New meal plan brings fast-food vendors to Blackburn Center for fall semester

In an effort to improve the food service options on campus, the Howard University Food Service Committee has added fast-food vendors to the meal plan offered at the Blackburn Center.

Under the new plan, the cafeteria will operate on a continuous lunch plan from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Keeping the cafeteria open all day will accommodate the large number of students eating in that smaller space.

Robert McLeod, director of Blackburn Center, said the new meal plan will help to reduce the cost of meals for students. Students who are on the meal plan will be able to receive their meals at the cafeteria and the food court with the continuous lunch plan. The cash order plan will be offered as an alternative.

According to McLeod, the new plan will allow the University to attract more students and increase revenue. The food court will offer a variety of options and the cafeteria will maintain its traditional offerings.

McLeod also noted that the new meal plan will be beneficial for students who prefer to eat at home or bring their own meals. The University is committed to providing a diverse and inclusive dining experience for all students.

The new meal plan is expected to be fully implemented by the end of the fall semester, and it is anticipated that the changes will continue to evolve and improve over time.
D.C. attorney hosts lecture to raise community awareness

By Jonathan L. Wharton

Hilltop Staff Writer

United States Attorney for the District of Columbia Eric Holder spoke to a large crowd of Howard University students in Douglass Hall as part of the Concerned Black Men program.

The program allows students to participate in public affairs internships and fellowships. The lecture is part of a series of academic forums to come the national arena as well as in the local community.

"There is a need for interaction," he said. "We need to get people more involved and help each other realize some of the problems ourselves as well."

Students attending the forum said they learned from Holder's lecture on political action.

"We need some sort of program to help people understand how to help each other," Holder said. "We need to get people involved and help each other realize some of the problems ourselves as well."

"Eric Holder discussed the criminal situation in the District and how people can help," said Holder. "He has a lot of experience in prosecuting people."

"Washington has a lot of crime, and there are a lot of people who want to help," Holder said. "There are a lot of people who want to help." Holder emphasized that government has a responsibility to assure their citizens that crime rates are declining.

"We have a responsibility in government to somehow get out there and show them that crime is down."

Informal speakout gives freshmen overview of HUSA candidates

By R. Wayne Downes

First-year students tuning in to an informal "speakout," pregnant with promise, presented Howard University students with an overview of the slate of candidates running for the 1995-96 Howard University Student Association (HUSA) elections. The candidates' stories are not usually heard in the media and what we need to get is with people who have lived the experiences we have.

"I want you to know that I'm going to run with Pat Byrd," said Byrd. "I want you to know that I'm going to run with Pat Byrd, and what we need to get is with people who have lived the experiences we have.

Howard's preschool, kindergarden give children head-start on learning, cultural awareness

BY LINDA HOLLAND HIPPO Staff Writer

Playing with blocks and speaking Spanish are only a few of the many daily activities planned for the children who participate in the Howard University Early Learning Program. According to Lamenta Burns, director of the Early Learning Program, cultural education is a major part of the children's daily activities.

“Our program here is child-centered and culturally sensitive,” Burns said. “The setup of the classroom is very much like children see colors everywhere. We respect all cultures. However, the majority of our children are of African descent.”

Burns also noted that every week the children participate in a “theme of the month,” focusing on various places as well as different cultures. For instance, the theme of the month for early February was “Africa.”

“The classes at the Early Learning Program will host an Open House on March 12,” Burns said. “The Early Learning Program is also organizing a spring field trip to a theme park, where the children will be able to explore the different cultures while having fun.”

Children learn the importance of sharing

JAN. 30

For the children of Howard students, learning to share is a part of their daily routine. In fact, it is one of the first concepts they learn.

In the words of Michelle Davis, a junior majoring in drama and theatre arts administration, "I think it’s important that we come out and support our brothers and sisters who have fallen victim to the system..."

Black History Profile: Local News Anchor Susan Kidd

Susan Kidd, co-anchor of WRC-TV's 5 p.m. newscast.

By Steven Gray

At 23, Susan Kidd was already a veteran news anchor.

On March 1, 1980, Kidd took over the news anchor position at WRC-TV in Washington, D.C. She had been with the station for two years and had been serving as co-anchor with another news anchor.

