The University

Since its proud beginning, Howard has been a place where young minds are asked not to conform, but encouraged to create. The creative spirit of our University has fostered 124 years of social change, political enlightenment, and personal development. By understanding the need to be ahead of the times, we spent the 1990-91 school year preparing for the future while promising never to forget our past.

A spirit swept across the campus during the year. It was a feeling that any problems of the past could be corrected. The University's commitment to change made the nation's largest predominately black institution an even greater place to experience college life.

HU continued not only to be a magnet for African-American intellectuals, but a primary meeting place for our brothers and sisters from every corner of the globe.

Graduation

On May 12th, Howard graduated the 200 members of the proud and honorable class of 1990 at the University's 122nd Commencement.

The members of the Class of 1990 celebrated with blue and white balloons and champagne on the "Yard" while parents and faculty members enjoyed Dr. Jenifer's spirited debut after becoming HU's 14th president in April.

The City

Washington D.C. was a city where the government was beginning to heal after the storm of controversy that shadowed it's former mayor, Marion Barry.

For Howard students, D.C. offered the opportunity to work on the frontlines for political equality in our nation's capitol.

The District also continued to be the ultimate college town. With nightclubs such as Chicago's and the Gas Chamber, and shopping areas like Georgetown and Dupont Circle, finding off-campus excitement was never a problem.

A New Beginning for D.C.

Newly elected Mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon, graduated from Howard's College of Liberal Arts in 1965 earning her Bachelor of Science degree in political science. She then went on to garner her law degree from Howard University Law School. She is currently a member of the HU Board of Trustees.

"It's time to clean house!" she stated at her victory party. Some of the areas Dixon plans to tackle are reducing the District's homicide rate and government spending.

Nelson Mandela

African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela was released from prison in the spring of 1990. It was the first glimpse at a possible end to apartheid in South Africa.

To aid the cause of South African freedom, Mandela and his wife Winnie came to Washington, D.C. to ask Congress and President Bush to continue sanctions against their government.

While touring the U.S., the Mandelas and the cause they embodied were celebrated by parades and rallies across the country.

Howard hospital gets new director and a new reputation.

We'd all heard the horror stories. If you hadn't heard them, that's unfortunate. You should've been warned.

If you became sick and needed treatment, rumor had it that Howard University Hospital was by no means the place to go. Fortunately, there was one young man ready and brave enough to step forth, smash the rumors and attempt to make a few significant changes in the seemingly doomed facility.

Howard University hospital appointed Kevin Lofron, age 36, Executive Director of the hospital November 5, 1990, after leaving his position as Chief Operating Officer/Executive Vice President of the University Medical Center in Jacksonville, Florida. Lofron, who described himself as a "people person," wasted no time in trying to get his job done.

"I will bring a different leadership and management approach to the hospital," he explained. "People here are looking for a change and are willing to do [things] to make a better hospital."

One of Lofron's goals was to correct many problems that concern people about the hospital. Cosmetically, there was some repainting and relighting to help brighten and beautify the facility externally.

Finances presented huge problems for HUH in 1990 (so many that the facility was threatened to close down), and Lofron wanted to dig the hospital out of the deep financial hole it was in. Lofron admitted that he is very grateful for the warm reception he was given at HUH.

"The way I've been received here is extremely well. It's a great accomplishment to be accepted to come here. I have a proven track record and people here are willing to look past my age. I'm very confident HUH will be at a point where it will be one of the top ten university hospitals in the country."

Public Enemy

WARNING! If you can't stand rap music at its absolute best—and loudest, then this is not the article, nor was it the show for you.

Anticipation filled the hearts of all those present. Without warning, there he was—Terminator X. Suddenly, you heard it. A voice boomed in the auditorium:

"The Bad Boys are back in town! Would you please join me in welcoming PUBLIC ENEMY!"

That is when the TRUE 1990 Homecoming concert/party officially began.

Before Public Enemy performed, comedian Ted Carpernter, who has appeared on the Apollo, warmed up the impatient crowd mimicking a conversation between Jesse Jackson and Martin Luther King, Jr. to playing the dozens with members of the audience.

"The Blackman Lyrical Terrorist", Chuck D, and "The Joker", sprung from backstage. "Welcome to the Terrordome" was the first jam performed, and the bass was bouncing off the walls. The S1W's, marched out dressed down in white uniforms.

"The concert was fly!"

“The concert was fly!”
-Vernon Harleston

exclaimed Vernon Harleston, sophomore in the College of Allied Health. "From the moment P.E. came out, you could feel the energy in place."

The music began once again, rocking the place with the tunes "My Uzi Weighs a Ton", "Black Steel In the Hour of Chaos", and "Brothers Gonna Work It Out."

The excitement level in the concert was raised as P.E. performed their classic "Bring the Noise". Chuck and Flav rocked the grooves "Cold Lampin'", and "Fight the Power", another Howard favorite. "Can't Do Nuttin' For Ya Man" shook Cramton as the crowd chanted "Go Flavor! Go Flavor!"

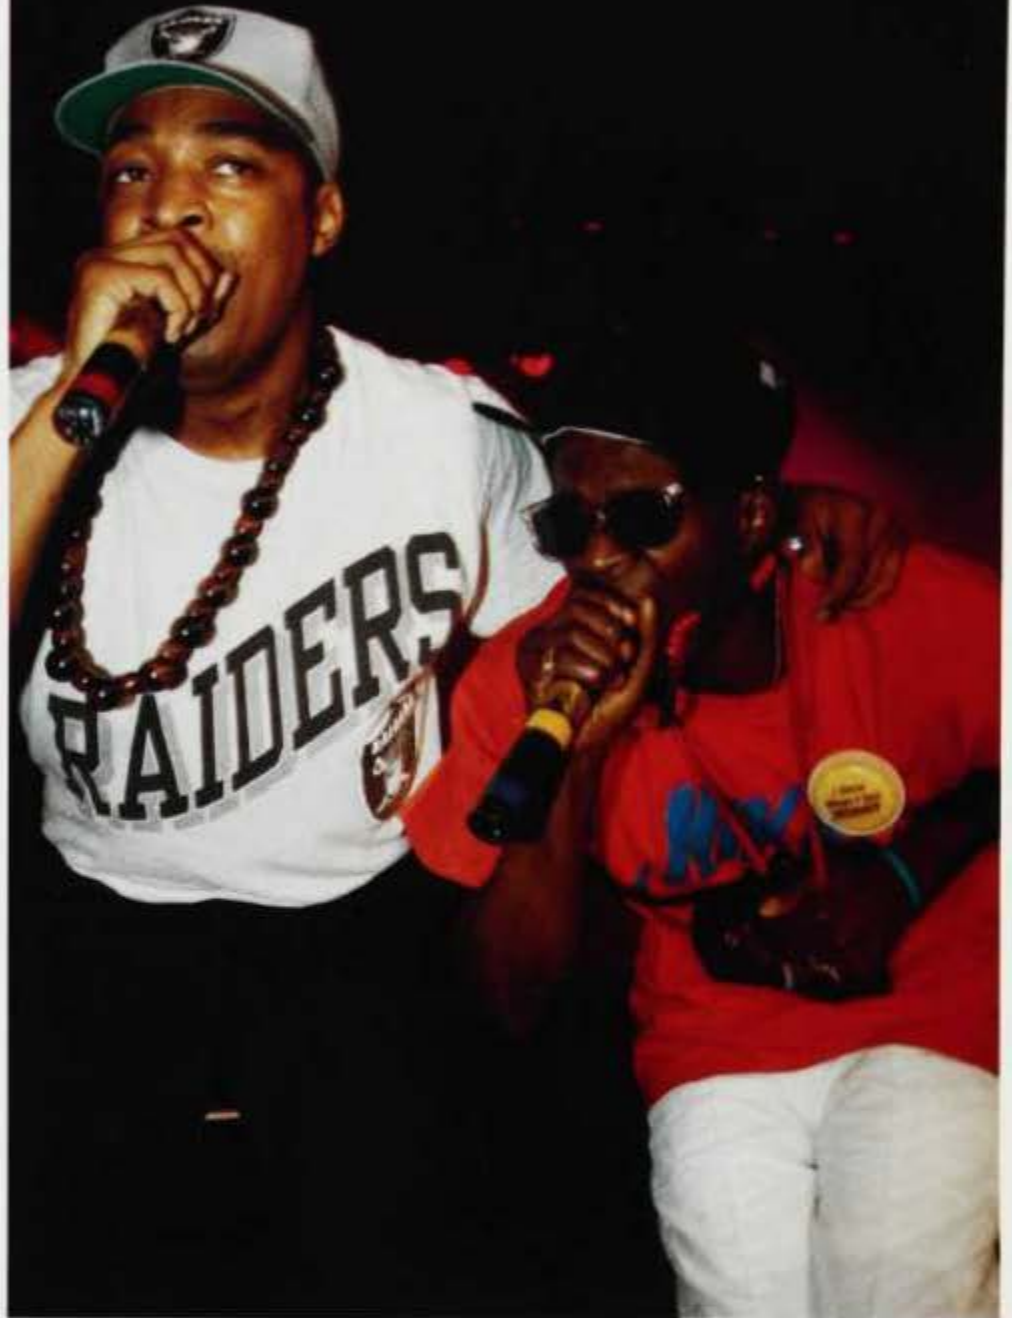

"911 Is A Joke" was the last song of the evening, and every bit of sense the crowd thought they had was "going, going, GONE!" EVERYBODY was up dancing.

The 1990 Homecoming Concert featuring Public Enemy was THE ULTIMATE Homecoming event.

Fashion Show

A salute to African-Americans in the fashion industry.

Dark clouds, heavy rains, and gusty winds dominated the outside scene as students rushed inside Cramton for the Homecoming fashion show. By 7:00 p.m., a small but anxious crowd was no longer waiting patiently. A restless crowd clapped and chanted and demanded that the show begin. Finally someone announced that the delay was due to a power outage earlier that day; however, it was 8:00 p.m. before the show began.

Once the show started many students forgot about the hour long wait.

"Telesis" was the first Homecoming fashion show to use only African-American hair stylists, accessories and clothing designers. Dori Bolton, fashion show coordinator, said "'Telesis' is a salute to blacks in the fashion industry for their tireless efforts to achieve what some thought was the unachievable, and to attain what some knew was a reality...success!"

"Telesis" featured twenty-eight models in seven different scenes: "Noire et Blanc", "Tenacious",

"Kudos", "Dope", "Denote", "J'Advance", and "Triumph".

The first scene, "Noire et Blanc" featured a splendid array of black and white ranging from short, daring skirts for the women to dashing suits for the men. "Kudos" unveiled the fashions of student designers, Marc Thompson and Xavier.

The last scene, "Triumph" revealed furs from James McQuay, evening wear from all designers, and jewelry from Imposters. The furs ranged from short, leather, reversible jackets to long flowing overcoats.

Many were pleased with the wedding scene that ended the show. A strong round of applause greeted the bride and groom as they showcased elegance and class afrocentrically in gold and black.

Despite the complications that occurred before the show, "Telesis" proved to be a fashion show like no other. The designs were truly full of the latest styles in the world of fashion.

Crowning A New Beauty

Ms. Howard

Each contestant in the 1990 Miss Howard Pageant were prime examples of the evening's theme-Ena Sana. Exemplifying the talent that Howard has to offer, they were certainly "worthy to be praised."

According to freshman Kevin Scott, it was a "wonderful display of Howard's beauty and talent."

The judging was based on four areas of competition, a formal interview held prior to the pageant, talent, a formal walk and the question and answer category.

In the talent competition, Miss Fine Arts, Nicole Sutherland, brought the crowd to its feet with her jazzy rendition of "Summertime."

Desiree Robinson, Miss School of Communications, performed a motivational monologue after which she sang "Ordinary People."

The School of Engineering was next with Medina Burrell. Burrell praised the positive influence of her mother and father and dedicated her stirring rendition of "Wind Beneath My Wings" to them.

Miss School of Business, Marna Foster, performed an original monologue entitled "A Killing That Took a Lifetime."

Artimese Williams, Miss School of Liberal Arts, performed a monologue by Maya Angelou called "Our Grandmothers."

Liz Livingston, Miss School of Education, displayed her dramatic talents by performing a monologue.

From the School of Architecture and Planning, Sherry Hunter performed an original skit in which she illustrated the importance of just being yourself.

