Howard Students Plan a Thanksgiving Day Dinner

By Candie Alfons
Hilltop Staff Writer

Thanksgiving is here and while some Howard University students will be looking forward to going home for the Thanksgiving holiday, some are just looking forward to the break.

Many students feel that Thanksgiving is a time when people come together to be thankful for family, good health, and anything else that is worth rejoicing for.

"I miss my family and a lot has happened with me in the past four months, so this break is long overdue," sophomore Bradley Williams said. "Thanksgiving calls for a time to regroup and to be thankful for all the good things that I have."

Although Howard University gives a two-day break, some students left as early as last Friday. "I don't leave for Winter Break until Monday instead of Wednesday because I don't leave for Winter Break until Monday instead of Wednesday because I don't want to wait around for the holidays," sophomore Joel Johnson said.

International student Monte Thorne is one student who will be keeping to her room due to the increasing cost in airfare.

"I am extremely excited about the success of the counter and this event," Executive Secretary of the School of Student and Academic Affairs Anthony Wright said. "We have been working extremely hard all semester and have managed to use all of our resources."

For the School of Business, Friday night's inspiring event, which was held at the Capital Hilton on 16th Street, highlighted the culmination of a week of activities.

The highlight of the evening was a stirring address given by keynote speaker ESPN's Rachel Nichols who spoke on hard work, determination and belief in self above all else if one is to be successful.

On Friday afternoon, the General Motors Foundation donated $60,000 for endowments such as scholarships for students in the School of Engineering, Architecture, and Computer Sciences and the 21st Century Engineering Advancement Program in the School of Business.

Ed Wellborn, General Motors Vice President of Design for North America, presented the check to an appreciative President Patrick E. Boggs.

In his opening remarks, Senator described Wellborn as "a man who, through his work, has made the impossible and turn it into the probable, which became the dream and eventual- ly a reality."

Throughout Wellborn's tenure at GM, he has designed Oldsmobile Indy pace vehicles, helped design the Oldsmobile Regency. In fact, according to GM President/Manager Del Dabbs, "everything that you see from GM is done by General Motors.

Members of the Howard University Showtime marching band eagerly anticipated the possibility of performing in the Honda Battle of the Bands last Monday. However, Howard did not make the final cut of the Battle of the Bands.

"I was disappointed," sophomore music business major Jarius Howe said. "The concert was eagerly anticipated by the MEAC competition. It would have been nice to go back to my home state."

The bands that were selected included Johnson C. Smith University, Virginia State University, Savannah State University, Alabama State University, Bethune-Cookman College, Florida A&M University, Howard University, Tennessee State University, Tennessee State University. Each of the 12 schools selected received $20,000 towards their scholarship fund.

"An uplifting, inspiring opus of triumph and self-esteem of concern for the public," the last Sunday afternoon marked the launching of the annual Health Awareness Fair, which took place in the West Towers community room. The Health Fair, directed by graduate social psychology major Carl Pollard, was impetuous for students to learn important health issues and make them aware of their body. Students who participated in this fair were given pamphlets, lubricants, and information about the fair. "Every day, the temptation rate increases because of the different notions people have about seeking help," Pollard said. "But, it's not that people don't want to ask for help—just can't afford it." This fair also included a health fair to be very beneficial.

On Friday afternoon, Ann Coffin, a senior political science major, delivered the keynote address at the Howard University Community Choir’s annual Thanksgiving Concert. During her speech, Coffin reminded the audience that Thanksgiving is a day that should be celebrated with respect, as many individuals who are not fortunate enough to be in the United States at this time have been victims of war or threats of war.

Coffin noted that over the years, the Thanksgiving holiday has become a day of celebration for many people. However, she pointed out that the day should not be celebrated without recognizing the sacrifices made by those who have fought for our country.

Coffin’s speech highlighted the importance of remembering those who have served our country and the sacrifices they have made. She also emphasized the need to appreciate the freedoms we enjoy today, which were fought for by past generations.

The concert featured a diverse range of music, including classical, jazz, and contemporary selections. The performance was a tribute to the sacrifices made by those who have fought for our country and the importance of remembering their legacy.