Kidd's rise to fame began when she was hired as a news intern at the station in 1978. She quickly worked her way up the ranks, becoming an anchor for the station's weekend morning show in 1980.

Kidd's success is due in part to her dedication to her craft. She is a natural leader and has a way of making the news come alive on the screen. Her ability to connect with viewers has helped her become one of the most respected news anchors in the country.

Kidd is known for her ability to deliver the news in an engaging and informative way. She is not afraid to take risks and often breaks down complex issues into easy-to-understand stories.

In addition to her work as a news anchor, Kidd is also a philanthropist. She is active in several community organizations and is known for her commitment to giving back to the community.

Kidd's dedication to her craft and her community has earned her many awards and recognitions. She is a role model for young women in the field of journalism and is often called upon to speak at events and conferences.

As a news anchor, Kidd has been a voice for justice and equality. She has covered stories ranging from local news to international events, always delivering the news with integrity and accuracy.

Kidd's success is a testament to her hard work and dedication. She is a shining example of what can be achieved through determination and a passion for one's craft.

The United States announced its intention to end nuclear testing in the South Pacific. The President, Francois Mitterrand, at the summit in Paris, agreed to a series of nuclear tests, declaring that this would ensure the independence and security of the French people. However, some observers have raised concerns about the potential environmental damage, as the tests involve the use of nuclear weapons. Despite these concerns, the French president's office has stated that the tests are necessary to maintain national security. The security of our country is our most important asset, he stated. To ensure its independence and security, France must continue to carry out these tests.

The French president's office also announced that the current testing program will continue on a long-term basis. This decision has been met with mixed reactions, with some critics arguing that the tests are unnecessary and could lead to significant environmental damage. The United States has been a long-time opponent of nuclear testing, and recent tests have sparked renewed concerns about the safety of these operations.

In related news, the United States expressed concern about the potential for a new nuclear arms race. The French tests have raised questions about the viability of the existing arms control agreements, and there is a growing sense of uncertainty about the future of nuclear disarmament efforts. The United States is calling for a comprehensive approach to addressing these issues, and there is a growing consensus that the international community must work together to ensure the peaceful use of nuclear energy.

Brutality of youth culture breeds disrespect for life

Recently two young women were brutally murdered on the way to their high school. A 13-month-old child was suffocated to death. These are just the latest examples of violence that has become too common in our world.

Our society must face the fact that the violence against children, especially in the Black community, is a serious problem that requires immediate attention.

As Howard University students, we should be ashamed of the Black community's failure to protect its own children. This is one of our most crucial responsibilities, and yet we allow it to happen.

The violence against children is becoming an epidemic in our society. We must take action to stop this tragic epidemic.

Black youth culture is responsible for much of the violence against children. We must take a stand against this culture and work to change it.

We cannot let this senselessness continue. We must do our part to create a safer world for our children.

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my concerns about the violence against children. This is a serious problem that requires immediate attention.

Individualism has no place in Black America

Anthony Barnes

In reference to Gina Colvin Powell and Dennis Hightower's March 24 article on the Howard University Board of Trustees, I believe we must reevaluate what individualism means to the Single Black American at Howard University.

Yes, Powell is very popular among Howard students, but Danyael Hightower is equally important to Howard's success and those who love the institution. Powell may have some views, but I think Hightower's views are more reflective of what is needed for our institution.

In the area of the arts and athletics, Hightower's views may be another kettle. Among Black America, art and athletics are strictly individualized. No one has ever said to the children of the black community that they must go to the Brown or the Ford, but circumstances are arranged.

In sports, the single player is the one who scores. The Hightower-Howard University partnerships are, in fact, still in the experimental stage of their relationship. On a moral level it is simply in the Masked Rider ideology of entertainers who were White. Mr. Johnson, participating during the 19th century, had no bearing on the Black community's right to individuality and serving the community.

I am paid to wreak havoc on the basketball court. -Charles Barkley of the Phoenix Suns

Which one of the young people in the Phoenix Suns family will pay the price? It's a tough question to answer, but please don't blame Mr. Johnson.

Mr. Johnson believed in the rights of the people in America. In the United States, Mr. Johnson never laid claim to no responsibility for the fate of their brothers and sisters.

