Students take forefront in Million Man March

By Reginald Royston

It's true, it's true, you couldn't hear it in the background of the cheers, but there it was. It was a new era. Million Man March was upon us, and it was time to take a stand for what we believe in.

The march, which would last for several hours, brought together millions of people from all walks of life. They stood together, united in their cause, and their voices echoed across the streets of D.C. It was a powerful sight to see.

As I watched the crowd grow, I couldn't help but feel a sense of pride. These were our brothers, our sisters, our friends, and our family, all coming together to make a difference. It was a moment that I will never forget.

As the sun began to set, the crowd started to disperse. But the spirit of the Million Man March lived on. It was a reminder that we are stronger together, and that we can make a difference in the world.

Former employees sue University for improper firing practices

As a result of restructuring efforts that led to 400 employees lost last fall, 10 former Howard University workers have filed a civil suit against the University.

The suits were filed in the District Court for the District of Columbia.

The discharged employees, represented by Andrew H. Swygert, president of the university, and others and for $25 million in damages.

Howard University has been given the opportunity to respond to the suit, and they have 20 days to respond.

Students say ACUS fee still ‘ridiculous’

Despite telephone forums, bills remain the same while other colleges

“Howard needs to get rid of the fee or lower it. Surrounding schools are paying $19 or less a month so why is Howard charging $30?”

-Ronnell Douglas

By Lisa Prince

In comparison to other local and outlying universities, Howard students say the phone bills they receive are far too high. When students began to receive bills, a senior majoring in psychology at Howard University felt so strongly about the issue that he said he felt he was being overcharged on his official student ID that students pay $.09 a minute and that students majoring in psychology at Howard University worked for AT&T,” said Villanueva.

“Toward’s greatest asset is to help maintain and improve the facilities for graduate students. We have a good record of helping their professional development, Lambert said. “I see it as a way of helping our students improve their careers as college teachers.”

Leo Lambert, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse, speaks to graduate students about teaching methods with an emphasis on innovative use of technology. “We embrace affirmative action in the classroom,” he said.

The conference on teaching and building a strong student/teacher relationship was a conclusion. Lambert expressed the importance of graduate education and making connections with other universities. He said, “We need to start thinking about this issue in a broader context.”

The museum, which was dedicated in February, 1936, as “The Preservation of a Meritage,” was created to preserve the history of Howard University. The museum has an average of long hours and a lot of work but it’s worth the time and the effort,” said one graduate student.

Losing the conference was a disappointment, Lambert said. “I think the conference was very positive,” he said. “It gave us an opportunity to show our students that the conference was very positive.”

Graduate students receive valuable teaching advice

Graduate students at the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse, the Hilltop Staff Writer, received valuable teaching advice from Leo Lambert, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse. Lambert said, “We want to start thinking about this issue in a broader context.”

Lambert explained that Wisconsin-La Crosse is a private university and that they have a lot of student turnout. However, Lambert mentioned that the university is under pressure to cut costs and that graduate students are being asked to take on more responsibilities. He said, “We need to start thinking about this issue in a broader context.”

Technology conference turnesf disappointment to science

In an effort to help African Americans achieve success through the latest advances in technology, the Howard University School of Engineering sponsored an “Empowerment Through Technology” conference this past weekend, but discovered that African Americans seem to have little interest in new technology. It was discovered that African Americans seem to have little interest in new technology.

“The conference was very positive,” Lambert said. “I think the conference was very positive.”

But Lambert said he made the decision to lower the fees on the beginning of each semester, rather than the beginning of the year. “Every one can come and spend as much time as you want, but the final images were not completed,” he said. “We’ve got time to do it.”

Marchers urged to maintain spirit of responsibility

By Chyna Gamii
Hilltop Staff Writer

The Million Man March hosted a number of speakers who delivered many powerful messages. Now that the historic March is over, everyone is out to know what’s going to happen next. Was the March a symbol or was it to precede change?

For most of the Howard participants, the March became a time that would allow Black men to appreciate themselves and one another. Although the March became a special event they were proud to be a part of. They now hope to carry that spirit to happen next.

Native American Native American Carrie and Valerie Norris were excited to be part of the Million Man March. The Native American girls said, "We all Black men to accept responsibility."

"I believe it’s up to every Black man to make a difference," said Spencer Stephens, a junior majoring in telecommunications management. "J cannot believe that the Black man needs unity and self-respect in order to march lodges."

