Howard's future attorneys analyze, try 'trill of the century'

By Andrea Carton

Hilltop Staff Writer

He did it. He didn't do it. Does anyone really know? The question continues, and the debate rages on as Howard University Law School students react to the O.J. Simpson verdict.

Justin Howell, a sophomore science minor, is one of the law students who2 was not always interested in Criminology. He tells us that "I didn't know what to believe. I didn't understand what was going on," but he eventually became interested in the subject. "I wish I could have paid more attention to the trial and learned more about it," he said.

"I was a little confused," said first-year law student Kim Meekawi. "I didn't understand the evidence or the process." She found it difficult to follow the trial and the legal terms used, but she is trying to improve her understanding of the law.

"I am not sure if I believe him or not," said second-year law student Marcia Hicks. "I didn't see enough evidence to convince me one way or another." Hicks believes that the trial was unfair and that O.J. Simpson was not given a fair chance.

"I think he is guilty," said third-year law student Anne Brown. "I didn't believe the defense team's argument." Brown found the trial to be well-presented and believed that O.J. Simpson was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

"I think he is innocent," said fourth-year law student John Gill. "I didn't think the prosecution had enough evidence to prove him guilty." Gill believes that the trial was unfair and that O.J. Simpson was not given a fair chance.

"I think he is guilty," said fifth-year law student Sarah Jones. "I believed the prosecution's argument." Jones found the trial to be well-presented and believed that O.J. Simpson was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

"I think he is innocent," said sixth-year law student Mark Johnson. "I didn't believe the prosecution's argument." Johnson believes that the trial was unfair and that O.J. Simpson was not given a fair chance.

"I think he is guilty," said seventh-year law student Linda Lee. "I believed the prosecution's argument." Lee found the trial to be well-presented and believed that O.J. Simpson was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

"I think he is innocent," said eighth-year law student Mary Miller. "I didn't believe the prosecution's argument." Miller believes that the trial was unfair and that O.J. Simpson was not given a fair chance.

"I think he is guilty," said ninth-year law student Tim Naylor. "I believed the prosecution's argument." Naylor found the trial to be well-presented and believed that O.J. Simpson was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

"I think he is innocent," said tenth-year law student James Peterson. "I didn't believe the prosecution's argument." Peterson believes that the trial was unfair and that O.J. Simpson was not given a fair chance.

"I think he is guilty," said eleventh-year law student Karen Scott. "I believed the prosecution's argument." Scott found the trial to be well-presented and believed that O.J. Simpson was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

"I think he is innocent," said twelfth-year law student David Taylor. "I didn't believe the prosecution's argument." Taylor believes that the trial was unfair and that O.J. Simpson was not given a fair chance.

"I think he is guilty," said thirteenth-year law student Linda Williams. "I believed the prosecution's argument." Williams found the trial to be well-presented and believed that O.J. Simpson was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

"I think he is innocent," said fourteenth-year law student John Brown. "I didn't believe the prosecution's argument." Brown believes that the trial was unfair and that O.J. Simpson was not given a fair chance.

"I think he is guilty," said fifteenth-year law student Mary Brown. "I believed the prosecution's argument." Brown found the trial to be well-presented and believed that O.J. Simpson was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.
Rats, roaches plague University housing

"I went into the room, and dead roaches were everywhere," said a Howard student who recently moved into a new apartment on the second floor of the same residence hall.

"As soon as I opened the door to the apartment, dead and live roaches were everywhere," the student said.

The student said that she was concerned about the health issues they can cause, although she was not sure if she had been bitten by a roach.

Another student who recently moved into the same hall said that she had seen live roaches in her apartment.

"When I moved into my apartment, I saw live roaches all over the place," the student said.

"We have been dealing with roaches for a while, and it seems like they are getting worse," a University official said.

"The problem is not just limited to this hall," the official said.

"Rats and roaches have been a problem on campus for years," the official said.

"It's a constant battle," the official said.

"We have been dealing with the problem for a long time, and we are working hard to solve it," the official said.

"We have been trying different methods to get rid of the pests, but it's a tough problem," the official said.