Larara Matthews, School of Human Ecology, delighted the crowd with her oratorical interpretation of Nikki Giovanni's monologue "Ego Trippin'- There Must Be A Reason Why."

The School of Allied Health followed with contestant Rita Montgomery, who performed an original dance composition.

Following the talent, was the impromptu Question and Answer segment.

After an exhausting 45 minute intermission, nine escorts saluted Miss Howard 1989-90, Valerie Cummings.

Cummings' controversial farewell speech was met with endless shouts of BOO's! from the audience as she stated that "she would not have given her title to those undeserving runners up."

However, the crowd was pleased when Nicole Sutherland, Miss Fine Arts, was crowned Miss Howard 1990-91. Desiree Robinson, Miss School of Communications was first runner-up and Miss Liberal Arts, Artimese Williams was chosen second runner-up.

Cultural Expo

Howard is not only a service to the African-American community, but it is also an international service. With over 15 percent of Howard students coming from over 100 countries, Howard is an institute which reflects the cultural diversity of the African diaspora. For this reason, it is appropriate for Howard to sponsor an event that recognizes and shows appreciation for international students. This event has become known as "International Day".

The Homecoming Steering Committee introduced a new attraction to the many events that highlight homecoming week. In accordance with International Day, the Ambassadors' Reception offered an opportunity to meet and interact with a number of ambassadors from international countries. If the Ambassadors Reception was not enough, the Food Festival was sure to fill you with delight. There was mouth watering fried plantains, spicy pepper chicken, and cajun catfish.

Cultural Expo '90 represented the major cultural and ethnic backgrounds on campus. Ajabu Traditional Dance Troupe performed West African dances to begin the Expo. There was also story telling by Dr. Phillis Galloway, and a performance by the Pan Masters Steel Orchestra, Inc.

To the delight of the audience, Howard's Taekwondo Club and team held a dynamic demonstration during the Expo. They displayed various defense techniques called Poom Se.

The last part of the Expo was a fashion show coordinated by Jaqueline Ifill, Carlen Chin and Desha Moore.

The show featured the clothing of Nonye Attira, Timbuktu Stores and Saharah.

The International students of Howard enrich the campus with flavor and cultural diversity. Terry Ann Gordon, junior political science major says, "The international students are an asset to Howard University's educational environment. They enrich the campus with their various cultures and without them Howard would not be the same.

Singing His Praises

Gospel Show

I will bless the Lord at all times; his praise shall continually be in my mouth." (Psalm 34:1). The Homecoming Steering Committee began the week of annual Homecoming activities with a purpose-to praise. The committee renewed "Call to Chapel" to show our unity and desire to praise the Lord for all his blessings.

The service was held at the Andrew Rankin Chapel on October 11, at 11:00 a.m. The crowd was inspired by the message of Rev. Jesse Jackson and entertained by the music of the Chapel Choir. President Franklyn Jenifer was proud that the Homecoming Committee decided to hold the service in Rankin Chapel rather than in a larger facility. "To this committee it was very important...that we take time out... to recognize that we need to give the Lord his day", said Dr. Jenifer.

The fellowship continued in Cramton with "Time to Make a Change", the Homecoming gospel concert, which featured The Howard University Gospel Choir, Vicki Winans, and the Winans. A local youth choir, the STOP Crew (Seek, Trust, Obey, and Praise), opened the show. Next, was the Howard University Gospel Choir, whose voices of the gospel choir lifted the audience to its feet with their rendition of "Help Me Lift Jesus."

Following the intermission, Vicki Winans took center stage. She had every hand clapping, and every foot stomping while performing "Victory," and "We Shall Behold Him."

As the Winans rushed on stage, there was no doubt as to who the stars of the evening were. The Winans performed songs from their previous albums, as well as their most recent hits, "Time to Make A Change," and "A Friend." Kathy Settles, from Olney, Maryland, and self-proclaimed number one Winans' fan, said that she had seen the group perform over twenty times.

"The Winans are my favorite group. They are the only group I will go to see in concert, because they minister to people. I loved tonight's performance," said Settles as she held up her ticket for the second show.

The New Stars

Performing in front of an audience can be a nerve-wracking experience but performing in front of a crowd in Gramton Auditorium certainly takes exceptional strength. However, the contestants of Lip Sync '90 showed no signs of fear.

One of evenings most popular acts was, Lady Sings the Blues, who performed an act to Aretha Franklin's "Doctor Feel Good". Lady Sings the Blues shocked the crowd with her unique style of dance.

Phaylen Abdullah, Kevin Bryan and Leavy Matthews performed a video perfect performance of BBD's "Do Me."

K.T. and the Posse stole the show with their rendition of Prince's "Thieves in the Temple". The act was choreographed by lead singer Antoni Bell who also won last year's contest performing another song by Prince.

The acts were judged upon ability, originality, and appearance. The judges choose K.T. and the Posse for first place, "Lady Sings the Blues" placed second, and "Do Me", third.

The Homecoming Variety Show, "From Vaudeville to Broadway," coordinated by Clarence Nero with the assistance of Alisa West, was truly a show of diversity, from the comedy of the emcee Craig Frazier to the rap sounds of XTC-III.

From the first performance, "Got to be Real" by Shiekera, there was no stopping the show.

Highlights of the evening included, singing sensation Nicole Sutherland, Miss Howard 1991. Sutherland thrilled the crowd with her jazzy rendition of "God Bless the Child."

Although she sang "Summertime" in the second show she was still a hit.

After intermission, Helen Goldsby who has just recently signed with MCA Records, performed a dazzling tribute to recording star Regina Belle. Humor was brought back to the show by Brady White and Anthony Anterson, both portraying gay facilitators of a talk show that was a spin-off on "In Living Color's", Men on Film.

The Variety Show was a grand showcase of Howard's entertainment talent.

Greek Show

Music echoed throughout Burr gym as the crowd waited patiently for the show to begin. Backstage, the steptreams nervously awaited their chance to perform at the first Homecoming Step Show sponsored by the Homecoming Steering Committee since 1987.

The D.J. "warmed up" the crowd but the five members of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority Inc. got them hyped. Lead by stepmaster Adrya McDuffy, the ladies of Zeta Phi Beta dazzled the crowd with their salute to Greek Unity by imitating the various fraternities. Bringing the crowd to their feet once more with their blind-folded stepping, the ladies of Zeta Phi Beta were truly

"Excellence without Exception!"

The brothers of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Inc. "got it on" as they sautured on to the stepping floor to the soulful sound of "Let's Get it On! Step Masters Darrius Gourdin and Darnel Van Rensalier and their 12 member stepteam proclaimed "Ya'll ain't Ready!" Emphasizing the need for Greek Unity, the "Granddadies" of stepping showed the audience why they pledged Alpha.

Following the performance of Alpha Phi Alpha, a ten minute intermission followed. The women of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc. began the second half of the show by venturing forth "From Africa to Alpha Chapter." Under the direction of Rosemary Williams and Lisa Brown, the twenty member stepteam of DST forced the audience to applaud many times with their rendition of "Ice Ice Baby Delta Style" and the formation of their pyramid.

The final stepteam to perform were the brothers of Phi Beta Sigma. The men of blue and white entered the floor to do "Basic Hard Stepping, No Gimics!" Dedicating their show to all Black Men, the 12 member team lead by Dwayne Clacks merely asked the crowd to "watch them swear." Wild screams and applause could be heard throughout their whole performance.

Because the stepshow was not a competition, merely a display of talent, no trophies were awarded; it was all in good fun.

The Game

On October 20, 1990, at 1:00 p.m., more than 35,000 people packed into Greene Stadium for the game of the season—Homecoming.

The contest matched the Howard Bison against the conference rival North Carolina A&T. This meeting was thought to be another easy Homecoming victory.

However, things quickly began to take a turn for the worse. After NC A&T won the coin toss and elected to receive the ball, the Bison were charged with a 10 yard penalty for a delay of the game. The squad soon answered back with a touchdown by Gary Harrell. The excitement was destroyed as referees recalled the play, citing a clipping penalty. The Bison fought to regain their momentum with two touchdowns by Donald Carr and Harrell, but to no avail, the Aggies were too tough. The Bison lost its first homecoming game in five years, 33-12.

Junior Latesha Williams, a Commercial Recreation major stated,

"We had just as much talent as A&T."
-Latesha Williams

"We had just as much talent as A&T, but they made fewer mistakes and capitalized on ours."

Despite the loss, the band created an atmosphere of excitement as they marched on the field. They performed numbers such as "Poison" by BDD, and "Everybody" by Black Box. Popular rap artists such as Biz Markie, Kid & Play, and Flavor Flav could be spotted amidst the homecoming crowd.

Although this contest may have ended in defeat, A&T can be assured that they may have won the battle but they most certainly haven't won the war!

You know I believe in socializing to be out in the cold like this," said, sophomore, business major Veronica Easter. The sun was out, but the temperature was definitely a typical fall day. The only reason so many people were out in turtle-necks and sweaters was that it was the Friday of Homecoming Weekend.

At noon, a crowd started to form to link-up and sing the alma mater around the flagpole. Lead by President, Dr. Jenifer, the circle preceded to open up "Homecoming Weekend '90" officially.

The yard was one festive event from then on, as everyone from students from U.VA, N.C. A&T to Howard graduates from the class of 1948 were here. Along with general conversations going on between friends alike, the greek-letter organizations also attracted much attention from the on-lookers. Each moving to their different spots on the "Yard", and paying homage to their fraternity or sorority through songs and stepping.

At 4 p.m. the Thunder Machine was heard coming from the Fine Arts building. This sound started the pep rally. The cheerleaders as well as T Phi M performed to promote spirit and give the crowd a taste of what was in store for the next day's game.

After the starting line-up was called, it was the time to go.

The best of the best

Good practice habits, dedication and discipline" are qualities that every outstanding athlete must possess, according to Gary Mossup, place kicker for the Bison football team. Cornerback Walter Price felt that "a mental edge" was what every player needed to dominate his opponent. Price and Mossup were only two of the players identified as the ones to watch by Coach Steve Wilson.

Other players expected to contribute to the success of the team were: quarterback Donald Carr, punter Cedric Rawls, linebacker Anthony Hooper, nose tackle Brian Talroan, offensive tackle Nigel Greene, and defensive end Gary Willingham.

J.J. Carpenter, running back, predicted that the offense would produce "30 points per game" in addition to winning the MEAC. "We have a more tenacious spirit about us, the will to win is more focused," he said. Carpenter added that an outstanding player needed discipline to carry out assignments "on the field, as well as in the classroom."

Kenny Newsome, linebacker, felt that a winning season was inevitable. "The offense has come a long way and we have younger guys from last year stepping up and taking charge," he said. Newsome summed up the characteristics that were necessary to excel by adding, "You have to have speed and strength, but most of all you gotta have heart." With incredible physical capabilities and great mental attitudes, these players were surely the best of the best.

A Tough Season

The early success of the Bison squad brought back memories of the 1987 squad, and again the team seemed poised and ready to take the title as the 1990 MEAC Championship team. Although the team was very young and inexperienced, the early record of 5-0 helped build the team's confidence and established them as a force to be reckoned with during the season. However, the middle of the season brought hopes of an undefeated season to an end.

The first loss to Virginia State, just a week before the Homecoming game against North Carolina A&T, began a series of losses that the team fought hard or rebound from so that they continued as a competitor for the conference title. Coach Steve Wilson, in only his second year, was very impressed with his squad early in the season. His short-term goal was to try and maintain the defensive dominance established by last year's team which lead the nation in defense.

While losing a total of eight players defensively, the Bison ended their season by ranking third in the nation in defense. Coach Wilson felt the entire squad deserved to be recognized for their defensive excellence; however, he believed that the efforts of defensive linemen Brian Talton and Gary Willingham, as well as defensive back Walter Price were important keys to their success.

Team injuries hurt the Bison mid-season; however, Coach Wilson sees a bright future for his young squad that will return twenty starters next season. The long term goal is to move the program to a higher performance level with eventual exposure to competition on the national level. In order to attain this goal, the team will begin to play even stronger, more competitive schools.