The concert was a powerful reminder of the significance of Thanksgiving, and the importance of recognizing those who have fought for our country and the sacrifices they have made.

Eminem Accused of Racism

Rapper Eminem has been accused of racism after comments he made on his album "The Marshall Mathers LP." In the song "Crack a Bottle," Eminem raps about how much he values being black and how it influences his music.

Eminem's lyrics have been criticized for being insensitive and offensive. Some have argued that the rapper's comments are a form of blackface and that they perpetuate negative stereotypes about black people.

Eminem has responded to the criticism, saying that he doesn't think he's racist and that his music is a reflection of his personal experiences.

However, many people have defended the rapper, arguing that his music is a form of self-expression and that it should be respected as such.

Signature Drive Set Up to Oust Chavez

By Sean Jackman

Hilltop Staff Writer

In yet another turn in Venezuela's political jungle, different groups are trying to exercise their political rights by holding signature drives. If you are unfamiliar with Venezuela's political landscape, here are the latest events, fait accompli, and what it all means.

On 28th June, a group of opposition parties called for a signature drive in order to force the government to hold a referendum on President Chavez's proposal to rewrite the constitution. The proposal has been met with widespread opposition, and the government has agreed to hold a referendum on the proposal.

The opposition parties have been calling for a referendum on the proposal for several months, and the government has agreed to hold one as a result of the pressure from the opposition.

The government has agreed to hold the referendum on 28th October, and the opposition has called for a national strike on the same day. The opposition has also called for a national protest on the same day.

If the referendum is held, it is likely to be a close vote, and the government is expected to lose. The government has been trying to prevent the referendum from being held, but it seems that the opposition is determined to hold one.

The Free Trade Area of America (FTAA) is an international business deal that would create the world's largest free market zone, affecting 450 million people and 59 trillion in terms of real income. The two economic heavyweights involved, in the long run it will probably result in self embargo.

Stakes, as always, are very high as we are the last to get home faster than the cars. The mode of transport is also cheaper and prevents overloading, as only three passengers can take the horse at a time.

Fourteen people have been arrested in Zimbabwe for circulating an email calling for President Robert Mugabe to resign. The government-controlled state newspaper says the email urged people to take part in protests on Monday.

It is not clear how the police found the email, but the state security services have been trying to outlaw such messages.

The 14 have all been released on bail after police reports.

The email allegedly called for people to take part in "Non-violent demonstrations and efforts to pull Robert Mugabe out of office."

It complained, among other issues, of hyper-inflation, high unemployment, shortages of goods and services, and propaganda of the radio, TV and newspapers.

1. A New Computer

At this point, but almost any new computer will serve the basic day-to-day needs of the average Internet surfer, paper wrangler, file manager, and e-mailer. Furthermore, this Christmas will be in the first wave of new computers manufactured by a supplier that has not been bought or leased by the manufacturer. Even so, the less than $400 cost is the lowest price yet for the version with the Windows operating system.

2. A Personal Digital Assistant (PDA)

What is a PDA? A PDA is a hand-held computer designed for personal use. All of the computer programs you may be familiar with can be found on a PDA. Your PDA can download music or your appointment book, all of which are stored on your computer. You may wonder what a PDA is for. It is more popular than ever. Palm Pilot is a hand-held device that is an example of a PDA. Technically, the Palm Pilot is a PDA made by Palm Inc. Because the Palm Pilot is the newest PDA on the market, the more you find about PDA's, the better you will find out about the Palm Pilot.

3. MP3 Player

Do you like music? If you have an iPod, you already have an MP3 player. For those of you not familiar with MP3, it is a compressed standard for digital music. Although MP3 files are made to be played on computers, they sound indistinguishable from regular CD. iPodMP3 players have very popular among young people. So if you do not have one, you should definitely think about getting one.

4. USB Drive

Universal Serial Bus (USB) devices are the newest killer duds. If you have ever used a computer, you have probably used a USB port for something.

Stay Solid Despite Competition

Over the last year, despite the downturn in the economy, Timberland's sales have held steady. This is a testament to the quality and design of the shoes. Stay away from credit cards, they are a definite buzzkill, but there is a change on them if you have your heart set. Many cards offer a low interest rate, but be very careful with what you spend.

