Monte Geddis and LaChanda Jenkins walk away with Mr. and Miss Howard titles

By Monica L. Lewis

For many first-year students, the idea of Mr. and Miss Howard can be a very daunting one. However, for Monte Geddis and LaChanda Jenkins, it was a thrill of a lifetime.

Geddis, a senior elementary education major, and Jenkins, a junior journalism major were the two guys who were selected last year. Geddis said that, while he was thrilled, he was also nervous about the pressure and expectations that came with the position.

Mr. Howard Pageant

Geddis, a former pageant contestant himself, said that he had a lot of respect for the pageant and the pageant contestants. He said that the pageant was a great way to showcase the talents and abilities of the students and it was a great way to bring the community together.

LaChanda Jenkins, Miss School of Communications and LaMonte Geddis, Mr. College of Arts and Sciences show their winning smiles following Tuesday's pageant.

Dr. James Nabrit was president of Howard University.

Mr. and Miss Howard will both do their best to promote the university and its values.

University president remembers homecomings past

By Annette Davis-Anglin

Thirty-four years ago this week, Howard University held its first homecoming festivities. Take a look back and see what made Howard special then and now.

That Was Then...

In 1961, the University's athletic teams were known as the Bison. The football team, the Bison, played in RFK Stadium. The Homecoming dance was entitled, "The Roaring 20's." Homecoming tickets were priced between $3.00 and $30.00.

This Is Now...

In 2017, the University's athletic teams are known as the Bison. The football team, the Bison, plays in RFK Stadium. The Homecoming dance is entitled, "The Prohibition Ball." Homecoming tickets are priced between $15.00 and $30.00.

Calvin Butts urges students to rise to the defense of Blacks

By Annette Davis-Anglin

Calvin Butts, a former Howard University student, urged students to rise to the defense of Blacks in a speech on campus.

Butt's speech was a call to action for students to stand up for their rights and the rights of others. He said that the University's history of discrimination and inequality must be addressed.

This is one of the most outstanding speakers in this nation, and he hasn't been heard enough.

Researchers look for new ways to handle ‘at-risk’ patients

By Natasha Lindsey

Faculty and staff at Howard University have received grants to research diabetes among different groups. The University’s endowment for diabetes research is very strong, and researchers are looking for new ways to deal with the disease.

The endowment was established in 1929, and it supports research on diabetes among various populations. The goal is to find ways to prevent and treat the disease.

Who is eligible:

1. People from all ethnic groups
2. Women with gestational diabetes

In February, Howard University and McKee-Francis will begin a new research project to develop a low-cost screening test for diabetes. The test will be used in developing countries to detect the disease early.

Dr. Cheatum, Chief of Endocrinology and Metabolism, said, "We need to find ways to prevent and treat diabetes in developing countries. Our test will help us to do that."
There's nothing embarrassing about trying to eat! students use food stamps to balance high cost of college

Howard University offers many courses with instructors who have a wealth of knowledge. From biology to Greek literature, Howard has a variety of classes to offer.

Howard's Office of Student Assistance for the real world, which is also known as the Office of Student Assistance for the Real World, provides financial assistance to students.

The purpose of this program is to teach the pure ways of life and religion. The classes are taught by a group of teachers, and the students are given an opportunity to learn about their beliefs.

The first step is to introduce the concept of meditation. According to Enkamat, the spirit is the highest level. Becoming aware of the seven spirits and their different levels is essential for meditation.

To delve into meditation, the mediator must be aware of his or her seven spirit levels. According to Enkamat, this awareness is a prerequisite for understanding the vehicle of expression for the individual mind.

The spirit levels range from physical to intellectual to the highest level, which is the mind.

Identifying the awareness of the seven spirit levels requires the knowledge of the concept of mindfulness.

There is only one consciousness for everything, and this is the mind.

Modern language department introduces Japanese, Korean courses

By Lutun Iyambo

Japanese and Korean are new languages offered in the Modern Languages Department at Howard University.

According to James Davis, Chair of the Modern Languages Department, the reason for introducing Japanese and Korean courses is to provide students with a broader range of language options.