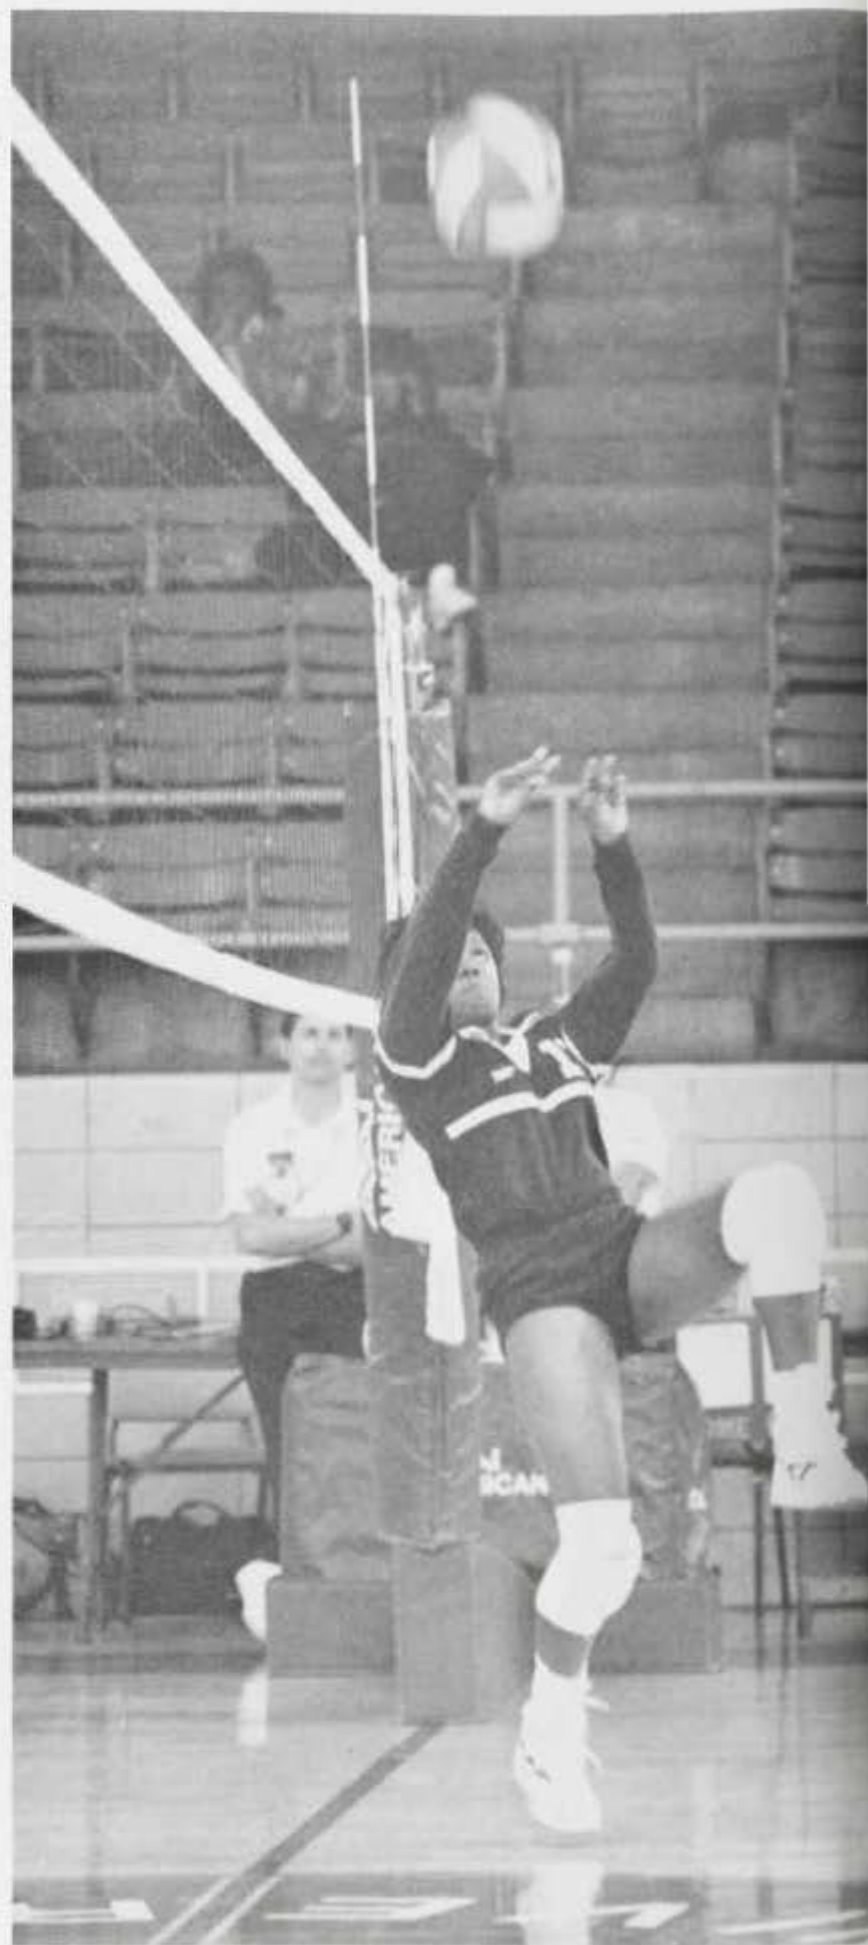

Next year's schedule includes Temple University and Alcorn State in the Circle City Classic in Indianapolis. On the heels of two excellent recruiting years, Coach Wilson said, "The best is yet to come." Looking at the success of his freshman class, including Gary "The Flea" Harold, who lead the nation's freshmen in kick-off returns and made the second team all conference. Coach Wilson was far from over-optimistic concerning his future plans for the team.

Some aspects of the season may have been a disappointment to Coach Wilson yet he remained enthusiastic about his players. Success on the field is great, but why Bison football? He replied, "My players want an education and a good academic environment." Thus, he has laid a foundation that will last for years.

The Hunger to Succeed

Arlinda Pierce, a senior political science major from New Orleans, Louisiana, was captain of the Howard volleyball team for the 1990-91 season. On the court, the 5-ft. setter believed that "skill, desire to win, and mental strength" are important characteristics for a good volleyball player. Off the court, Pierce felt that "happiness, health, a strong sense of and a commitment to family and friends, and faith in God" are most important in her life.

Pierce attended Cabrini High School, a Catholic school in New Orleans, where she first took an interest in volleyball. Originally softball was the sport she wanted to play, but the coach required athletes to play all sports to make them athletically well-rounded. Ironically, she "did not like volleyball for a long time because [she] was not good at it." However, Pierce accepted the challenge to get better at volleyball, and took the time to master the game. She explains that she "began to like volleyball more and more as [she] got better at it."

Pierce dedicated a great deal of talent and time to the Spikers as they won the MEAC Championship Conference both in 1987 and 1989, during her freshman and junior years at Howard. She described the team as "a family where everyone is in sync with one another. We enjoy going on trips and we have a good time together." Besides being on the championship teams for two years, Pierce's other honors include being voted Most Valuable Player in the MEAC Conference and All-American for the 1989-90 season.

While Pierce was active on the court, she was also very busy off of it. She was involved in the following activities: Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., Campus Pals, the Student Ambassador program, and she served as Special Program Director for UGSA for the 1989-90 school year, and participated in various community service projects. When asked what she likes to do for fun, Arlinda revealed that she "loves movies, dining out with friends, going to theater, and traveling."

Pierce's future plans included attending law school, practicing corporate law, and eventually becoming a judge. She further explained that her overall future goals are to have an active family life in addition to a challenging career. Ms. Pierce affirmed that she obtained a strong sense of family from her parents. "My parents installed a strong Christian value system in me. This is reflected in how I treat people and how I carry myself." Her parents are also athletic (her father is a baseball coach for Edward Pierce Jr. High School in Louisiana), and have always supported her in her desire to play sports.

Pierce has been playing volleyball for twelve years. In this time she has learned to make adjustments to compensate for her 5-ft. stature. "When you're shorter than everyone else, there is a constant drive to push yourself to prove everyone wrong. I can't be lazy. I don't have the option to relax like a taller player can." She further added, "When things come tough, it makes you push even harder."

Arlinda Pierce has contributed her "hunger to succeed" to Howard University's Women's Volleyball Team. She also donated her talents towards other activities on and off Howard's campus. Her commitments to her family, friends, and God are all results of her Christian background and her zest for life. Pierce has not only driven herself to master the game of volleyball, she has driven herself to master the game of life.

Keeping The Tradition Alive

Dedication" was the one word volleyball coach Linda Spencer used to describe this year's Spikers, a team that consisted of twelve versatile players who contributed their all.

This season the Spikers entered the conference tournament undefeated. They gained two more wins in the tournament, but had to face defeat after displaying tremendous effort.

Coach Spencer attributed the team's success to numerous factors. "A healthy body is the major attribute. The girls take the initiative in proceeding with stretching and staying in shape. Also, the team possesses natural talent. Most of the girls were recruited from high school," she explained.

The Spikers had eleven returning members and one walk-on freshman this season, which helped to maintain a close working relationship.

Senior Arlinda Pierce, was appointed to the All-Tournament Team and both Pierce and junior Kialyn Walker, were appointed to the All MEAC Team. Senior Nicola Johnson, received the G.T.E. Performance/Academic Award Winner, and sophomore Michelle Simmons was ranked #13 out of the nation's top twenty players for serving aces. It was evident that working together as a team made it easier for the Spikers to produce winning seasons.

This season the Spikers lost five valuable players, however, plans were made to recruit talented high school seniors for the team next year.

As the seniors move on, those remaining looked forward to new team members, and another excellent season.

Tennis Team Nets Success

The Bison netters made a lot of "racket" on the court this year, under the direction of Coach Larry Strickland. As the coach for the past seven years, he brought the level of competition up in men's tennis considerably for the team that has gone undefeated for four years.

Strickland said that although he had a young team, he was confident that they would fare well. "We didn't do well during the fall semester, but we tend to play better in the spring when we start conference play." Strickland said that finding enough players has been a difficult problem this year. "Having a limited budget, I can only offer partial scholarships; therefore, I'm not able to recruit talented players." Strickland did, however, cite junior Nnamdi Lowrie as his most consistent player. Lowrie was one of three returners from last year's team who showed great potential this year.

Accumulating a record of 1-6 in the fall, the Bison netters were optimistic going into the spring season. In only their sixth year of intercollegiate competition, the team built a foundation upon hard work and dedication. With a fairly young program, they managed to capture two conference titles in the last three years. Compiling a 1-6 record in the fall, Strickland says that this doesn't reflect their true abilities. "The players have a super work ethic which is probably going to help us in the long run." Sophomore Stephanie Johnson, and junior Angie Midlwin, have both shown great improvement this year, stated Strickland. Overall, the men and women's tennis team made great strides toward success.

Bison Co-Captains Excell

Michael Williams

Some knew him as a "dynamo" on the soccer field. Others knew him as a "very pleasant" person. He is Michael "Mike" Williams, one of two co-captains of Howard University's infamous soccer team, the Bison Booters. On the field, the twenty-one year old captain from Rockville, MD tried to relax and concentrate on what he could do to contribute to the overall game. Mike described the most valuable traits in a soccer player as intelligence, skill, and determination on the field.

When asked how it felt to win or lose a game, Mike responded by saying, "Losing is hard. That's all I can say. Winning feels really good, especially if you've worked hard."

Off the field Williams is the youngest of four children—two girls and two boys. According to the co-captain, he and his older brother Irving both learned to play soccer when their family moved to Tanzania, Africa for two years when he was five years old. He and "Irv" continued to play soccer when the family moved back to the U.S. and have been playing ever since. Williams said his brother "played the biggest part in his growth as a soccer player."

Williams' hobbies include sports and reading afrocentric literature. He also has a deep appreciation for the arts, and likes to go dancing.

As a political science major, Williams aspires to be a history teacher on the high school level because he believes that is the age at which youths need the most help. He eventually wants to become a college professor. Williams said that he wants to teach history because "it's something that we as black people need to know. We're one of the few races which suffers from a lack of knowledge about our history."

Michael Williams is more than just an excellent soccer player. He is someone with a variety of interests in culture and he is dedicated to helping the African American community progress. In the words of Coach Landy, the assistant coach for the Booters, "Mike is definitely going places."

Shaka Hislop

Shaka Hislop has taken college level soccer by storm since joining Howard's Bison Booters in the fall of 1988. As a freshman, his quick moves and dives helped the team advance to the finals of the National Championship Game in 1988.

Since then, he has made such achievements as being named Academic-All American for the 1989-90 season, being reserve goalie for the Trinidadian National Team for the summer of 1990, and becoming one of the leading candidates for the All American Team.