"It's not just a pest control issue, it's also a health issue," the official said.

"We want to make sure that our students are safe and healthy," the official said.

"We are working with environmental groups to come up with a solution," the official said.

"We are taking steps to improve the facilities and conditions," the official said.

"We are also working on education and awareness campaigns," the official said.

"We want to help our students understand the importance of hygiene and cleanliness," the official said.

Black child advocates host annual conference

By Jonathan L. Whorton

President of the National Black Child Development Institute (NBCDI) held its annual conference at the Washington Hilton last week. The institute is responsible for informing Congress and other governmental agencies for African-American children.

"We are really aware that this is a time of crisis for our children," said President and Executive Director Evelyn Moore. "It is our job to inform and to lobby Congress for the quality of our children's education." According to Moore, the institute has been lobbying for children with proposed new laws. This is now the time for us to really make our voices heard.

As children, advocates held meetings everyday throughout the week to discuss the present and future situations of the educational organization as well as African-American children. The institute has been involved with proposed congressional bills. However, the institute believes that more must be done to support the institute's position. Congress must be made aware of the institute's position on the proposed bills. Congress must be told that the institute is ready to support the institute's position.

The institute has been working with Congress and other governmental agencies. The institute believes that the present and future situations of the educational organization are critically important to the institute. The institute will continue to work with Congress and other governmental agencies to ensure that the institute's position is supported.

New policy turns D.C. schools over to private companies

By Janette Lynde Thompson

The District of Columbia school system is embarking on a new policy that will turn over some of its schools to private companies. The policy is a response to the District's budget crisis and an attempt to improve the quality of education in the District's schools.

The policy, which was announced last week, will allow private companies to operate certain schools. The companies will be responsible for managing the schools, including hiring teachers and administrators. The policy is intended to provide the District with more flexibility in managing its schools and to improve the quality of education.

The policy is not without its critics. Some believe that the policy will lead to a privatization of public education. Others worry that the policy will lead to an increase in the cost of education. Despite these concerns, the policy is expected to be implemented in the near future.

Leaders gather in the District to prepare for Million Man March

By David Goodell

Leaders from various religious, political and social organizations came together to prepare for the Million Man March. The march is scheduled for October 16 and is expected to be the largest demonstration of its kind in history.

The leaders met to discuss the goals of the march, the various groups that will be participating, and the logistics of the event. They also discussed the importance of the march and its potential impact on American society.

The Million Man March is expected to be a significant event, with thousands of people expected to participate. The leaders are working hard to ensure that the event is successful and that it sends the right message to the world.
The nation reacts to the O.J. Simpson verdict

By Janelle Lynette Thompson

The jury of the O.J. Simpson trial announced its verdict of not guilty on Tuesday, July 3. The verdict came as a surprise to many, given the massive media attention and speculation surrounding the trial. The trial spanned nearly 450 days and featured over 250 witnesses, making it one of the longest and most expensive trials in history.

The verdict has been met with mixed reactions from the public and the legal community. Many feel relieved that justice has been served, while others are disappointed that the trial was not able to bring closure to the tragedy of the murder of Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman.

Colin Powell and Ross Perot debate third party issue

By Steven Gray

Colin Powell and Ross Perot, two of the most prominent figures in American politics, have been engaged in a heated debate over the issue of third party candidates. Powell, who is the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has been a vocal critic of third parties, arguing that they can divide the vote and make it difficult for the candidates to win.

Perot, on the other hand, has been a strong advocate for third party candidates, arguing that they can bring about necessary change and break the political monopoly.

Undergraduate Trustee Karim mobilizes students political action

By Kimberly Love

Undergraduate Trustee Karim has been mobilizing students to get involved in political action. He has been organizing events and rallies to encourage students to vote, to register to vote, and to get involved in the political process.

The Trustee's efforts have been met with mixed reactions from the student body, with some students expressing interest in getting involved and others expressing apathy.

Sheik and followers convicted on conspiracy charges

By Catriona Harrington

Sheik Omar Abu LaTief, a prominent leader of the Islamic organization, and his followers have been convicted of conspiracy charges. The conviction comes after a long and contentious trial, during which the prosecution and defense put forth a fierce battle of wits.