Japanese and Korean courses are considered important for students who are interested in pursuing careers in business, science, or technology.

The Modern Languages Department at Howard University has a long history of introducing new language courses, and the introduction of Japanese and Korean courses is part of this tradition.

The Japanese and Korean courses are taught by experienced instructors who are knowledgeable about the cultures and languages.

The courses are open to students of all levels, and they are designed to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the languages.

Through these courses, students will gain a deeper understanding of the culture and history of Japan and Korea, and they will be better equipped to communicate with people from these countries.

The courses are offered on a regular basis, and they are an excellent opportunity for students who are interested in learning new languages.

The Modern Languages Department at Howard University is committed to providing students with a diverse range of language options, and the introduction of Japanese and Korean courses is an important step in this direction.

Annual Gospel concert awakens the spirit

By Patricia Alexander

John Moore from Columbia, MD. John Moore attended the Annual Gospel concert at Howard University, which uplifted the spirits of students and the community. The concert featured an array of Gospel tunes and performers, including the Howard University Community Choir, which was led by the dynamic Vickie Winans. Attendees were moved by the uplifting music and the powerful performances, which included the famous Winans family. The concert was a must-attend event for anyone interested in experiencing the joy and spirituality of Gospel music. Throughout the evening, a sense of community and togetherness was palpable, as the audience sang along and felt the spiritual energy of the concert. The Howard University Community Choir was joined by other choirs, including the Howard University Community Choir, which featured a talented performer, Sister Griggs. The concert was a homecoming for many students, who were reminded of their roots and the powerful impact of Gospel music. The concert ended with a rousing rendition of "Anyway You Bless," which left the audience feeling uplifted and inspired.
The Howard University Community Choir wishes to thank our dear "RHC" Family, both past and present, for your participation in the 1995 Homecoming Gospel Concert!!!

GOP propose budget cuts, District retains home rule

By Seidrade Chandler

The Washington Post

Last week, Senate Majority Republicans abandoned their initial plan to cut, the pay and perks of nearly 13,000 District government employees, including salaries and benefits of a package of other bills. Finally, the District has received some news about its future. Yes, however, they will still control District’s 1996 budget of $552 million.

The new agreement was made last week in a meeting with Mayor Marion Barry and GOP leaders at the Washington Post, and includes a package of other bills. According to Barry, one of the provisions of the agreement is that the District’s budget will be cut by 25% in 1996, and by 30% in 1997.

The Republican goal was to reduce the District’s budget to the level of 1990, when it was $380 million. The District’s budget is now $552 million, and the Republicans want to bring it down to $278 million, which is what it was in 1990.

However, Brown said that the District’s budget will be cut by 25% in 1996, and by 30% in 1997. The District’s budget is now $552 million, and the Republicans want to bring it down to $278 million, which is what it was in 1990.

Dear Student Body & University Community,

I hope this letter finds you in a joyous and festive spirit indicative of a Homecoming celebration. For those that have passed through Howard's doors this should be a time reminiscent of glorious days gone by at H. U. While alumni rekindle old acquaintances and present students cultivate new ones, I ask that each one of you take a moment to reflect on how far Howard has come but yet still how far we must go.

Since my last formal correspondence with you, the Howard University Student Association (HUSA) has labored successfully on a number of initiatives. Since September we have co-sponsored and sponsored events and programs such as: the 1st Annual Midnight Madness Basketball Game (to kick off the hoop season); an Affirmative Action Conference; Security Forums; and even Shuttle Service to the Homecoming Game. We have tried (and are still trying) to tackle tough issues such as adequate Security at Drew Hall, the Phone Charge for local service, and Requirements for Graduation with Honors among others.

In addition, as many of you are well aware, we have received national attention for our advocacy efforts with the Million Man March and our national rallies on Capital Hill against cuts to higher education. Personally, I have been afforded the opportunity to talk about Howard and black folks internationally, nationally and locally on the B.B.C. (British Broadcasting Company), Nightline, Newsweek, U.S. News & World Report, as well as other radio shows, talk shows, periodicals, and media outlets. Howard has been knocked so long, that it's time we knock back.