Mr. Johnson's fights against the laws of the nation, he never said, was not the fault of the American people. It was because of the hatred and prejudice that Mr. Johnson was fighting that we must never be complacent.

Mr. Johnson is a hero of the Black American race. He is a hero of the human race, and we must honor him in every possible way.

We have some of the most outstanding Black Americans in the world today. We must do all that we can to support them in their endeavors.

I am, therefore, committed to supporting the Howard Board of Trustees, and I hope that everyone else who reads this will do the same.

Howard students should get active in the local community

Vasanth K. Smith

The Howard community should demand more of itself. In order to change, people must first realize their responsibilities and take action. To get things started, I believe we must come together to make changes.

The question is whether Howard students should get active in the local community. We can all make a difference if we work together.

The Howard community is a powerful force, and we should use it to change the world. By getting involved, we can make a difference and help shape the future of our community.

Winter sanctions are coming. I urge you to get involved and make a difference in the lives of others.

Howard on the decline? Don't bet on it!

Historians say the 'Mecca' is still going strong

Howard Law School was ranked first in the nation for new students entering the academic year 1950-51, according to the American Bar Association's rankings.

By Adrienne Calvin and Prudential Press Staff Writer

The living room and the newsroom of Howard University's campus during the spring of 1950 is a picture of ordinaryness. The students are engaged in their studies, and the campus is bustling with activity.

But for Howard, this is not the case. The school has been under pressure from various groups, including the NAACP, for its policies on affirmative action.

In response, Howard has taken several steps to improve its image. The school has initiated a number of programs to enhance its reputation, including the Howard University School of Law, which has been ranked first in the nation for new students entering the academic year 1950-51.

Despite these efforts, Howard continues to be criticized for its policies on affirmative action. The school has been accused of discriminating against white students in favor of black students.

However, Howard has not been deterred by these criticisms. The school has continued to work on improving its image, and has been ranked first in the nation for new students entering the academic year 1950-51.

100-year-old Howard alumnus recalls decades of personal Black history

Howard's rich legacy deserves study and appreciation

By To-Nihke Dunlop
Hilliop Staff Writer

Since I have been at The Hilltop, this has truly been the most memorable issue. My only regret is that I was not able to interview everyone I had originally planned on.

As for my personal impressions of Howard's history, I believe that the school has been the cornerstone of my personal growth. From the moment I entered the halls of Howard, I knew that I was about to embark on a journey that would shape my future.

When I first came to Howard, I was a 13-year-old student who had never been away from home. I was eager to learn and to make new friends, but I was also a bit nervous about the challenges that lay ahead.

After my first year, I realized that Howard was more than just a school. It was a community, a family, a place where I could be myself and where I could grow.

Throughout my time at Howard, I have had the opportunity to learn about the history of the school and to see how it has evolved over the years.

In the end, what I have learned is that Howard is more than just a school. It is a place where people come together to learn, to grow, and to make a difference.

Howard's rich legacy deserves study and appreciation, and I hope that others will continue to learn from the history of this great institution.
Groove Theory: Hip-hop soul with a conscious

By Miguel Duran

February 16, 1996

A style that is both fresh and familiar, Groove Theory offers hip-hop with a conscious attitude. The group, led by Joe and Melissa, has taken the element of soul and combined it with the rhythm of rap to create a unique sound. Their album, "Rollin' with the 410," is a testament to their creative approach.

"Our main objective is to bring the music back to its roots," says Joe. "We want people to feel good when they listen to our music, to feel the energy and the emotion." The group has been praised for their ability to blend different genres and create something new.

The Howard University Gospel Choir has released a new CD, "Musical Worship," featuring a range of gospel songs and testimonials that celebrate the life and legacy of Rosa Parks.

The album includes such iconic songs as "Gospel Alphabet," "Rosa Parks," and "A Mighty Fortress." The choir, founded in 1928, has a long history of performing gospel music and has been featured on numerous television shows and movies.

"Rosa Parks was a true icon," says choir director Dr. Michael Lee. "She was a inspiration to us all, and we are honored to be able to celebrate her life through music."