Gianni Grimaldi, Goalie coach for the Booters, referred to Shaka as "the best goalie he's trained in the United States." Shaka takes the initiative to coach himself on new techniques.

Shaka, a junior Mechanical Engineering major, said that his hobbies are listening to calypso and reggae music, playing sports, and going to parties. But most of all, he loves to play soccer.

A native of Digo Martin, Trinidad, Shaka described soccer as "the primary sport in Trinidad, like baseball or football is in the U.S." He has two brothers, who also play soccer—Kona Hislop, and Kali. All three began soccer at an early age.

After two years of playing with the Bison Booters, Shaka was named co-captain of the team along with Michael Williams. As a co-captain, the traits that he considers most valuable in a player are the ability to work through one's weak points, and to show intelligence on the field.

When speaking of his duties as co-captain, Shaka described himself as trying to be a leader on the field by being a good influence on the players. Shaka expressed his feelings on winning and losing a game by stating, "Everyone likes to win. Nobody likes to lose, especially when you are used to winning."

After becoming co-captain, Shaka's relationship with his teammates changed little, if at all. As Shaka put it, "I am more serious on the field than off, but I have tried not to change (off the field) in any way. I've tried very hard to be the same person as I was before."

Shaka and Mike have significantly contributed to the winning spirit of the Booters. Their positive energy and determination to win, have helped the Bison Booters become a household name in the college world of soccer. With Mike Williams and Shaka Hislop as co-captains, the 1990-91 season proved to be an exciting one.

Fewer Sharks in the Pool

Suppose you were a former athlete and you were offered a position as head coach of your particular sport. This would not appear to be a problem for most people, but what if you had recently graduated from this program?

Well first year Head Coach of Howard University's swim team could be of some help. Brown who was formerly of the Trinidadian swim team, swam for the Sharks for four years.

Brown says the transition from athlete to head coach was difficult considering his unique circumstances. "It's hard to be a good coach, it's something that requires a lot of patience. In my situation I'm looking at the same sport but at a different level - the instructional level. You have to try not to let up on your friends and at the same time be able to push them and motivate them to succeed."

Although the team may have had some initial doubts about him at first, Brown says that most of them knew him and had confidence in his ability to coach. "Being a former athlete for this program enabled me to be more knowledgeable about problems facing student-athletes here at Howard."

Chris Gayle, a senior from Kingston, Jamaica says adjustment to a new coach is always difficult. "The fact that most of us were friends with him (Brown), probably made the transition harder, it was like having your teammate coach you." Gayle who swam 20.7 in the 50 yard free-style last year was chosen to participate in the Pan American games and the Caribbean Central American games this year. Gayle is one of two possible qualifiers for the NCAA division I championships.

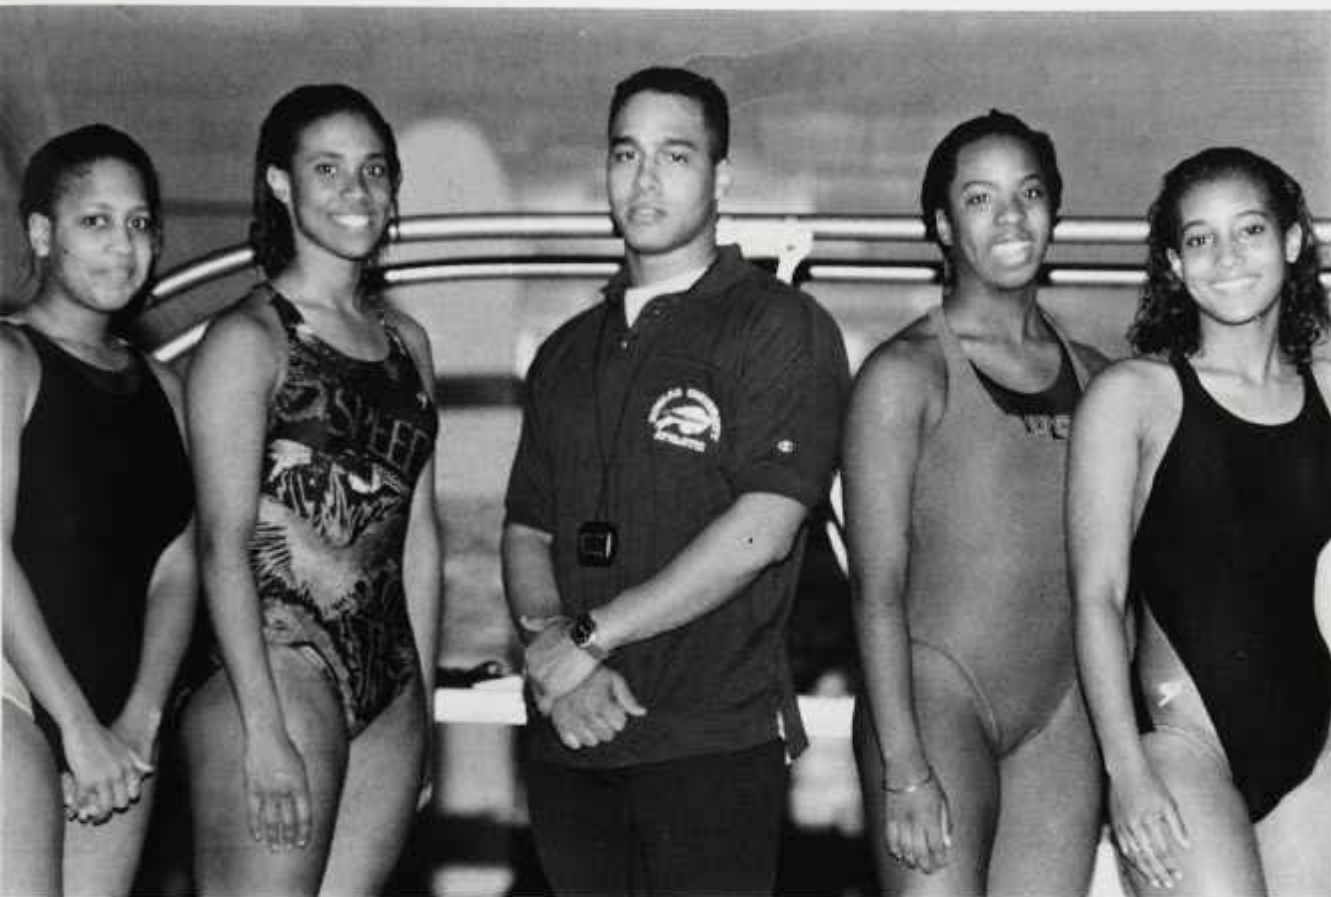

Another possible qualifier would be Mike Houston, an outstanding senior who, along with Gayle, broke pool records at Georgetown and American Universities this year. Both of these athletes aspire to be the first qualifiers from a black institution. Not being able to participate in those crucial big meets may have hindered their chances, says Gayle. "In order to gain exposure we need to be competing against bigger and better schools to prove that we are just as competent."

Finishing with a 3-5 record last year, the Sharks were faced with several problems which as yet haven't been resolved. Financial difficulties along with low recruitment plagued the team. "We have a twenty member team which is barely enough with all the events you have in a meet," says Lisa Lightfoot a senior Graphic Design major. Lightfoot is one of five women on the team. "Having only five women on a swim team is difficult, some of us have to participate in up to three events." Lightfoot says that a new rule was imposed this year stating that "I think that the program will grow because we have a lot of spirit and we're eager to succeed."

Laughter is the Key

If you saw the Lady Bison off the basketball court, you may have thought that they were a live version of the comedy "In Living Color".

This close knit group participated in everything from pranks to mimicking each other. Laresha Williams recalls, "Once after a game we dumped water on some of the male players and coach caught us but instead of punishing us she started giving us better ideas."

"This sometimes mischievous behavior served as a release mechanism," says assistant coach Linda Spencer. "The players sometimes have a lot of stress built up from school and basketball and joking around is their way of dealing with it."

Senior guard, Felicia Oliver says, "We make each other laugh and have a lot of fun off the court, but when we step on the court it's serious business." She should know, averaging 11 points and accumulating 44 steals last year, Oliver proved to be a solid contender.

The Lady Bison, who won their fourth consecutive MEAC title last year were lead by a senior dominated team.

Senior Kim Wright who averaged 7.2 points and 9.3 rebounds last year was ranked eighth in the nation for shot blocking (97).

Another contributor was Rosalyn Evans who averaged 13 points and 7 rebounds last year. Evans was named to the All-tournament team and the Black college all-rookie squad. Lashawn Fann, Laresha Williams and Willina Robson also were strong competitors along with the addition of Juniors Angelita Elliot, Tonya Banks and Freshman Annette Lee.

If laughter is the key to this team's success, then you can count on them continuing the Lady Bison tradition of excellence.

Under New Management

On October 15, 1990, a major change took place for the men's basketball team. There was a new face around, a face that transcended a look of determination and dedication. Who was this man? What kind of changes was he looking to make within the men's basketball program? And how did he plan to tackle the outstanding problems that plagued the team over the previous years?

His name: Alfred "Burch" Beard.

His mission: To coach the Howard University's men's basketball team and make the program successful.

Beard was hired by the university last June to replace 15 year coach A.B. Williamson. A native of Hardinsburg, Kentucky, Beard started his collegiate career of basketball at the University of Louisville in 1966. During his three years at Louisville (1966-69), he maintained a 19 point career scoring average and earned All-America honors during the 1968-69 season. In 1969, Beard was drafted by the Atlanta Hawks in the first round of the N.B.A. Beard also played with such teams as Cleveland, Seattle, Golden State and the Knicks. After leaving to pursue his basketball career, Beard returned to school and graduated with a B.S. in education in 1972.

Following his N.B.A. career, Beard moved on to the coaching level as an assistant to Red Holzman of the New York Knicks for four years and two years for the New Jersey Nets. Beard says he accepted this position as coach because he wanted the opportunity to be head coach and instill some values in younger players.

Junior transfer, Julius McNeil says the thought of having a new coach was a frightening experience. "People are afraid of the unknown; you don't know what to expect from someone you've never met before." Although, there may have been some complaints in the beginning, Beard says the team has made tremendous progress from day one. "After the guys realized that they could do most of the things I asked of them in practice, they became more confident".

Being receptive to change will be a determining factor in the Bison success. One may not see immediate results from this transformation, but you can be assured that in a few years the men's basketball team headed by coach Alfred "Burch"

Beard will be a competitive force in athletics.

Close, But No Cigar

Imagine this—it's five seconds left on the clock and the score is 70-70. Howard has the ball with just enough time for one shot but something happens...the ball is stolen by the other team and they win in double overtime. This scenario was common to the men's basketball team early in the season. There were many close losses, including an impressive loss to nationally ranked Georgia Tech by seven points. This year's schedule which placed 9 of it's first 11 games on the road, also, included powerhouses such as Wake Forest and St. John's. Many of the players felt that a tough schedule would make them more competitive.

"When you play a ranked school you have nothing to lose," remarks Tyrone Powell who was selected second team All-MEAC last year. Junior forward Julius McNeil adds, "When I play a good team such as Georgia Tech, I want to show them that I'm just as good as they are."

With twelve of fifteen players returning this year the Bison were provided with much experience. With Tracy King and Powell returning in the front court, the Bison proved to have a solid inside game. Kelsie Sturdivant also showed off his expertise and strength in the point this year as he worked his way into the starting line-up. Sophomore Milan Brown and Senior Milton Bynum appeared to be a tough duo at the guard position averaging 9.0 and 8.7 points respectively last year. Other players who saw some time in the guard position were Juniors Martin Huckaby, Robert Riddick and Ronney Gibbs. Although the team had some tough losses they still had to be mentally prepared for the next game.

"I look at each game as a new challenge and a way to get better," says Gibbs.

With this attitude and sense of perseverance, there is no doubt that the men's basketball team could succeed in spite of their obstacles.

The Main Ingredient--Discipline

School first, Tae Kwon Do second, Miscellaneous third and Jesus Christ above all." These are the words of wisdom from Tae Kwon Do Coach Dr. Dong Ja Yang. Dr. Yang, who has coached the Howard University's Tae Kwon Do team for the last 23 years, brought much national and international prestige and success to the university.

"He is a strict disciplinarian who has high expectations. You have to be successful not only in fighting but in the classroom as well," said Larry McMullum, who is a black belt second degree.