The trial ended with the conviction, with Sheik and his followers facing a lengthy prison sentence.

In the end, the verdict was a clear message to Sheik and his followers that their actions were illegal and that they would face the consequences of their crimes.
African clothing for style, cultural awareness

By Patricia Miranda
Daily News Writer

Left to the flowing fabric, the uniquely rich and colorful patterns and designs are only beginning to impact African American fashion. The idea that African clothing can be an accessory to a casual look or a refined one is something that many students are becoming familiar with.

The popularity of African clothing is growing as the trend of baggy jeans and t-shirts is overtaken by the neat and well-fitting African clothing.

Although some District residents are adhering to the trend, others feel that authentic African wear is proper only in the context of a traditional or a Christian church ceremony.

The increase in African fashion is evident in the opening of African boutiques and the rise of African clothing in the clothing industry.

Internationally, African clothing is becoming more popular, with many athletes and celebrities opting for African attire.

African clothing is not only about style, but also about personal expression and cultural pride.

International students express support, concerns over Million Man March

The calling for a day of action by black leaders on Monday carries with it an important message to African Americans and the world.

The march is expected to draw massive participation, with predictions of over one million people in attendance.

Despite the importance of the event, some African American leaders have expressed concern about the potential for violence and the need for peaceful protest.

The march organizers have emphasized the importance of unity and non-violence, and have called on participants to remember the legacy of Martin Luther King Jr.

The march is an opportunity for African Americans to come together and advocate for their rights and demands.

By Carey G reach
Hilltop Staff Writer

The million man march, which took place on October 16, 1995, was a significant event in American history. It was one of the largest protests in the United States, with an estimated crowd of over one million people.

The march was initiated by the Million Man March Foundation, a non-profit organization founded by Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan. The purpose of the march was to address issues of racial inequality and to promote unity among African Americans.

The march was held in Washington, D.C., and it was a significant event in the fight against racism and for social justice.

The march was peaceful and was attended by people from all walks of life, including African Americans, whites, and people of all races.

The march was a powerful moment in American history, and it served as a reminder of the importance of unity and non-violence in the fight against racism.
SIX MAJOR ADVANTAGES TO BECOMING AN ARMY DENTIST.

1. You won't have to make the initial investment it takes to set up a dental practice.
2. No continuing investment in manpower and devoting the time it takes to maintain a staff.
3. Army dentists spend their full working days doing what they are trained for—practicing dentistry.
4. The Army trains enlisted dental assistants and hires trained civilians to be part of the dental team.
5. You'll have an opportunity to practice your profession here or abroad in the most up-to-date facilities imaginable. If you are so inclined, teaching opportunities exist.
6. Beyond professional rewards are the emotional ones. As a dentist and an officer treating soldiers, your days will be spent in the service of your country.

OFFICE OF THE
VICE PRESIDENT FOR ACADEMIC AFFAIRS

The Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs and the Office of Enrollment Management wish to thank the students of Howard University, and the entire University community for helping to make fall registration a success.

With your cooperation, and with a plan that sought to focus on respectful service to the students, we were all able to effect a dramatic improvement in the registration operations. We appreciate your cooperation. Registration could not have been a success without your help.

Within a few short weeks, we will begin registration for the 1996 Spring Semester. We hope to make the registration process even more efficient and "student friendly." And we expect that students and administrative staff will once again be able to applaud each other for a job well done.

Our goal is to have every registration a success. We thank you for helping us make that goal a reality.

Best wishes for a great year at Howard University.

Howard must take its rightful place in the Million Man March

Howard University has the opportunity to join the Billion of Americans marching in the Million Man March on Oct. 16. This march is not only about the visibility of African-American men, but about the visibility of Howard University.

It is anticipated that about one million Black men will participate in this march, most of whom are from urban backgrounds. Howard University is a part of this urban community and should be represented at this event.

The Million Man March is not just about表面 participation, but about an opportunity to make a statement about our commitment to social justice. As Howard University, we have a responsibility to our students and community to be a part of this important event.