TeleFile service simplifies process of filing income taxes

Imagine filing taxes via telephone, computer or automated toll-free line instead of mailing a form. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has introduced TeleFile, a new tax-filing service. "This new process is truly innovative, except for the check you may have to write," IRS official Charles E. Simon said. Almost 500,000 residents of Maryland, Delaware and Washington, D.C., can now file their returns by telephone, and costs about $8 to participate. Currently, the IRS TeleFile service allows customers to file and pay taxes over the telephone. This is the first of its kind, in which the service, known as TeleFile, can be used instead of mailing a form. IRS officials hope the service will reduce the number of taxpayers who are overwhelmed by the complexity of filing taxes by telephone. The IRS will select those who file using TeleFile for a variety of reasons. Those selected will receive a PIN number on their telephone bill which is used to access TeleFile. To file using TeleFile, a user will have to call a specific IRS toll-free number. In response, T.M.G. will form an investment group after seeing the success of Howard University alumni formed other investment clubs. The group plans to invest $500 per month to purchase stocks on a three-year contract that requires members to commit to a long-term investment in Howard. "I want to challenge my peers," Maurice said. "Howard was a growing experience for me."

Delights of the Garden teaches how to 'eat to live'

From Florida Avenue to Euclid Avenue, Columbia Road becomes a garden as John E. Johnson transforms it into his very own garden. T.M.G. feels it is beneficial to draw its members to these areas. Delights of the Garden is a popular garden in the field of medicine. He believes in healthy eating and assigns his students to make the garden a reality. "I want to challenge my classmates and other students to be healthier and live longer," he said. "I did half of the work, but the other half was given by my classmates."

Survey says Maryland residents fear losing jobs in '96

Survey shows that Maryland residents fear losing jobs in 1996. Among the 10 most-mentioned industries, the field of engineering, health care and education are among the top three. The survey also shows that Maryland residents are more concerned about their personal finances than their job security. "There is no reason to panic," said John Johnson. Disadvantages of the Garden include:

1. The garden is small and there is not much space for growing vegetables.
2. The garden is not very well-maintained.
3. The garden is not very profitable.

Somatics

Somatics, a system of self-healing and personal development through movement, is an increasingly popular approach among Black Americans, citing residents where black men had been subjected to medical, legal, and racial discrimination in the past.

Yoga's emphasis on stretching soothes mind, body, soul: relieves stress

Yoga’s emphasis on stretching soothes the mind, body, and soul, and it is becoming more popular among Black Americans and others seeking a holistic approach to health and wellness. The practice of yoga involves a series of physical exercises, or asanas, that are designed to stretch and strengthen the body, as well as to calm the mind and reduce stress.

Classes and Benefits

Yoga classes are available in many locations, such as community centers, gyms, and online, and they can be tailored to suit the needs and abilities of individuals. The benefits of yoga are numerous, including improved flexibility, strength, and balance; reduced stress and anxiety; and overall improved health and well-being.

Educational Opportunities

Many yoga classes are taught by certified instructors who can provide guidance and support as students progress through the practice. In addition, there are many resources available online, including instructional videos and articles about the benefits of yoga, to help people learn more about this ancient tradition.

Scholars say Tuskegee study still creates feelings of mistrust among Blacks

A new study has found that the Tuskegee syphilis study, a controversial medical experiment conducted by the U.S. Public Health Service in the 1930s and 1940s, continues to create feelings of mistrust among Black Americans today.

Outreach Efforts

In an effort to address this issue, researchers are working to improve communication and education about the Tuskegee study and its impact. This includes providing training for healthcare providers and community leaders, and engaging in community outreach to help alleviate mistrust and improve trust in healthcare.

Senior donates $2,000 of weightlifting equipment to Drew Hall

A local resident has donated $2,000 worth of weightlifting equipment to the Drew Hall dormitory at Howard University, providing students with access to essential workout equipment.

Impact on Student Life

The donation has had a significant impact on student life at Drew Hall, as many students had previously relied on secondhand or outdated equipment. The donated equipment includes barbells, dumbbells, and weights, which are essential for strength training and muscle building.

Corrections

A recent correction has been made to the article about the Tuskegee study, clarifying that the study was conducted by the U.S. Public Health Service, not the Department of Veterans Affairs as previously stated.