"The greatest thing that happened at the March was the emotional and spiritual cleansing."

Women's Expo includes information, food, entertainment.

By Yvonne Smith

"Something for Everv Woman" Lockheed, known for its annual Women's Expo, held on October 20, 1995, gave women a chance to learn more about their health. With everything from pampered us an d entertainment to education, the event was a success.

Several booths were set up with the help of Shoppers Food Warehouse. These included suppliers such as Daisy, which featured special offers on their products. Shoppers also arranged several on-site cooking classes in which women could learn about healthy recipes.

Health-conscious women found booths devoted to breast cancer awareness and prevention. A woman's ashalt was filled with information on how to prevent and detect breast cancer early. Other booths focused on prenatal care and parenting, providing resources for expectant mothers.

Unity Nation sponsors landmark conference on Black Holocaust, chastises University of Maryland

By Nadine K. Moore

A 1,200-person capacity was filled with Black power and pride as Unity Nation sponsored the annual Black Holocaust conference. The second annual Black Holocaust conference was held on October 20, 1995, at the University of Maryland, College Park.

The conference was organized by Unity Nation, a national organization for the upliftment and unity of Black people. The conference was attended by hundreds of people, including Unity Nation leaders and members of the Black community.

As expected, the keynote speaker was Reverend Jeremiah Wright, Jr., a prominent Black leader. Wright spoke about the importance of acknowledging the Black Holocaust and its impact on the Black community.

The conference also featured several panel discussions on various topics related to the Black Holocaust, such as the role of the media in perpetuating the narrative of the Black Holocaust.

The conference was a success, and Unity Nation plans to host a similar event in the future.

Death at Niagara Falls

A 13-year-old girl from Connecticut was killed at the American Falls in Niagara Falls, N.Y., on Saturday. The girl, who had been swimming with her family, was reported missing after entering the water.

The body of the girl was found floating in the water at about 11:30 a.m. The family said they had been swimming with the girl the day before.

The family was reported missing by the National Park Service, which said they were swimming at about 11:30 a.m. They had been swimming with the girl the day before.

The girl had been with her family at the falls, the family said. They said she had been with a group of people who were swimming with her.

"We're just heartbroken," said the mother of the girl, who had been with her at the falls. "She was such a sweet girl."
Dear Howard Community,

For weeks now we have been asking you to "Get Up With The Vibe." As you know Homecoming is eagerly anticipated and awaited at the dawn of every new school year.

In the spring semester as the executive staff was being selected and the event coordinators were being chosen, a new university president was appointed. Administrative processes were being amended, and the media was constantly nipping at the heels of the University's reputation. CHANGE HAD TO COME.

Recognizing Homecoming's mission in its most naked form - reunion - hence renewal a theme resonating this truth had to be given life. When fast-forwarding to the present, we are renewed through the events of the past week. The Million Man March. An event as spiritual and soul stirring as this serves to make us over and transform of our theme into a mission!

"Positive Vibrations: The Spirit Awakens" was our only choice, thus we've remained convinced and committed. This upcoming week we ask that you take the charge and support your fellow classmates, peers, and friends by catching the positive vibration and renewing your spirit. How? Join us this week in support, respect, and love of our historic institution. Laugh, dance, fellowship, and cheer at all the events that have been planned just for you and by you.

In closing, we challenge you to meet others members of our SU family and visiting friends, either one of the 49 students visiting from Canada, one of the high school students traveling from Philadelphia, celebrate with the members of the 1975 class or Dr. Cheney, an "alum," who is bringing her 17 year old daughter from Orlando. Fla. And when you do, write us or drop by room 116 and tell us all about your experience.

Thank You.

Homecoming concert needs to take note from this March

Dear Editor:

Did anyone notice the irony between this year's Homecoming concert—Positive Vibrations—and the headline or the hip-hop element? Might Marywood be?

Unfortunately, the Homecoming Concert Committee failed to notice this. They asked students to pick who they wanted to see. Unfortunately, none of the student's top choices, which included the headliners Positive Vibrations, Roots or KRS-One?

Do you care about the students' views? Or were these decisions made for the students? We propose the following: have the students vote on the concert acts, instead of us dictating who they should listen to.

Marywood, a university, was supposed to offer an inclusive and diverse platform. This year, Positive Vibrations was the only act that was up for vote, while artists like Roots and KRS-One were not even mentioned.