Dr. Yang, who is an eight degree black belt from Seoul, Korea, said recruiting members for the team isn't hard. "Many students who take elementary Tae Kwon Do as a P.E. course enjoy it so much they want to join the club." From there, many of the experienced members eventually make the team.

Patrick Renarch, a senior from West Africa, has been studying the sport for fifteen years. "I had good skills when I came here, but Dr. Yang developed all of my techniques. He can take anyone and bring out the best in them because of his experience."

Tae Kwon Do, an individual sport, originated in Korea. This form of martial arts teaches mental discipline as well as physical conditioning. Andrea Staren, a first degree black belt recalled, "One thing I'll always remember is coming home exhausted, but it felt good because I know I worked hard." Staren, a bronze medal winner in the National Collegiate Championship this year said Dr. Yang prepared them for international competition where they encountered different fighting techniques. Renarch agreed, "Fighting against people from different countries and winning makes us realize how well prepared we are."

Dr. Yang led the team to win many silver and gold medals in national as well as international competitions. The Tae Kwon Do team captured first place in many of the competitions this year. Obviously, whatever Dr. Yang's secret to success was, it had to be well worth listening to.

Struggling to overcome setbacks

The Howard University wrestling team had some major disappointments this year. The team consisting of only fourteen members, struggled to compete successfully in ten weight categories. "We have just enough players to compete in each category," says head coach Paul Cotton.

Having a limited number of scholarships, Cotton says that recruiting talented student athletes was hard. Another problem facing the grappler was the lack of experience. With only two seniors on the roster, the team had difficulty obtaining the needed points to win matches early in the season.

Funding also prohibited the team from participating in much needed tournaments. "Not being able to acquire game experience early in the season hurt us. We weren't able access and make adjustments in our techniques," says Cotton.

Despite these setbacks, the grapplers had a lot of potential. Seniors Antoine Terrell and Derek Colton both placed second in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference last year. Terrell also placed fourth in the eastern regionals in the 142 weight class. Finishing second in the conference last year, the grapplers proved to be a worthy opponent.

Cotton says that his goal is to help better his student athletes. "I want to continue to prepare kids to qualify as All-americans, score some points in the regionals and hopefully we'll learn something along the way..."

Getting It Together

The Howard University 1990-91 women's soccer players returned facing yet another season under a club status. Under the direction and encouragement of their head coach Kabir Hakim, the club was composed of approximately thirty members.

According to Coach Hakim, "Women's soccer is presently a student activity. The club is striving to obtain a NCAA varsity level status. Once this is done, Howard University will be able to proudly claim having the only Afro-American women's soccer team in the country, history will be made."

However, before making history, the club had to prove themselves by winning more games and impressing the NCAA review board. Even though they were faced with this task, there were several other obstacles as well. Inadequate practice space, low inventory of training equipment, and a low budget were their primary problems.

Marcia Black, club president, said, "In comparison to the other sports teams, women's soccer is a low priority on the totem-pole; therefore, it is hard for us to get practice time on the field." Although the general attitude of the team members seemed to be dedicated because women's soccer is "only a club team."

However, under the circumstances, this group of ladies continued to train hard in hopes of one day officially becoming members of the only Afro-American women's varsity soccer team.

Newcomer Rachelle Tillery mentioned, "Coach Hakim kept the spirit alive by offering encouragement and by keeping the team informed." Coach Hakim referred to this as truly being a unique situation in sports. The club-team felt that through awareness, more people will lend more moral support as well as financial support.

The club was the brain child of two Howard University students, Kristen Clark and Denita Nall. The initial goals were to organize enough girls interested in the sport of soccer and to obtain a team status with the hopes of going varsity. Like establishing any other organization, the club anticipated having a time factor that would prolong their growth.

By having belief in themselves as a team and striving to overcome their obstacles, the Howard University women's soccer club will, without doubt, reach all of their goals.

Learning From Adversity

Quick question: In two words, who had lightening speed, uplifting positivity, steadfast endurance, and undeniable strength? After taking one look on Howard University's track team, the answer was obvious: Suzie Tanefo.

Standing 5'8" and weighing 134 pounds, the sophomore powerhouse from Cameroon, West Africa, began her track career by running for her country under the coaching of Lee Evans, world record holder in the 400 meter dash. Knowing Tanefo could have better athletic opportunities in the United States, Evans spoke with William Moultrie, coach of the men's and women's track teams at Howard, and Tanefo signed the necessary papers and obtained a full four year scholarship.

"She's a fierce competitor and that's something you can't coach," Moultrie said. "When they [the athletes] bring those kind of ingredients with them to the track, all you can do is improve on them a little bit and let them go."

And "go" she did. Since her arrival at Howard in January 1989, Tanefo's abilities immediately placed her on the mile relay team as a freshman. She and the relay team also became All-American athletes after they qualified for the NCAA Championship Trials last March.

Tanefo knew, since coming to Howard, her opportunities were limitless, and her hard work and perseverance paid off. Although she was thankful for the scholarship, Tanefo definitely didn't describe it as a free ride.

"I wouldn't say for free because you work hard for that [scholarship], and I believe that track is one of the more difficult sports. You've got to run the whole year—nonstop. And it's not like a team sport. It's you and only you on the track. Mentally, physically—just you."

Halli Walker, captain of the team, strongly believed in Tanefo's abilities and determination. "She's one of the best athletes on the team. You don't want to let her down because you know [even if] she's hurt, she's going to run her hardest every single relay," Walker said.

Olympic glory is not too far out of reach for Tanefo. She believes her Olympic aspirations can be realized.

"I'm not trying to set a goal when I'm running. If I set a goal now, I may do better than that and I feel I'm limiting myself. I'm trying to tell myself, 'You do the best that you can do.'"

"I want to be good, and if one day I can be up there with the best, I would love that!"

Perhaps one day Tanefo will be the best, but one thing was for sure—she was definitely on the right track.

BISON LIVE 1991

Is It Live Or Is It BISON

Exiting the realm of traditional two dimensional yearbooks, Howard University's new fast-paced video yearbook debuted this spring-live and in living color!

Yearbook advisor, Leslie Harriell-Lewis, originally developed the idea for a video yearbook to accompany the traditional hardcopy book, that is available each year. The video sold for twenty dollars.

YearLook Enterprises, the video yearbook publishing company helping with the venture, corresponded with Howard's video staff regularly to help oversee the progress of the film. The newly formed staff consisted of Video Editor Leona Willis, Darren Norman, Andrea Harrell, Stephanie Thomas, Michael Harris, Rosemary Williams and Cris Dinwiddie, videographers; Desiree' Robinson, Marketing and Advertising Manager, and Livinski Plaskett, Advertising Assistant.

The mere idea of a video yearbook had many Howardites excited. Sereita Cobbs, Editor-in-chief of the Bison, said, "I'm really looking forward to it. I think anytime Howard University is among the first colleges to participate in any challenging, new area, it's something really special."

Marilyn Stiff, a junior finance major, found the video plans intriguing. "Visual aid is always stimulating. I think it'll be fun to look back on the year and actually see it in motion."

Most of the filming covered events that took place in the normal course of a day. Fraternities stepping, folks walking to and from class, and jazz musicians performing on the yard were just a few of the everyday happenings that were featured on the video.

"You never know when something is going to happen on the yard or in the valley," Willis explained. "We want you to relive your college life through this video--to be able to look back and say, 'Gee, bell-bottoms actually came back?!'"

The staff of the video definitely had its hands full, but any individuals who wanted to help with the video to meet their March 8 deadline were invited to drop by the yearbook office. Outside footage was also being accepted from students who had covered a particular event with their own camcorder.

"People should feel free to come into our office and tell us what's happening," said Willis, "because if we can, we'll cover it. We want to capture as many memories as possible."

Home Again

Dr. Franklin Jenifer made history April 1 1990, and started what will hopefully become a Howard tradition, when he became the first Howard alumnus to head the university since its founding in 1867.

Since Howard's founding, only four of its presidents have been of African-American descent. Howard University is a Black educational empire with its 18 schools and colleges, four campuses, and 12,000 students. Until Jenifer took over the reign of this empire, not one president had actually stood in the long lines to register, cheered on their fellow Bison at a Homecoming game or stayed up all night, studying in Founders Library.

President Jenifer understood first hand the concerns of Howard students and came back to his alma mater vowing "to be about the business of putting Howard on the front burner of educational players in the United States." It was the essence of those experiences that made President Jenifer believe that his administration would be unique.

"I have a desire to see Howard be all it can be. Howard is my alma mater. There is truly something special about coming back." said Jenifer.

Jenifer hit the ground running. He assigned task forces to research where improvements needed to be made in the university staff and was very visible on campus.

Dr. Jenifer came to Howard via the Massachusetts Board of Regents of Higher Education where he served as chancellor for four years.

Before embarking on a career in academia, Dr. Jenifer spent several years in scientific research. From 1962 to 1970, while studying for his advanced degrees from Howard and the University of Maryland, he worked as a plant virologist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Jenifer's wish is that Howard will meet the challenge of being the hub of excellence. "If we do not train the highest caliber of scholars--no one will."

A New Perspective

The one wish that former academic affairs vice president, Michael Winston had for Howard was to end what he called "institutionalized partying." The new vice president, Dr. Joyce Ladner, is ready to see that wish become a reality. "I, too am very concerned with institutional culture. What students perceive is an institution that emphasizes having fun and demphasizes academics."

Dr. Ladner wants to make it clear that she is by no means a spoilsport, but at the same time her position does not allow her to be a party advocate. "It's [Howard University] an easy place to have fun. God knows I'm not opposed to having fun. I do think we have to strike a balance," said Ladner.

Howard does have a reputation for its hardcore social activity, but with Ladner in charge, that reputation will be changing soon. Ladner takes personal offense to Howard being referred to as a "party" school.

Among her many goals for the university is an extended orientation program for freshman. Her proposed program would go beyond the usual Campus Pal events to include year long assemblies where students can get to know each other, faculty members, administrators, and school history.

She also wants to see the registration and financial aid programs expand. "I want to know before they get here how much financial aid they'll get rather than coming to Howard unprepared."

"If I can achieve anything in this office it would be to give students more of a sense of belonging," said Ladner. She admitted that since being promoted from her position as Dean of the School of Social Work, she has less interaction with students than she'd like to have.

Ladner, who is originally from Hattiesburg, Mississippi, says having eight siblings and a strong mother helped develop her deep convictions about family and community service. "Part of who I am has to do with where I grew up in segregated Mississippi," said Ladner. She added that her mother taught her that her place in the world had to be made, it was not guaranteed.

According to Ladner whose mother also stressed community involvements, a college education is not complete until the student gives back to the community.

Participating in the Civil Rights Movement was the giving back that Ladner did early in her academic career. For her efforts, Ladner was awarded a week long stay in jail, an experience she says helped her not to be so "narcissistic and self-centered."

The self described shy Ladner says that she does not "hang out a lot." She is very active in her church and says her one child, a sixteen year old boy, is "the center of my life."

"I want students and faculty to be able to debate inside and outside the classrooms," said Ladner. In her quest to create a stronger spirit of collegiality and enthusiasm at Howard, the Mecca of historically black education, Ladner just might be changing the world. To that she says, "If we don't change it—we're going to go down with it."

Legal Eagles

If you were interested in combining legal expertise with a grasp of the major social, political and economic problems facing the world today, the Howard University School of Law was the place for you. The School of Law has promoted social justice and equal opportunity since its conception. Always on the cutting edge of legal and social equality, the law school graduated the nation's first black female lawyer, Charlotte Ray, in 1872.

In the decades that followed, the School earned a national reputation as the "legal think tank" of the civil rights movement as professors and students alike united to challenge segregation through the courts.

The School offered three degree programs. The Juris Doctor program consisted of a rigorous course of studies designed to qualify its students to take the bar examination in all states. The first two years of the program emphasized the fundamental concepts of the law and the manner by which it was administered. In the final year, students are able to concentrate on a specific area of speciality.

The Master of Comparative Jurisprudence program was designed to give graduates of foreign law schools a better understanding of the American legal system.

For those interested in business, the Joint Juris Doctor and the Master of Business Administration programs were most beneficial.

Graduates of the School of Law could move in any number of directions, whether clerking for a judge, taking an entry-level position in a major corporation, working in a private firm, or even reaching, they were well-equipped to face the legal world.

A Lasting Impression

If one had to name a school in Howard University out of the 18 schools and colleges that personified excellence in its field, the School of Divinity would undoubtedly be mentioned.