I would also like to commend Mr. H. Patrick Swygert on his unyielding fervor to make Howard the place it once was and soon can again become. The administration as a whole has availed themselves as instruments of change and they too should be applauded. Student organizations have also rallied in support of each other to make this first year of the Howard Renaissance, a most prosperous one. Most importantly the student body has been very supportive of my office and I am sure will continue to do so.

Although we have done well as a family, there is so much more we can do. Howard will only reach its full potential if all of its students, alumni, faculty, and staff merge together in support of this common effort. If we are to put a halt to our institution's degeneration then we must accept responsibility for transgressions of the past in order to improve the future for those that are yet to come.

Please stop by your Student Association (HUSA) office to find out what is going on-- there's a lot. Remember if we're not part of the solution we're part of the problem... change must start with us.

Dole's returned contribution a mistake

By Cathleen Harrington

One reason given by the Dole campaign for refusing the check was that the auto insurance company was the Leg Cabin's position on the issue of gays in the military.

But Dole's return of his contributions was seen by many as a political move, as he had originally made the contributions in an effort to get the Log Cabin to support his candidacy.

Sen. Robert Dole (R-Ka.) said, "I felt they were constituted with me on the matter, I would have accepted the donation.

Dole's decision to return the contributions has been controversial, with some accusing him of being insincere or politically motivated.

Abstract German photography depicts different facets of life.

The second family is a hardscrabble and illiterate one in Tokyo, Japan. The third family is of a German family, consisting of a father and mother with three children. In each picture, the family unity is supported.

James said however, that Smith's work did not display what she hoped to see.

"From the relationship of this photographer's work, the theme "Abundance and Presence," she added.

"Seeing clarity and depth of this photographer's work, the audience will be able to see the division between the old and the new."

The first three photographs are of a mountain range that lead to large and even more extensive portions of the area. The second set of photographs are of a mountain range that is reminiscent of the United States.

"This is a beautiful day to enjoy the outdoors and to be surrounded by the beauty of the forest."

The Institute offers people a chance to learn about African-Hispanic culture and what Black Africans from upper Egypt in the 7th and 8th centuries B.C.

"I am a professor of Afro-Hispanic literature. Presently, I am in the position of Associate Professor of African-American History."

"I think it is important to study the life and work of Black women, and that Black women in the Afro-Hispanic world are represented in the literature."

"The Institute serves as a platform for the study of people who are of African descent and who have lived in the United States."

"This is a critical first step in bringing together the African and Hispanic cultures."

The Institute offers people the chance to understand the differences between the African and Hispanic cultures.

The Institute also offers research opportunities and publishes books and articles about African-Hispanic studies.
Alumni apathy clouds H.U.'s financial picture as Howard Inn closes

It is reassuring to know that when many alumni...in the form of financial contributions. Such contributions have been few and renewal of spirit can cause some alumni to give back to the University in the form of financial contributions from alumni contributions.

"Per cent of our budget is provided by federal appropriations from Congress. This allows the possibility to have a large in the annual budget. This has been the situation that determines the amount of money the Howard University has received through the University Fund. While this does not mean all alumni contributions.

The hotel has been home to many celebrities, but most poor, elderly, while others' priorities paint a bleak future for America. Congress claims that there is simply not enough money to continue these programs. Yet, even these programs which call for a decrease in federal appropriations that could adversely affect Howard University, has been vetoed by the President recently. In the 1957, 1959, and 1977, the United States spent millions of dollars on the Howard Inn. Since the hotel has been functioning for over one million Black community.

Letter to the Editor: History must reflect March correctly

Dear Editor,

The Million Man March proved to be one of the most important events of the year. The Million Man March was an event that brought attention to the issues of black poverty and discrimination. The march was organized by Jesse Jackson, and it took place in Washington, D.C., on October 16, 1995.