How can we expect students to engage with the music if they are not given the opportunity to choose what they want to listen to? It seems like we are encouraging students to disengage with the concert if they are not given a say in the artists.

Sincerely,

[Student's Name]

On the eve of the Million Man March, it is ironic that the men of power and respect was a clientele of Howard's journalism students, who were waiting for the latest developments from the school's campus. The students were divided in their opinions on the event. Some viewed it as a positive step towards unity, while others feared it could lead to violence and disorder. The March was of particular interest to Howard University, which has a history of activism and social justice. The university's journalism students were tasked with covering the event, and there were concerns about how the story would be framed.

I will not tolerate the endorsement of degrading views that women have fought so vehemently against.

Central James Simpson verdict: In the wake of the O.J. Simpson trial, many rappers have depicted their own struggles and those of their community. However, there has been a disconnect between the two, as many rappers fail to realize that their art reflects their own lives and opinions. Many rappers portray themselves as victims of racism and discrimination, but they often fail to acknowledge the role they play in perpetuating these views.

Simpson verdict symbol of triumph for Blacks

Natalie Y. Moore

As a草莓 community, we are obliged to involve ourselves in some level in the process of rehabilitating our reputation. We are not the only group who has suffered from stereotypes about our intelligence and inabilities. Many rappers, however, have continued to perpetuate these negative images. We need to band together in reject these stereotypes and ensure that our voices are heard.

Rap music gives narrow definition of Black womanhood

Katrina Kearney

Rap music by definition is Webster's Dictionary writing of "music in a variety of rhythms and styles. A modern rap is a form of poetry with a rhyming and rhythm." However, in the realm of Black women's representation, rap music has a narrow definition. Many rap songs portray Black women as hypersexualized and objectified. This has led to a lack of respect for Black women's boundaries and autonomy.

Howard University, you know, has many it very hard on students, specifically, just as in communications, lack of professionalism in the School of Communications. We are supposed to stay loyal to Howard University. We need to take a look at ourselves, but Howard University is worth the money, the time, and frustration.

Every year I have to convince myself that Howard University is worth the money, the time, and frustration.

Students express diverse perceptions on profanity

Do's and Don'ts

To diversify the language that students use,

Watch your mouth!

Students express diverse perceptions on profanity

by Patricia Hardin

Hilltop Staff Writer

"I'm going to get you sucka, you dirty motherfer! Don't you ever say someone's name again!"

This was a quote from one of the students, expressing his potential use of profanity.

Profanity is a common phenomenon that occurs in various contexts,

such as among friends, family,

and even in public places.

The use of profanity is often seen as a form of communication that can either be offensive or amusing, depending on the context and the person.

Some students see profanity as a way to express their feelings, especially when dealing with difficult situations.

They believe that it is a way to vent their frustrations and emotions.

However, others view profanity as unnecessary and potentially harmful.

For many students, there is a balance between using profanity and avoiding it, depending on the situation.

Some students believe that profanity is a natural part of language, while others view it as a form of everyday communication.

The use of profanity can impact relationships and social norms, and it is important for students to consider the consequences

when using profanity.

In conclusion, the use of

profanity is a complex

phenomenon that varies among students. It is up to each individual to decide how they will use profanity and whether it is appropriate in a given context.

Women take on the Million Man March

Those who stayed home, those who attended, the few who ignored it

The perception of Black women about the Million Man March was mixed, but some saw it as a positive force. The March was organized to support the men who were participating in the event.

Women took on the Million Man March.

For the most part, many Howard

University students expressed mixed feelings about the Million Man March.

Some were excited and eager to participate, while others were 皈 The March became more than a meeting place for the Black man. For many families, the March brought them together.

Men, women, and children walked hand in hand through the

March. As President Barack

Obama spoke, a sense of history swept through the air.

Women were supposed to be the presence of women at the March.

A Black female student who was there shared her story.

"I wanted to see what I recorded during the March. I didn't think anyone would see the footage even though we weren't invited."

An amazing aspect of the March was the diversity of participants, including women.

Thousands of women marched down Pennsylvania Avenue in honor of Black men.

The March was a powerful statement against violence and in support of Black men.

Good Luck!
Strange Days" visually entertaining, but underdeveloped

"Strange Days" is a futuristic thriller about the near future in a city that is divided into several neighborhoods, each with its own identity and culture. The film explores themes of technology, society, and the human condition. However, the narrative is linear and lacks depth, making it difficult to engage with the characters and their motivations. The film's visual style is striking, with a lot of neon lights and dark colors, creating a moody and atmospheric atmosphere. Overall, "Strange Days" is an entertaining film, but it could have benefited from more character development and a stronger narrative structure.

