored for being the first black woman to earn a master's degree in the university's School of Communications.

"I knew I'd find the only woman in the room," she said. "It was exciting." Indeed, she went on to become the first black woman to earn a master's degree in the field of communications at Howard.

Since then, Oliver has continued to break barriers. In 1980, she became the first black woman to earn a Ph.D. in journalism at the University of Maryland. And in 1988, she became the first black woman to be named editor-in-chief of People magazine.

"I feel ready to take on the big issues," Oliver said. "I feel ready to make a difference."

Allergy sufferers opt for natural remedies

By Regional Student Hilltop Staff Writer

The hacking coughs, throbbing headaches, wheezing snorts and dripping noses that pull out of the stairwell. And, yes, there are work no just a few weeks ago breaking the approach of the first allergy alert of the season. Allergic reactions to the pollen from winter's end are throwing away in droves. As upshot to fashionable medications, medications can be negative with their abdominal and stomach symptoms, but with their willingness as well.

As the search for medical help continues, the quest looks more to the array of natural medications, revolving organizations, like the American Society of Pharmacology, which researches and publishes breakthroughs in the medicinal benefits of plants and flowers from all over the world.

"Allergy sufferers are not the same. The symptoms of one individual are different from the symptoms of another," said John B. Thrash, professor of pharmacology and natural products at the College of Dentistry. "However, due to the diversity of both the allergens and the individuals, allergic reactions may look very different in each person."

It is very important for people in the professional field to be able to identify the plants and flowers that are harmful, as well as the natural medicines and pharmaceuticals that are available and have been proven to work. During the allergy season, doctor prescribed medications dealing with the most obvious symptoms of the allergens and the flora, will not be as effective, as the over-the-counter medications have a higher chance of causing an allergic reaction.

"I have a list of allergies that I keep track of, a variety of different plants and flowers. For example, dandelions and oak trees, to name a few. I am allergic to these types of plants, so I try to avoid them."

Many people find that taking natural remedies, such as dandelion, thyme, rabbit-ear, and other types of herbal plants and roots can be effective. However, it is important to have allergies that can be controlled with weaker medications, such as antihistamines and decongestants.

"When I lived in Drew Hall and was on the "freshman 15" theory, which says that students will gain weight during their first year and a half, and if they are not careful, they will not gain weight."

Some first-year Howard students think they will not gain weight. Some students stick to their one-meal-a-day meal plan and eat one meal a day, but don't have access to extra food. "I am a 14-year-old girl whose mouth is going through a period of reconstruction," said Sanders. Although she had been in orthodontics for 14 years, she began to notice a difference in her mouth. One area the dental school is focusing on is the clinicals, where dental students perform procedures on themselves. "I love this time of year, but it's really hard to breathe. I try to find more efficient and cost saving ways to kill the bitter flavor of most vegetables and snacks."

"I love this time of year, but it's really hard to breathe. I try to find more efficient and cost saving ways to kill the bitter flavor of most vegetables and snacks," Sanders said. "I love this time of year, but it's really hard to breathe. I try to find more efficient and cost saving ways to kill the bitter flavor of most vegetables and snacks."

For example, Mutual of America has recommended that the students take advantage of the following snacks and foods that they don't know they have allergies to. "I love this time of year, but it's really hard to breathe. I try to find more efficient and cost saving ways to kill the bitter flavor of most vegetables and snacks."