Throughout the years, the Million Man March has been criticized for its lack of focus on the larger issues of poverty and discrimination. However, it is important to remember that this event was a powerful statement against social injustice and discrimination.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
What black middle class? BMW pushers’ part of problem, not solution

The movement focused on extrajudicial violence, economic conditions, and discrimination led to a surge in the national consciousness. The Black middle class emerged, characterized by its economic success and its role in politics. However, this success was often at the expense of the Black working class, who were pushed further into poverty.

In the 1960s, the Black middle class began to coalesce as a political force. This was facilitated by the Civil Rights Movement, which brought national attention to the plight of Black people. The middle class was able to mobilize resources and political power to support the movement.

The Black middle class also became involved in political organizing, including the creation of organizations like the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP). These organizations worked to combat discrimination and promote civil rights.

However, there were also challenges faced by the Black middle class. Despite some gains in terms of economic and political power, they often faced resistance and opposition from those who benefited from the status quo.

In the 1970s, the Black middle class began to face new challenges, including the rise of neoliberalism and the decline of the welfare state. These factors threatened the gains made by the Black middle class and set the stage for the rise of a new political force.

The Black middle class played a key role in the development of the Black bourgeoisie, which emerged as a new political force in the 1980s. The bourgeoisie was characterized by its wealth and political influence, and it became a powerful force in framing the political agenda.

The Black bourgeoisie was able to use its resources to influence politics and policy, including the creation of new political parties and the support of candidates. This helped to shift the political landscape and set the stage for the rise of a new generation of Black leaders.

In the 1990s, the Black bourgeoisie began to face新的 challenges, including the rise of globalization and the decline of manufacturing jobs. These factors threatened the gains made by the bourgeoisie and set the stage for the emergence of a new political force.

The Black bourgeoisie played a key role in the development of the Black liberation movement, which emerged in the 1960s and 1970s. This movement was characterized by its focus on social justice and its commitment to ending oppression.

Talk is Cheap

Battle of the sleaze TV talk shows intensifies

By Natalie Y. Moore

My former roommate, Krista, is a talk show aficionado. She always called me when there was a new talk show to talk about. She would ask me what my thoughts were and if I had seen it. She was always interested in what I had to say.

Krista wakes up with them and she never misses an episode. She is obsessed with these hyper-sound talk shows. She doesn't care if it's fake, she just wants to hear the voice of the host. She has become so immersed in the world of talk shows that it has become a part of her daily routine. She checks the listings in the morning to see which shows are on.

The floor we lived on last year-teenage moms who have been pregnant not once, twice, but three times, and become overwhelmed with anger, leading to just about anything.

A secret homosexual crush led to the death of Scott Amedure last March. His heterosexual object of affection, Jon Schmitz, left "The Jenny Jones Show" humiliated. Three days later, he shot Amedure.

"It's a chance for self-representation. It's a free chance to be on TV. Producing crap off of the lower class.

Sometimes the exploitation works both ways. Print said.

"People are aware shows are using them. But they are using the shows as a vehicle for their own purposes," Print said.

"My man is a Don Juan," aroused the curiosity of faith-foolish viewers. But Amedure was not interested in faith-healing; he wanted to be a star. He was tired of being a nobody, and he didn't care about being on the lowest rung of the ladder. He just wanted to be famous.

"Look, they're gross!" she yelled. "They're not normal. You can tell it's fake."

Both shows are geared towards the lowest common denominator. They use topics that are designed to appeal to the most base of human desires. They use sensationalism to attract viewers.

Talk show personality

Patricia Print, Ph.D., has national Public Intimacies (Hampton Press, 1991) about further talk show talk guests. She has also explored the dynamics of talk show audiences. Print became intrigued by the reasons people go on talk shows and wrote her dissertation for the University of Georgia (Atlanta).

"Talk shows drive sex and social bar, but are now going to lower classes people. We watch them mindlessly," she said.

The Wayans Brothers talk about Howard, realities of the film industry

By Benjamin Johnson

The Wayans Brothers grew up in the world of film and television. The brothers, Keenen, Marlon, Shawn and Craig, are all well-known actors and writers. The Wayans have been involved in the film industry for over 20 years, and have contributed to many films and TV shows.