The march is not just about Black men, but about the Black community as a whole. Howard University is a part of this community and should be represented at this event.

Let us not miss this opportunity to make a statement about our commitment to social justice. As Howard University, we have a responsibility to our students and community to be a part of this important event.

Letter to the Editor

Student apathy threatens our existence

It saddens me to observe that Howard University students no longer espouse the fervor for justice and equality that our forefathers did when they resisted the repressive tactics of a regime that sought to undermine their rights.

In today's society, the current political climate and social issues are not as significant as they were in previous eras. This lack of engagement is reflected in the low attendance at university events and the lack of interest in political campaigns.

It is crucial for students to become actively involved in society and take an active role in political and social issues. We must not allow apathy to dictate our actions and decisions.

We must not let our forefathers' sacrifices go in vain. We must not let our community suffer because of our inaction. We must not let our future be determined by our apathy. We must take action and make our voices heard.

Let us not let this opportunity pass us by. Let us not let our apathy define us. Let us not let our inaction dictate our future.
Beckett, Shakespeare, Hemingway and my other high school bullies

John Strentz

A week ago, my history teacher started as usual, "Each day, a whole week on the Harlem Renaissance. Your history — my history — our history. The beautiful 1920s where African-American writers and artists created a whole new world through the writings of such strange geniuses as Langston Hughes, Zora Neale Hurston and others. The 1920s were a time for change and growth in America, especially in the north."

How could I help but suspect that this was just another of the many dull, banal lessons I have sat through? "Seven Strangers" in the context of the Harlem Renaissance? Must have been a terrible hit to those working on the movie. But why should I worry, our school was on spring break the next day. So what if my history teacher may have a simplistic view of the Harlem Renaissance. I still didn't have to like it.

The real bullies were the people who created curriculum that was so narrow and forced I had no choice but to defend myself.

Indeed, PAs have played a vital role in lowering the cost of health care and in making quality care more accessible.
Millions of dollars in scholarships, fellowships, grants, internships, work study programs and special student aid funds go unused every year because students simply don’t know where to apply or how to get their share.

The secret in locating money for college lies in your strategy. You need step-by-step information on what aid is available and how you can get it. The time to apply is now! You can apply as early as your junior year in high school or during your undergraduate or graduate study. Aid can be used at any accredited college or trade school.

The great hair debate: Where do Howard women stand?

By Russell Rockford

Byron Powell

It's a She Thang
Twelve fall fashion essentials for women

"Black hair is no different to structure, but," Adara said. "After you put a lot of time and effort to make your hair look decent, your hair is not supposed to be something you can just leave at home.

Black women have their own cultural identity and their hair is a part of that identity." Adara mentioned. "They have to be very careful how they style their hair, especially when they go out to public events or when they have to attend formal occasions like weddings or graduation ceremonies. They have to make sure that their hair looks good and presentable, even if it means spending a lot of time and effort on it."

Adara added that black women should avoid straightening their hair too much, as it can lead to hair damage. "It's important to keep your natural hair and keep it healthy," she said. "If you want to straighten your hair, you should do it with a heatless method, like using a heatless roller set, which is gentler on your hair and can help maintain its natural texture.

Black women face a lot of pressure from society to maintain a certain hairstyle, but they should not feel pressured to do so." Adara concluded. "It's important to remember that beauty is subjective and what is considered beautiful is different for everyone. Black women should be proud of their natural hair and embrace it for who they are, rather than trying to change it to fit a certain stereotype.

Reflections

Women, let us march alone

By Byron Powell

Women, let us take our power and march alone. The time has come for us to stand up and be counted. Our voices must be heard and our messages must be known. We have the strength and the courage to make a difference.

We must never forget the words of Stacey the student activist who said, "Our hair is a part of our identity and we should be proud of it. We should not let anyone tell us how to style our hair or who we are." Stacey's message is one that we should all take to heart.

We have the power to make a difference and we should use it. We must stand up for what we believe in and fight for our rights. We are strong and we are beautiful. We are black women and we are proud.