Economic independence theme of the march

Participants of the Million Man March make a bold statement by raising dollar bills and passing them from hand to hand, shouting "economic independence."

Ted Turner completes Time Warner merger for $7.5 billion

The sounds of clocks echoed throughout the nation asutherford ran TV's historic Million Man March. Turner, who wanted everything from T-shirts to food and souvenirs for the march, has been moving fast to make sure that he doesn't miss any steps of the journey toward Black economic independence.

Turner will continue to run Turner Broadcasting operation, and is considering taking control of HBO. Time Warner will gain approval of the deal, which Turner is expected to use as a step toward Black economic independence.

Bitter T-shirt vendor accuses Chavis of 'terrible planning'

By Akilia Selomon

The Million Man March turned out to be a bitter experience for some vendors, especially those who sold T-shirts. However, some vendors, like the one who sold the official Million Man March T-shirts, didn't have a good experience. They had to pay the organizers a huge sum of money for the shirts.

Two-way pager simplifies communication

By Tina-Renee Johnson

Two-way pagers are a big hit among business people, especially those who have to communicate with each other. The pager system allows people to send and receive messages quickly and efficiently. With a two-way pager, people can communicate with each other without having to worry about the time it takes to send a message.

Vegan lifestyle: vehicle for spiritual growth

By Reginald Hoyton
Staff Writer

At the Eisenhower Center on Sunday morning, it was not unusual to see a small, but well-organized presence. The group, which is composed of many factors including the local vegan community and local activists, was holding a protest against the eating of meat as it relates to animal suffering.

The main issue of concern is that many meat products are not organically grown or produced, which can lead to a variety of health problems. The group also expressed concern about the conditions in which animals are raised for food, which is often cruel and inhumane.

The protest was held outside of the local meat processing plant, and it was attended by a small but passionate crowd. Many of the attendees were holding signs and handing out flyers to passersby, explaining their causes.

One of the attendees, a local vegan activist, said, "We believe that all animals should be treated with respect and kindness. It is our duty to advocate for their rights, and we will continue to do so until they are respected as the beings they are."
sports agent, alumnus discusses the business with students

By Kana Piggins

Staff Writer

It was an emotional reunion for African Americans in the nation's capital last Saturday night. But it was also a time of celebration, as Howard University hosted its annual Homecoming Reunion. The event, which attracted about 2,000 people enjoying music, food, and festivities, was a chance for former Howard students to reconnect with friends and reminiscence about their time on campus.

Among those present were some of the most successful alumni in the sports world. Riggins acknowledged that Howard was the school where he learned the essentials of the business, and he encouraged students to take advantage of the opportunities available to them.

The evening also featured a panel discussion on the challenges and opportunities facing athletes today. The panelists, including Riggins and other former Howard students, shared their experiences and offered advice to current students.

Riggins also emphasized the importance of education for athletes, as they navigate the often complex world of professional sports. He encouraged students to take advantage of the resources available to them at Howard, including the sports medicine and nutrition programs.

Throughout the evening, Riggins and other speakers acknowledged the contributions of the Howard community and expressed gratitude for the support they received during their time at Howard. The event was a testament to the strong bond between Howard University and its alumni.

Midnight Madness strikes Bison basketball fans

By Ririe Williams

Midnight Madness is a powerful experience for Howard University basketball fans. It is a time when the team's spirit is heightened, and the excitement of the season begins.

This year, Midnight Madness was held on Friday, October 19, and it was a tremendous event. The arena was packed, and the crowd was energized.

The Bison basketball team is led by head coach Mike McClenon, who has been with the program for several years. He is known for his energy and enthusiasm, and his team is reflected in the excitement of the fans.

Midnight Madness is not just a basketball event; it is a community gathering. It is a time when fans can come together to support their team and to celebrate the beginning of the season.

The event included a Midnight Madness video, which featured highlights from the previous season and introduced the new team. The team's coaches, players, and staff were on hand to speak to the crowd, and the energy was infectious.

Midnight Madness is a time of anticipation and excitement, and the fans are ready to support the Bison basketball team throughout the season. The energy and enthusiasm of the fans during Midnight Madness are a testament to the strength of the Howard University community.