Dover, Del.—The Howard University defense shut down touchdowns and Janmar Grant's handoffs from USM quarterback. The Bisons played well in a game with a 21-16 win over Delaware State in a Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference contest at Alumna Stadium.

In a go, that was remarkable, the number of penalties (zero) and a fake punt (false start) in the first half by the Danes that dominated the offense. But the Bison defense, which had scored seven touchdowns and seven field goals in their previous four games, was a welcome relief. It was a big win for the Bisons.
Dear Howard University student athlete,

Do you feel that you are receiving the proper equipment for your sport? Do you feel that your team gets what they need when they need it, and are you able to keep what you receive?

I ask these questions because they are important. Equipment is a big part of the game, whether you are talking about football, basketball, or any other sport. Without the proper equipment, you may not be able to perform at your best. And if you can't perform at your best, you may not be able to contribute to your team's success.

I understand that getting the proper equipment can be a challenge. Sometimes, it seems like you never get what you need. And when you do get it, it may not be the right size or the right color. But it is important to keep fighting for what you need, because you deserve it.

I also know that sometimes you have to make do with what you have. But you should never have to settle for less than the best. And if you can't get what you need, you should speak up and let your coaches and administrators know.

I believe that every student athlete deserves the best equipment. And I believe that every team deserves the best equipment. So let's keep fighting for what we need. And let's keep pushing for change. Because we deserve it.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
This season, Jack must replace his top two scorers from last year, senior forwards Andrew Mathews and Mathew Ross, who combined for 24 points per game last season and played integral roles in the Eagles' all-decade scoring record with 1,413 points.

However, Jack knows that he can rely on his team's senior leader, guard Shauna Ruglass, who led Howard (32.2 percent), and had no two-game stretch last season to exceed 20 points.

"We didn't have a particular gray-out night," Jack said. "I feel we need to use this experience to our advantage this season." Ruglass is a versatile threat with the floor and always plays at a high intensity.

"When you look at the stats," Jack noted Agee's importance in the lineup, "we miss her so much. We didn't have a particular gray-out night." Ruglass is visibly missed.

W. Ellington Felton Redefines Soul

On November 20th, a small crowd gathered in the HU Bookstore and awaited the arrival of Haki R. Madhubuti, author of Tough Notes: A Healing Call... For Creating Contributing Writer for Poetry and Creative Non-fiction. Madhubuti is known to be keen in the genre of Poetry and Creative Non-fiction, is a scholar, and inspirational tidbits who wrote Committed to... For Creating... A Healing Call... For Creating Exceptional Black Men.

Madhubuti, a writer and scholar, was featured on the cover of Poetry and Creative Non-fiction, is the publisher of nearly no books and several co-authored works. The cover of Madhubuti’s book is a plain white, covered in hues of black, brown, and gray. On the cover is a little black boy sitting on the shovels of his father, clutching the thick, but his father. It is a visual stance of security. Haki R. Madhubuti stood tall and lean, a sturdy shoulders of his scholarly writer/professor of Chicago State University. It was not his stature that was so impressive, but his physical strength. He was a physical force in life, the manipulation of his thoughts and interpretation of his written words, which book cover image.

Having taught at Howard University for nearly 9 years, from 1978-86, Madhubuti was received numerous awards, recognitions, and honors. He was honored by the National Endowment of the Arts, in 1993 Madhubuti was awarded with the Lifetime Visionary Award, Paul Robeson award (1993), and the Henry Blakely poetry award from Gwendolyn Brooks Center for Black Literature and Creative Writing. Madhubuti also received Brooks’ last published work, “Blackness of one’s Africaness, when interpreted by persons without a serious cultural education, is generally limited to one’s personal enjoyment for day-to-day survival.”

On November 19th, 2003, a small crowd gathered in the HU Bookstore and awaited the arrival of W. Ellington Felton, a writer and scholar. Felton began making music at the age of 12. He lists some of his musical inspirations as Omar, an artist from the United Kingdom, and Ali DeRoni. His casts are not, however, limited to music. Felton also attended Carnegie Mellon University as a theater major. He has been a full time artist ever since, working on several films, commercials, and stage productions in addition to his music. Recently, he has added the title of first time father to his resume with a two and a half month old child.