Once called the School of Religion, the religious institution was once housed in the Carnegie Building on Howard's main campus, built by private, not government, funds. In April 1987, after an increasingly growing student enrollment, the school was able to move to its present home—a beautiful 22-acre building in northeast, Washington, D.C.

Over the years, the school has continued to grow. The nondenominational theological school includes a library, several meeting rooms, offices, and the Howard Thurman Chapel. Professor Crawford, instructor of social ethics and Dean of Rankin chapel, explained the amount of growth the school has achieved.

"We've been blessed to be able to have enough space [to hold] a variety of conferences and consultations on the campus."

National commissions, such as the NAACP, and local church and community groups have used the school's facilities. One of their main goals is to increase the communication between the Howard student, the D.C. community, and the church.

The curriculum of the School of Divinity carefully examines the Christian faith and other religions of the world, as well as studied moral, humane and ethical values. According to one student, the School of Divinity wants to become a "Loving, caring community." They were concerned about the church's welfare and future as well as the quality of life available to all people, especially those who seem to be down and out.

Upon graduation, the school's graduates serve as ministers as well as teachers, administrators, counselors, and Christian educators.

As one scribe stated, "Even those graduates who choose to pursue other types of work find that their studies at the School add a long-lasting spiritual dimension to their lives".

When in doubt, some look about

Some called it immoral, others called it a necessary evil. In any case, for many students SURVIVAL was the name of the game for academic status at Howard University and cheating played the starring and often times recurring role.

"Some people will cheat their way through anything," said Abigail Johnson, a freshman Chemistry major. "And nine times out of ten, it's premeditated."

Those words were undoubtedly true. Cheating was planned at any time—from the first day the test was scheduled to last minute, down-to-the-wire strategies. Students devised numerous methods of cheating that were diverse and imaginative.

Test answers were written on hands, shoes, jeans—you name it. Three-inch pieces of paper with a semesters worth of notes were attached to sleeves, backs of chairs—even stuck to gum under ones desk.

Reasons why students cheated were not quite as imaginative as the methods, but the list was lengthy just the same. For some, cheating was the easy way out for those who didn't want to work; for others, it was the constant competition to do well.

"There's so much pressure to get good grades," Johnson continued, "and sometimes it seems that it's impossible to know everything—those are the times they cheat."

"I have cheated," said Mark Fudge, a junior Political Science major, "but I don't practice it. I'm scared of cheating because I don't want to get caught."

Nevertheless, whatever the reason and whichever the method, cheating continued. Guilt speeches made by students and teachers alike to perpetrators did not persuade many students make that change and take the honest route. Reality was the name of their game and sadly, the bottom line was BETTER CHEAT THAN REPEAT.

MLK, Jr. Forensics Society competes nationally

Participating in tournaments in schools like Seton Hall and American University, the Martin Luther King, Jr. Forensics Society is continuing its tradition of excellence. According to Toni Blackmon, a three year veteran of the team, the MLK, Jr. Forensics Society, "has the opportunity to be in the top ten in the nation this year," Howard is the only African-American school or college that has a forensics team that competes nationally on the National Forensics Association Circuit.

Competing in areas such as prose, dramatic interpretation, extemporaneous speaking, impromptu speaking and literary criticism, the team has made significant improvements since last year. The team placed second both George Mason University and at Seton Hall University earlier in the competitive year.

"Howard has traditionally been stronger in interpretive events. I guess we are blessed in the way that we tend to express ourselves more because of our conditions," said Blackmon.

John Jackson, a sophomore and first year member, said that he benefitted greatly from being on the team.

"It is really important to me because it cured me of the anxiety I had of speaking in front of other people," said Jackson.

Membership has privileges . . . and responsibilities

The commercials are enticing. "Mastercard, its everywhere you want to be.", "American Express, don't leave home without it." Adjectives like easy, fun, and exciting are even used. But is credit really a good idea for the poor college student to have?

"Yes," said sophomore Zenji Whitsett, a Floridian enrolled in the School of Business. "Because I was going away to school I didn't want to get caught without any money. I got it for emergency purposes."

Whitsett who obtained credit two years ago owns five credit cards and admits that she often finds herself using them to buy clothes. "

Genji Sampson, a senior marketing major from Colorado said that she is aware of the dangers of abusing credit. "I know credit cards can get you into trouble and I'm getting out of school so I need to avoid that."

One college junior who asked not to be identified said that he was not as lucky. "I had an American Express card and I didn't make my payments on time. I didn't take their threats or policies that seriously." Subsequently, his card was cancelled. "They shouldn't allow college freshmen to have credit. They're just not responsible."

Whitsett disagrees, "If they have a means of paying off their debts, I don't see any problem with issuing credit to students."

Journalism experience pays off for Chappell

Someone had to stand up and take charge of the largest, most widely read African-American college newspaper in the United States.

Enter Kevin Chappell into the picture and that "someone" was found. A senior broadcast major from Greenville, South Carolina, Chappell was qualified and ready to take the position as Editor-in-Chief of The Hilltop.

After entering Howard in 1987, Chappell has created quite a resume. As a freshman, Chappell joined Howard University's debate team and began interning right away.

In his sophomore year, Chappell kept climbing the ladder of success and was selected as Accent editor of the Community News, and joined the staff of NewsVision, a student-run television program shown on Howard's own WHMM Channel 32.

Becoming Managing Editor of the Community News was Chappell's next feat in his junior year. That summer he interned at Johnson Publishing Company, where he researched and wrote stories for Ebony and Jer magazines.

His senior year brought Chappell to the position of Editor-in-Chief of the aforementioned Hilltop, as well as the job as a Campus Stringer for The New York Times.

"I got a chance to experience my ability to manage a large staff," he explained. "It's really a lot of work and you're never really finished.

"[Working at the paper] was what basically what I expected—well, more than I expected, actually, as far as the amount of work it takes to put a paper together and how the paper depends on people doing their job."

As far as future plans were concerned, Chappell said that his options remained wide open. "Maybe TV, newspapers, magazines. I'll be a reporter somewhere. I haven't ruled out anything," he said.

Affection etiquette on campus

"Affectionately crazy," is how Junior Psychology major, David Holman describes himself. On a campus where the ratio of women to men is rumored to be as high as seven-to-one, one might call David unique in his desire to be publically affectionate.

On the Yard you can often see friends embracing after a long or not so long separation; Big hugs and warm smiles are especially common at the beginning of a new semester and around Homecoming, but they become less and so during the hurried days of midterms and finals. Does seeing two men or women hug give you a warm feeling or send suspicious chills running down your spine? Is a couple locked in a sloppy wet kiss something you enjoy seeing on your way to and from classes, or do you care?

It would seem that at a school of Howard's size and reputation, appearing to be too attached could hinder one's chances at 'playing the field.' Au contraire, said one student,

"Howard women know what they want, they know how to get what they want. Sometimes, more often than not, they will attempt to get what they want no matter who it hurts." He also added, "Not saying that Howard women are evil or deceiving—they have their definition of a good man. (And) the ends justify the means."

Acceptable "Affection Etiquette" On Campus For: ...

Crystal Evans, a freshman from California, defended her right to be publically affectionate, "people are gonna' think what they want to think. I hug the people I know here, now!"

What is proper "affection etiquette" on a college campus? Many students agreed that hand holding and hugging are basically harmless for non-platonic relationships, because affection is shown without being disruptive.

By Dara Jackson

FRIENDS

Hand Holding

Nor too cool. Leaves too much room for outside speculation.

Hugging

Very acceptable, unless the hugs occur too frequently

Kissing

Can be completely misconstrued (except on cheeks)

MORE THAN FRIENDS

Very acceptable, unless you have more than one "friend"

Totally acceptable

Playful kisses are allowed as long as the parties involved know what's up

Howard Press educates aspiring publishers

Many people dream of writing the best selling novel that will make them the next Baldwin or Walker, but few think of the people behind the book. Howard University Press' Book Publishing Institute has been considering the business of training young people for the book publishing industry for a decade.

The Institute was founded by the Howard University Press with a grant from Time Inc. in 1980. Since then, more than 100 graduates have gone through the West Campus headquarters.

The summer program involves a five week training that introduces students to all facets of book publishing. Those enrolled are required to live on campus because the demanding schedule often calls for weekend and evening meetings.

The four key areas of instruction are: editorial, production and design, and business and marketing. Program graduates are exposed to instructors from major publishing houses that become potential job contracts.

"My experience at the Book Publishing Institute landed me my first job in book publishing..." said Maleika Adera, an editor at Fireside Books.

Avis Taylor, Program Administrator, feels that "the goal for the coming years is to ensure that Howard students take advantage of the opportunities that are available through the institute."

Ambassadors Guide Future Students

Have you ever seen a group of people who are not quite old enough to be students walking across the yard awestruck? Were these student led by a Howard student who was answering questions and exuding that H.U. confidence?

What you witnessed was undoubtedly a tour being led by one of the university's many student ambassadors. All student ambassadors are unpaid and lead tours on a regular basis to non-Howardites strictly because they have a special dedication to Howard.

"I became an ambassador because it allows me to share my love of Howard with others," said Gillian Pratt, a senior microbiology major from Hartford, Connecticut who has been an ambassador for four years and now serves on the executive board.

Love of Howard is not enough however, participants must be willing to offer their time as though they were being paid for what Linda Hawkins of the student recruitment office refers to as a "valuable service."

In fact, Hawkins finds working with the ambassadors "the most rewarding aspect" of her job.

No Chime, No Time!

The clock on top of Founder's Library has been a landmark for Howard University since the school was founded in 1897. Incoming students have endearingly come to associate the clock and its chimed rendition of the school alma mater with both university's social and academic atmosphere.

But this year, the class of 1994 was not welcomed by those cheery chimes, or given the option of glancing up at the clock for the correct time. While the clock was also not working at the beginning of last year, you would think that with a new administration calling the shots, everything would be running like clock-work (especially the clock).

Because incoming freshman had no fond memories of the clock, they did not miss it, but many upper-classmen were disheartened by the clock's malfunctioning.

Michelle Bando, a junior majoring in public relations, said "Howard is supposed to strive for excellence, and there is no reason for the clock not to be working."

A lot of people depend on that clock," said broadcast journalism major Tracey Carr. "If I don't have a watch on, I depend on the clock to tell me whether I'm early or late for class," added the junior.

For Toya Williams, an accounting major in her sophomore year, the clock's temperament was nothing new. "The clock wasn't working when I entered as a freshman in 1989, but it did start working at the end of the fall semester. So it must have just stopped working."

In September, Nick Fletcher, maintenance operation supervisor, said that the clock wasn't working because of "a malfunctioning rope mechanism that plays the song at noon and 6 p.m., and because of recurring power interruptions, complicated by problems at the power plant."

HUSA recovers from leftover deficit

The slogan was "Leadership For the Masses"—from the masses. Softspoken April Silver and "that militant" Ras Baraka were running for HUSA President and Vice-President? The mere thought had many administrators shaking in their boots. But despite opposition, they ran—and won, leading Howard University into one of the most Afrocentric administrations in the school's history.

"When April and I first decided to run," Baraka said, "we wanted to make [HUSA] people-oriented—that's why we said 'Leadership For the Masses', because we felt the [HUSA] government wasn't necessarily representing the whole student body... I think we've successfully done that."

HUSA introduced various Afrocentric programs, and a networking conference entitled "Hip Hop At It's Crossroads."

Unfortunately, the last HUSA administration left Silver and Baraka a large deficit to repay. The new administration sold "Support Black Colleges" buttons, keychains, T-shirts, and hats through a non-profit organization called "Student Bodies," and were able to pay their bills and have a little over $2,000 left in the bank for the next administration.

Leaning on the edge of success

You probably knew Steven Lee and didn't even realize it. Best known for his portrayal of Arthur "Sly" Bartell (Pam's boyfriend), on the "Cosby Show", Lee was a Howard University sophomore this year majoring in advertising.

Born in Washington, D.C. and raised in New Jersey, he explained that not only talent brought him success, but luck as well.

In 1988, he landed the role in "Lean On Me" where he was the irresponsible student leader, and also appeared in a Folger's coffee commercial about a soldier returning home to his family.

Obviously, another one of Howard's own was on the verge of making a name for himself in the entertainment scene. Okay, so he wasn't "run-across-the-yard-to-watch-him-ear-a-hot-dog" material this past year, but just give him time. Soon Lee may be joining the ranks of the Kadeem Hardisons and Malcolm-Jamal Warners of the acting world.