Marlon Wayans credits the film industry with giving him the opportunity to express himself and tell his own story. "I think that's what's so great about being in the film industry," he said. "You have the ability to create something and share it with the world."

When asked about the challenges of being a black filmmaker, Marlon said, "It's not always easy. There are a lot of obstacles to overcome, but I think the biggest challenge is the fear of failure. You have to be willing to take risks and put yourself out there." "But at the end of the day, it's all worth it," he added. "I love what I do, and I'm grateful for the opportunity to do it.""}

The Wayans Brothers and John Singleton

John Singleton is a director, producer, and screenwriter who is best known for his film "Poetic Justice," which was released in 1993. Singleton is one of the most successful filmmakers of his generation, and has been a influential figure in the film industry.

Singleton spoke about the importance of telling stories that are important to him and that he believes will resonate with audiences. "I think it's important to tell stories that are personal to you," he said. "If you're passionate about something, people will feel that passion and they'll be more invested in the story." "I think that's what makes the difference," he added. "When you're passionate about something, you're more likely to be successful in it."

Danny Hoch in "Some People"

By Adrienne N. Hiltop Staff Writer

Danny Hoch is fascinated by the Caribbean. Hoch frequently quotes from the island nation, Hoch's gives a different spin to the channel like they're being played in New York. Hoch is quintessentially New York as he says, "I'm not going to try to be someone else. I'm going to be myself." While at home, he likes to watch reruns of old TV shows such as "Happy Days" and "The Cosby Show." Hoch's humor and wit strike a chord in his solo theater performance "Some People." Becoming a More Economically Literate Woman

Jolene Godfrey, author of No More Frogs to Kiss, offers ten tips to help young females become more economically literate:

1. Learn comparison shopping that focuses on prices and quality.
2. Subscribe to a general-interest business publication.
3. Subscribe to an online-interest service.
4. Observe another making negotiations on a car or other major purchase.
5. Open and use a checking account.
6. Choose a female role model—a doctor, lawyer, etc.
7. Keep an address book to build a networking system.
8. Play the stock market with imaginative investments.
10. Say planning aloud, budget picking seven times each week, and enjoy the work and money left over.

Millions of dollars in scholarships, fellowships, grants, internships, work study programs and special student aid funds go unused every year because students simply don't know where to apply or how to get their share.

The secret in locating money for college, lies in your strategy. You need step-by-step information on what aid is available and how you can get it. The time to apply is now! You can apply as early as your junior year in high school, or during your undergraduate or graduate study. Aid can be used at any accredited college or trade school.

This Directory will provide information for Students or Individuals wishing or attending high schools, business schools, technical schools, graduate schools, law schools, medical schools, vocational institutions, undergraduate schools, research programs, and leadership programs.

Corporations, Trusts, Foundations, Religious Groups and other Organizations offer Scholarships, Fellowships, Grants, Internships, and Work Study Programs to students annually, regardless of grades or parents income levels.

Career Opportunities

SAS Institute Inc. is one of the world’s largest independent software development companies. With a customer renewal rate of over 90% and an employee retention rate better than five times the industry average, SAS Institute lives up to high standards of satisfaction. SAS Institute offers a progressive atmosphere, with excellent benefits and competitive salaries. With offices in major cities across the U.S., our headquarters is a campus-like setting nestled in North Carolina between Raleigh and the Research Triangle Park, a location that offers unique educational, cultural, and recreational opportunities.

The Institute offers entry-level positions for college graduates in the areas of research and development, software testing, technical support, and quality assurance. If you seek professional growth and the chance to put your creativity to the test, we invite you to explore the opportunities available to you at SAS Institute.

You are invited to attend an information session and reception hosted by SAS Institute immediately following the regularly scheduled NESBE meeting in the Lewis K. Downing Building, Engineering Library, C.O.R.L. Society members are invited to attend.

For more information, contact your campus representative at the National Society of Black Engineers.