Byron Powell

Students share the good, bad and ugly sides of college life.

"Sorry, go to school. You're a sophomorl."

Renee, a sophomore majoring in psychology, was told by her roommate to go to school. "She was always criticizing me and telling me what I should be doing," Renee said. "I was frustrated and felt like I was being micromanaged."

Stacey, a junior majoring in biology, also had a difficult roommate. "She was always criticizing my appearance and telling me how to dress," Stacey said. "I felt like I was being judged all the time and it was really disheartening.

When problems occur between roommates, tensions can arise. "I had to learn how to communicate and set boundaries," Stacey said. "I had to decide what was okay and what was not.

But with all of it, I'm not so sure about being a good mom."

In the end, Stacey decided to talk to her roommate about the situation. "I was able to open up and get some things off my chest," Stacey said. "I was able to get some support and advice from her.

Marching strong telling the government that they will no longer stand for the injustices suffered by their people. On one million Black men hearing and understanding the struggles of the women of Howard University.

And many more stories of unity and strength.

We respect each other; she's my best friend at school," Michele said. "We have a good relationship and we support each other."

There are many stories of unity and strength at Howard University. "Our hair is a part of our identity and we should be proud of it. We should not let anyone tell us how to style our hair or who we are," Stacey said.

"We have the power to make a difference and we should use it. We must stand up for what we believe in and fight for our rights. We are strong and we are beautiful. We are black women and we are proud."

A beef with peas: Vegan health activism

By Regentown Ram

First of a four-part series

Health-conscious consumers are discarding their “beef patties, protein, bacon, cheese” for low-fat burgers, garden salads, and consumption. And spiritual quests to halt use of vegetarians, refrain from philosophy, incorporating a moral everything but red meat (cattle chemicals, unbleached sugars and flours, and tofu, a soy bean product.

Injured Bison out for the season

By Delroy K. Gissendanner

Staff Writer

White, a redshirt freshman, will be replaced by junior Alfonzo "Pep" White, who has a number of times in last game and showed signs of recovery.

"He complained about it a little after the game," said Marlow, "but we think he'll be fine for tomorrow's game." Marlow said White had a strain in his back and was taken out of the game.

The Bison offense is still struggling and looking for a spark to get back on track.

The defense is also struggling and will have to step up against a strong Alcorn State offense.

The Bison face a tough test against Alcorn State on Saturday and will be looking for a bounce-back performance.

Bison face Alcorn State Braves in Circle City

By Kaevy Pogue

Staff Writer

The Bison are looking to make a statement against Alcorn State, who are coming off a loss to Jackson State.

"We need to play as a team and execute our game plan," said Coach Steve Williams. "If we can do that, we'll be in good shape against Alcorn State."

On the Merrill Lynch Fast Track

For decades Merrill Lynch has been the leading U.S. brokerage firm. One in five affluent American investors name Merrill Lynch as their brokerage firm. Total assets under management now exceed $500 billion globally.

We at Merrill Lynch have built our leadership position through a client-driven marketing strategy. We stay abreast of changes in world demographics and investor needs, then respond with new products and services well before the rest of the marketplace.

Now Merrill Lynch invites a small group of outstanding 1996 college and MBA graduates to share in that success by pursuing a unique career opportunity in its Private Client organization.

The Private Client Development Program offers challenging positions in one of the Merrill Lynch Private Client business units (units key to maintaining our competitive edge — where your contribution to our success is significant.

Under the guidance of a senior manager, you work in product development, marketing or finance areas. You meet with senior management to discuss firm strategy and participate in task force projects to aid various business units in meeting their strategic objectives. Formal classes address career development issues and enhance your leadership skills. You are given responsibility, accountability, and the experience needed to help you succeed throughout your Merrill Lynch career.

Candidates for the program have outstanding records of academic, extracurricular and work experience achievements. They are interested in the challenge of the fast-paced financial services industry and want to be recognized for their accomplishments.

The Merrill Lynch Private Client group is offering an unparalleled opportunity to excel. If you have the talent, creativity, drive and commitment to be a winner, this is an opportunity that can make a difference in your career.