Virginity--Not such a rarity

This past year, the words "virgin" and "extinct" were almost synonymous. We knew these individuals existed. Some were obvious, others were undercover. But there was one undeniable fact about them: they were the sure fire minority here on "the hill" of Howard University.

Pilar Roche', a 21-year-old senior from California, said that it was her lack of substantial relationships that had forced her to keep her virginity, while Michelle, a 19-year-old sophomore from

New York, credited her perseverance to growing up in a Christian home where premarital sex was taboo.

Male virgins were the hardest to talk to, because not many were willing to give out that type of information; however, Gary, an 18-year-old freshman from Ohio admitted his virginity was not by chance, but by choice.

"It's not a religious thing for me, it's more spiritual. I don't think it's right to be promiscuous. I believe in monogamy."

The end result was the simple fact that virgins had absolutely nothing to be ashamed of. Many students who had lost their virginity admitted that they had somewhat of a feeling of envy as well as awe toward the virgin male or female for the fact that they did wait as long as they did--perhaps for what they considered as the "right one."

Delta's walk for life

It was approximately 9:30 a.m. when a huge group congregated in the valley amidst spots of crimson and cream. The day was as dreary as it was long, but no one seemed to care. Despite the seemingly endless journey, these people were on a mission.

The ladies of Alpha Chapter, Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., held their 13th annual Walk-A-Thon in October. Despite the weather, the event turned out to be a whopping $12,000 success.

Sorority members, as well as over 350 volunteers walked 20 miles throughout the D.C. area to raise funds for the Cancer Research Center at Howard University. Kelly Green, coordinator of the Walk-A-Thon, explained that after a member of the sorority was diagnosed with a cancerous tumor, the Deltas decided to allocate the funds to cancer research.

"I think it's an important thing [cancer research], especially for Black females, that we all need to be aware of," Green said. "Hopefully, they'll be able to do better research and help more people in the black community."

Steffanie Carr, a Public Relations major, enjoyed the walk and believed in its cause, but was more than happy when the journey was complete; however, she noted that she would not hesitate to participate in the event again.

Out On Your Own

Off-Campus Life

Each year, a great number of students are faced with the reality of having to find off-campus housing. Most students find this experience a big adjustment that makes them become more responsible and self-sufficient than their peers that reside in the dorms.

Because Howard's residence halls are only equipped to accommodate about 3,409 students, the remaining must live off-campus in D.C., Maryland, or Virginia. The recent addition of the Howard Plaza Towers apartments has added 1,349 new spaces.

Students pay an average of $400-800 a month for one bedroom apartments and $600-1200 a month for two bedrooms in the District. This leads many students to seek roommates who will share expenses, or jobs to pay for housing necessities.

Students realized that off-campus housing had its disadvantages. Doris Minikon, a student living in suburban Maryland, said, "When you live off campus, you are not as up to date with campus activities."

Men of the Year

1990 Awards Banquet

Men of the Year—Turning Walls Into Doors Through Dedication to Excellence,” was the theme of the 1990-91 UGSA Men of the Year Awards Banquet, and the four distinguished honorees were undeniably deserving.

The winners for excellence in their various fields were: Ronald Brown, for politics; Dr. Louis Sullivan, for medicine; Donald Temple, for outstanding community service, and John Thompson, for the field of athletics.

Several attendants simply described the entire evening as “great”, and from the welcome to the closing, the ideas shared by the speakers were both enlightening and informative. Ronald Brown, chairman of the National Democratic Committee, kicked the evening off as the first speaker. He informed the audience about the importance of politics and how it can be found in almost every aspect of our lives, especially as African Americans. “We need leaders who exemplify positive role models in our communities”, said Louis Sullivan, head of the Federal Department of Health and Human Services. He spoke about the field of medicine and the advantages of a health conscious climate. Donald Temple, advisor to the Executive Director of the DC Commission on Women and former Howard student, spoke on several topics, ranging from his days at HU (when Meridian was 1 floor of men and 6 floors of women) to politics and economics.

“To be recognized [for an award] is special,” he said “but to be recognized by a group you respect is better. A community service award is an award of community empowerment.”

As the last speaker, John Thompson was tagged as the highlight of the evening. Described as “entertaining” by several observers, the head coach of the Georgetown University basketball program said that he hated folks mentioning his 98% four year graduate rate because he believes that in college the least one can aspire to do is graduate, and if not, they should get some kind of education.

Howard Takes L.A.

Bison Crush Jaguars

This year when the Bison Football team kicked off the Los Angeles Football Classic against Southern University, the Showtime Marching Band was right beside them. The classic, which was held on September 2nd, served to encourage support from the national community for our nation's black colleges and universities. This year Howard was chosen to participate.

One band member said, "We knew that marching against Southern would be a challenge because of their reputation, but we knew we had a good show as long as we put it together...and we did."

In order to perfect its five performances, the band had to put in long hours of practice. During band camp they practiced twelve hours a day, and three hours a day as school began.

Teri Bronist said, "One doesn't travel 2000 miles to be defeated, so the extra work was worth it."

Hope for the Homeless

Sigma's Sleepout

The night began simply enough. There were just a few students on The Yard; some huddled together, while others stood around conversing. Hours later, snores could be heard as the students slept on the ground. These people experienced, first-hand, the wrath poverty places on society's back: homelessness.

Sponsored by Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc., the Fourth Annual Sleep Out For the Homeless was a moral success. The group collected money, food, and clothing for the House of Imogene, a shelter run by Reverend Imogene Stewart. Robert Simpson, coordinator of the sleepout and junior political science major, explained that the "House" was greatly in need [of] money.

"They're only operating on $25,000 a year for I don't know how many people that come through here. That's why we wanted to collect as much as we could and donate the proceeds to Rev. Stewart."

Simpson explained that the flagpole on The Yard was chosen as the meeting spot because it was a "central and easy location for the students."

"I think that it was a good turnout," Simpson said. "A couple of other events were going on that night, but a lot of people were able to drop off things even if they weren't able to stay."

About forty students made donations of canned goods and clothing to the fraternity to be distributed to various homeless agencies.

DeWayne Davis, sophomore economics major, explained that he thought the sleepout was an extremely positive experience.

"I felt the sense of community, a sense of realness—a feeling like you're being hugged and no one's even touching you."

And so the night ended. Students walked home with a somewhat different outlook on the homeless, knowing—if they hadn't already—that these people were simply unfortunate victims of society, not peasants to be insulted and ignored. They learned that it is important that we, as human beings, do not turn our backs on them because indeed, one day the tables may be turned.

A Brighter Future

U p w a r d B o u n d

Throughout the school year on Saturdays you might have noticed that the students on campus looked a little younger than the average Howard student you saw on "The Yard" during the week. On Saturdays, the students that filled the School of Engineering building appeared to be less serious-minded than those who live in "The Valley" on weekdays. Those students were involved in the Upward Bound program.

Upward Bound has been on Howard's campus since 1965, serving over 6,000 high school students. The federally-funded program is available for students in grades 9-12 with the grade point average of "C" or better. The program is designed for students from low-income families or students who will be the first in their family to attend college. Upward Bound places emphasis on assessing interests, abilities, academic skills, and career goals. Formal instruction, however, is only offered in English, mathematics, science, reading, SAT preparation, and study skills.

Students attend Saturday classes throughout the regular school term. During the summer they live in on-campus dormitories for six weeks to get a glimpse at what living at college is really about.

Shawn Pelore, a Howard student who participated in Upward Bound in high school, felt that the best part of the program is that "it allows students to experience some of the trials and tribulations of college life without actually being in college."

Assistant Director, Joseph B. Hill, has been involved with the program at Howard since 1981. The program has been quite successful in placing over ninety-five percent of its graduates in prestigious colleges and universities throughout the country. Upward Bound is one of the few federally-funded programs that place emphasis on shaping today's youth. Hopefully, it will continue to expand and produce the leaders of tomorrow.

Seconds Anyone?!

d'aka Serves H.U.

During the summer, students received a notice to hold off on buying a meal plan. The University was in the process of choosing a new food service company.

Finally, a decision was made, and daka began its service of providing well-balanced meals to students.

One of the main differences between daka and the previous food service company employed by Howard is that daka features unlimited seconds (all you can eat).

"The one thing I like the most about eating in the cafeteria this year is that I don't have to leave feeling hungry," said Dewayne Davis, sophomore.

According to Jean Slay-Vines, Food Service Director, "Although daka features unlimited seconds, they basically try to provide a better quality of food."

In general, most of the students enjoyed the features that daka provided and are looking forward to enjoying their food service program for years to come.

Beating the Rush

Bookstore lines

Anyone who entered the campus bookstore during the first week of classes should have been prepared for a very long wait. In a rush to buy books before the supply was depleted, students crowded into the bookstore's crowded space and remained in line for up to three hours.

"I thought I'd be off the hook by getting to the bookstore at 7:30 a.m., but when I got there, a line had already formed to the end of the walkway," said sophomore Nkenge Sims.

Thabani Banda, a sophomore commented,

"This year it took me about 20 minutes to get through the lines. The secret was going early before classes started and before the freshmen knew where the bookstore was."

There have been plans to improve the condition of the bookstore since 1983. The main problem seems to be finding funding for the extensive work that is needed.

Jamie Negron, the bookstore director, estimated costs at $1 million. The renovations should take less than two years to complete.

Figures Increase

International Students

Jamaica, Puerto Rico, London, and Hong Kong... The list reads more like a vacation brochure than four of the 109 countries students travel from to attend Howard University.

Of the estimated 12,506 students enrolled, nearly 2,000 are international students. During the 1990-91 academic year, international students made up 15.1% of the Howard community. Of the 1,892 international pupils, 39.8% were from the Caribbean, 36.1% from Africa, 8.8% from North, Central or South America, and 15.3% were from the Far East and Pacific region, the Near and Middle East and Europe.

Unlike the average student, international students dealt with more than sharing a closet-sized space with a stranger or adjusting to new academic demands. He or she must also adjust to a new culture.

Christine Dunbar, a native Jamaican, said a big problem has been mingling with American students. "They don't know anything about the Caribbean. There are a lot of misconceptions about the West Indies." She felt that most American students, "don't think about the Caribbean as they think of New York or Washington."

African Students Association Interim Chairman Charles Curtis-Thomas agreed, "The Americans are more lacking in knowledge about Africans than the Africans are lacking in knowledge of Americans."

Curtis-Thomas, from Sierra Leone, added that Howard is a great place—educationally and socially," despite the problems international students and American students may have co-existing on The Yard."

The education of international students is being threatened by the ten percent tuition increase that went into effect during the 1990-91 academic year. This percentage is slated to increase until it reaches fifty percent. Continued increases may severely lower international enrollment which has declined by more than 400 students since 1985.

Food Delivery Services

I'd like to order a large pizza with everything on it."

This is just one phrase many students used at least once a week instead of cooking or going to the cafeteria.

Fast food restaurants such as Pizza Hut, Domino's, Good Ho, Trio's, D.C. Pizza Express and Wing Supreme accommodated many students' erratic appetites by delivering to the dorms.

According to Cynthia Major, a cashier at Wing Supreme, 60 percent of their orders were called in by Howardites.

Some students ordered out instead of using the meal plan because it required payment in advance.

"I don't have a lump sum of money at one time," said senior Tonya Smith. Sophomore James Hammonds added, "It just scares me that I might need a large sum of money one day and I can't get it because I paid it to the meal plan."

Delivering from as early as 11 p.m. and as late as 2 a.m., fast food establishments serviced Howard students whenever hunger struck.

School of C Gets Busy

Howard's film department was 'jumpin'' this year due to instituting new programs, installing awards, and turning out successful students.

"Howard is a good school and it is known all over the world. I don't think there are any programs out there that are more geared towards African-Americans," said second year graduate student Edgar Davis. Davis, who held an internship recently at the Smithsonian Institute, is just one of the many successes that have been produced by Howard's film department.

Among others, Jason

Stewart, a junior, worked on The Potomac Productions for the movie, "James Brown: The Man, The Music, and The Message". Senior, Judy Kulp has held an internship at Warner Brothers. Souheil Helou, a graduate student, works with the Kember Group which does film projects in the city. He also, along with Sam Sullivan, works with NewsVision, a WHMM student run television program.