Felton told the audience that he was inspired by actors like Gregory Hines, Sammy Davis Jr., and Paul Robeson. Felton said, “People who saw me perform get a show, not just some talking head on-stage.” Felton’s next performance is at the Juste Lounge on November 25th at the Juste Lounge.

Felton’s next effort is “Crossroads,” an upcoming collaborative project with himself and Raheem Devaughn of Urban Box.

He admires these actors because they moved across several mediums so freely and were accepted by audiences. Felton said, “They weren’t placed in a particular subject matter” of his work is part of what sets him apart from his musical counterparts.

The Race is Not Given to the Swift

There is a reason that D.C. residents drive around the nation's capital with the words "Brakes Without Representation" boldly emblazoned on their license plates. Since the formation of the Union, D.C. has been subject to the ill-fated status of being a failed republic. Hence, it seemed at this time, the lack of equal representation was being faced head on by the Democratic presidential candidates.

Against a rule of the Democratic National Committee, D.C.'s Democratic decided to hold the D.C. primary on January 19, rather than the usual May date. The candi­dates expressed a need to strengthen the relevance of the D.C. primary by getting it in the forefront, as opposed to its usual position as one of the last, with Iowa and New Hampshire first.

In the time-honored prac­tice of political deception, all­ms of the Democratic pres­i­dential candidates supported the earlier D.C. primary, and claimed a so-called commitment to the issue of D.C. state­hood and Congressional vot­ing rights. Last week, the can­didates reaffirmed their prior de­clarations.

Our View: We are disappointed that so many of the Democratic can­didates dropped out of the D.C. Democratic primary.

Benzino: Probable Cause or Personal Agenda

Three days, it seems, as if a rap star's tour is not com­plete until someone is blind­ sided by another rapper in the studio. So we were not surprised to hear that the long time feud between Eminem and Benzino has escalated. What was a bit surprising was the way rapper and source magazine editor Benzino is trying to rally to support Eminem's music career.

Our View: It is hypocritical to hold one rapper to a standard and not others.

I believe this Thanksgiving holiday will be a time to reflect and give thanks for all we have. The world has changed, and we must adapt to this new reality.

Blessed is the man that walks not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor stands in the way of sinners, nor sits in the seat of mocking. His delight is in the house of the Lord; and he meditates over his word day and night. And the Lord shall fulfill his good pleasure upon him. (Psalm 1:1-3)

I would like to thank all of our donors and sponsors who have made this possible. Your generosity is greatly appreciated.

I remember when it was still called the Nerd Mall. Back in the day when Rave Culture was the only thing happening on campus. That was a time when we were all in sync and we were all fighting for the same cause. It was a time when we were all working together to make a difference.

Thriller on the world like a beam of light shining through the darkness. We were all united and we were all fighting for something.

I wouldn't exactly categorize myself as a big fan back then. My adolescence was already consumed by the need for something different. I had an appetite for the new and the unusual, and the thrill of being on the cutting edge.

I realize now that I was right to be passionate about my interests. The world is full of wonder and beauty, and it is up to us to discover it.

Parke's secretaries are strange. I wonder if they're as much of a friend as I think. Or perhaps we could share a moment of companionable silence, perhaps the secrets of the Parke's Bookstore.

The letter affair with Michael Jackson ended a long time ago, but we never separated the Parke Fan persona with raised consciousness and so much else. We were one.

Now, for the second time in your life, you are the subject of a criminal investigation.

Michael's brutal touch.

Jackson's guilt or innocence was never resolved in the first episode. Yet the court of public opinion charged him with the murder of his son, Michael. The singer was known for his flamboyant lifestyle and his love of the spotlight, but his rise to fame was marred by controversies and legal battles.

Dude is weird. That's it. He's psychologically damaged, he's physically a mess and he's a menace to himself. If so, he deserves his fate, which is now in the hands of the courts.

Jackson's guilt or innocence is a matter of personal and professional responsibility. As the story unfolds, the narrative shifts to explore the nature of the criminal investigation that follows Michael's remains.

For the second time, you are the subject of a criminal investigation. The second time is more serious. You are the subject of a criminal investigation.