"Howard's film department gives a person the opportunity to expand your horizons and to be the best you can be," said Olaniyi Areke, a fifth year graduate student.

"If you look at the blacks that hold the top positions in the film industry, most of them graduated from Howard," said Areke, who won a local Emmy Award for his video production of Descendant, a documentary on the relationship between Africans and their African descendants throughout the diaspora.

Jackie Gill, another graduate student, won the Princess Grace Award. The $7,000 Award is given by the country of Monaco for excellence in film in honor of Princess Grace, as well as a grant from the Honda Corporation.

According to Dr. Bishetta Merritt, there were a few new programs in the film department this year. There is a mentoring program where people from the film industry are invited to have dinner with film students to give them tips on "ways in which they could better prepare themselves to enter the work place," said Dr. Merritt.

Rally for Peace

V. A. Beach Boycott

Let's take a look back. Virginia Beach 1989—the mere mention of the date created controversy and discussion. As "Fight the Power" by Public Enemy raced through your mind, you may have remembered the fights or the police brutality.

Virginia Beach 1990. The police force was increased, hotels distinguished customers by having them fashion identification bracelets. Many merchants, if they hadn't closed their shops, practically doubled their prices! But wait! Where was everyone? Surely all students didn't stay at home. Definitely not! The students had their own celebration on the campuses of UDC and Howard University.

Peace Productions is a coalition of area youth and student organizations that wanted to give students an alternative to Virginia Beach.

"The idea of Peace Productions stemmed from events that occurred at Virginia Beach in 1989," explained April Silver, president of HUSA. "We decided it was time we, as African American youths, organized amongst ourselves to address the brutality of African American people of law enforcement agencies."

An entire weekend of events for the Labor Day weekend was scheduled by the Peace Productions organization from a kickoff "Party for Peace" at the Kilimanjaro nightclub to an all day "Afrikafest!!!" at Banneker High School on Labor Day. The theme was "Go Back to Black", and from the estimated turnout at several of the events (easily three hundred individuals were in attendance at the Peace rally), that's exactly what many students did.

The "Peace Rally", one of the highlights of the weekend, turned out to be an undeniable success. Rousing speeches were given by Asantewaa Nkrumah-Ture', Michael 3X, and Patrice Grant. Aarian Pope, a member of Black Nia F.O.R.C.E. and student speaker, explained the essence of the boycott. "We're not saying we're not going to go back....the universe is ours.

"We can go any damn where we want to go...but we have to make them understand that our money is very important."

While some confessed that they didn't learn anything new from the rally, and thought it to be a mini spring picnic, others responded favorably. Sean Robinson, sophomore finance and accounting major explained, "I liked it very much. The speakers were good [and] this was organized. [There was] so much unity. I didn't see one bit of static when I was there."

Many students observed that the "Go Back to Black" weekend could start a trend on Howard's campus. Malik Ali, political science major, said, "We had a large crowd out there and I think in times to come, it'll be larger. Just how Virginia Beach began with a small crowd...I feel Howard's little fest will be as large as everybody else's."

Mo' Better Shoes

A Fashion Trend

Just what is it that constitutes fashion and style? No need to question the students on the hill, Howard University students knew they had style and it showed—especially in the shoes on their feet. From Timberlands to House shoes, students proved their personality differences with their shoes. Versatility was the rule, and absolutely NO shoe was ugly!

This year brought on all types of athletic footwear. Among students interviewed about their preferred sports shoe, Nike was a big favorite.

Apparently Bo Jackson knew his Crosstrainers would be a hit. Selling for about $110, they were very popular on the fashion list for men. Mars Blackmon's question in the Air Jordan commercial, "Is it the shoes?!" was answered. Yes it was; Jordan's $100+ basketball shoes led the pack in sport shoes.

Boots and style shoes were in high demand. Brands such as Nine West, Jazz, and Via Spiga were among the favorites listed. Boot styles ranged from riding boots to the popular Guess shoe boots in suede and leather. Colors weren't just basic black or brown anymore. Purples, reds, greens and mustards—you name it, the students wore it.

What came first—style or comfort? This question made many students sit down and evaluate their "shoe standards." Despite many hesitations to answer this question, style won easily over comfort. "Ask anyone," said Malcolm Innis, sophomore Human Development major, "people look at what they like before they know how it feels."

Those words may be true enough; however, imagine if you wanted a particular shoe and the only sizes available were a 6, 7, and a 10. You wear a size 9; do you buy the shoe anyway? "Heck yeah!", exclaimed Elizabeth Phillips, senior psychology major. "I have a closer full of shoes that hurt my feet."

Ironically, the males felt the same way. Evan Clayton, junior speech pathology and audiology major explained, "If I see something I like, I'll get it, no matter what style or where it is."

To purchase athletic footwear, both men and women flocked to the Footlocker. For other styles, folks shopped at stores such as Macy's, Hecht's, Nine West, and Joan and David at Ann Taylor. According to Janel Fonsworth, a Howard student and an employee at Joan and David at Union Station, the majority of their shoes start at $160, with the highest priced boot at $350.

The amount of shoes students owned was surprising. Most female students owned an average of twenty pairs of shoes, while the male students usually kept their shoe purchases limited to four or five pairs.

Kenya Rice, sophomore in the College of Liberal Arts, owns at least 25 pairs of shoes, and spends about $500 to $600 a year on new footwear. Some students reportedly owned more than 65 pairs of shoes, and spent as much as $1000 or more a year.

Gee, Michael. I guess it really is "the shoes".

Joe Montana failed to lead San Francisco to a third straight Super Bowl title. The 49'rs lost to the New York Giants in the NFC Championship game. The Giants went on to nip the Buffalo Bills, 20-19, in the Super Bowl.

Donald Trump, who had been a symbol of 80's wealth and decadance suffered financial troubles in the Fall of 1990 and was ordered by his bankers to limit his personal expenditures to $30,000 a day. The real estate tycoon and hotel magnet was also divorced from his wife Ivana.

The U. S. sent an estimated 650,000 troops to Saudi Arabia as part of the United Nation's Force deployed to force Iraq out of Kuwait.

Mikel Gorbachev, winner of the 1990 Nobel Peace Prize, came under fire for allowing troops in Latvia to suppress the Latvian's call for democracy.

Citizens of both East and West Germany celebrate the landmark joining of their two countries at Pro Unity Rallies.

Marjorie Judith Vincent became the third African-American selected Miss America in the last four years. Vincent succeeded 1990 Miss America Debbye Turner.

Independent filmmaker, Spike Lee garnered continued success with his hit 1990 MO' BETTER BLUES. MO' BETTER BLUES also starred Lee's sister Joie and Academy Award winner Denzel Washington. The film also produced a multi-platinum selling soundtrack album and the hit single "Harlem Blues."

Children of all ages mourned the death of Muppets creator Jim Henson. Henson's characters included those found on the hit shows "Sesame Street" and "The Muppet Show." Two generations of young people grew up being amused by friendly characters like "Miss Piggy," "Kermit-The Frog," "Big Bird," and "Fozzie Bear."

L.A. based R&B group, En Vogue, soared to superstar status in 1990. The quartet's debut album produced the hits "Hold On" and "Lies."

International mega star Madonna kept her name the press in 1990. She "dogged" Arsenio Hall his late night talkshow, produced a multi-platinum greatest hits album, starred in the movie DICK TRACY, and had her video for her number one single "Justify My Love" banned from MTV airplay.

1 Take One

Nineteen ninety-one was a year of many firsts.

A school year which began with the continued joy of peace had gone full circle and into war. The world that celebrated the news of the release of Nelson Mandela now watched the war in the Persian Gulf on television each night.

Support and opposition for Operation Desert Storm was expressed by students across the campus. Although positions about the war varied, everyone hoped that the conflict would end quickly and with few casualties.

H.U. students also found an array of smaller changes in their lives.

Registration was unbelievably quick for most students, H.U. produced the first African-American college video yearbook, and the food in the "Cafe" was finally made edible.

Dr. Franklin Jenifer seemed to be blowing new life and energy into Howard. "The Mecca" began to live up to its reputation of being the center of African-American intellect.

1 Take One

The experiences of a year that was filled with so many highs and lows will stand out in our memories forever. At Howard, we continued to learn about ourselves, our people, and our world.

But, unlike film scenes that can be spliced and edited together in any manner desired, we discovered that every moment in everyday was in fact its own "Take One."

From the Editor's Desk

Well, that's it! As editor-in-chief of BISON 1991, I sincerely hope that you enjoyed the yearbook. "TAKE ONE" was an amalgamation of the creativity and intellect of Howard University students. It was our desire to construct a yearbook that would exhibit the many unique and glorious facets of "The Mecca."

It is my hope that regardless of how far away life may take you away from Howard that you can dust off your copy of BISON 1991 and feel at home again.

Thanks to everyone that made "TAKE ONE" possible.

Peace and Love,

Sereira N. Cobbs

WARNER-LAMBERT UNEQUALLED OPPORTUNITY

That's what Herman Armstrong and Tracey Bell found when they joined Warner-Lambert.

When Herman graduated from Michigan State in 1969, we were one of the few companies actively recruiting black students into management—actively seeking bright, aggressive people with the ability to make the most of opportunity.

Today, over 700 employees report to Herman, who manages the plant in Lititz, Pennsylvania, which manufactures all of the Listerine, Listermint, Benylin Cough Syrup, Anusol and Tucks sold in the United States—over $400 million dollars in sales annually.

Herman's career is not unusual at Warner-Lambert. "The opportunity is here," Herman says, "but you have to take advantage of it."

Tracey Bell feels much the same way. She first came to Warner-Lambert as a summer intern working on new products.

And after receiving her MBA from the University of Wisconsin, she chose to join us full time.

Because we judge our people solely by their credentials and the quality of their work, Tracey feels that she can become a product manager. "It can happen fast."

Tracey admits, "but then, profit and loss responsibility knows no color—except, of course, green."

At Warner-Lambert, there are other unequalled opportunities like these in research and development, marketing and finance (for MBA holders), and pharmaceutical and consumer sales. Just write to our

Manager of Corporate Recruiting, Warner-Lambert Company, 201 Tabor Road, Morris Plains, NJ 07950.

Sherry's Vision: A Solution In Every Challenge.

Her vision helps drive the new vision of Kodak.

For Sherry Gearing, Spelman College '75, the only thing better than being challenged with a problem is coming up with the perfect solution.

As a Systems Analyst, she works on location for Kodak's business units, designing computer-based information systems.

"The difference between design analysis—what I do now—and straight programming, is that I get involved with the client's business," she says. "That gives my job a human dimension I like."

Her current in-house client needed a memory source that could store a lot of technical service information and be accessed easily.

She created a new problem/solution format that allows users to quickly get at information with any one word from the document. Instead of limiting access to just one or two key words.

"I've been able to use the latest technology. And I've had a lot of freedom to make my own decisions," she says. "I make a recommendation, and my judgment is taken for what it is. I don't have to go through a lot of bureaucracy."

Last year, Sherry's clients showed their appreciation of her judgment by giving her an Outstanding Customer Support Award.

Our strength is in the vision of people like Sherry. They are the driving force behind the new vision of Kodak. Professional Recruitment and University Development, Dept. DBHO, Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, NY 14650.

*I*n 55 years of business, Giant has grown to be one of the leading food chains in the nation. But, this didn't happen overnight, nor all on its own. It took the skills and careful planning of many Giant associates to make Giant Food what it is today. And one department that has played and continues to play a key role in our growth is our Data Processing Department.

Data Processing at Giant is the thread that holds our corporate, manufacturing, warehouses and stores together as one unit. And right now, Giant is looking for entry level, junior programmers to enhance this process. Our junior programmers receive a competitive starting salary and, based on performance, receive an increase every six months for the first 18 months.

In addition, Giant provides an excellent benefits package that includes hospitalization, dental, optical and prescription coverage as well as a tax-deferred savings plan. Also, stock options are available to the associate after the first two promotions from junior programmer.

Giant uses leading-edge technology: IBM mainframes with MVS/XA; DEC systems; UNIX and 4680-based operating systems.

You Don't Have To Be White
Or Gay
To Get AIDS.

Don't let AIDS get the best of us.

KNOW

... we can get AIDS by having sex and sharing needles to shoot drugs with someone who has the virus.

REMEMBER

... we cannot get AIDS by giving blood, shaking hands, hugging or just being near someone who has the virus.

TELL

... everyone we know — gay and straight — that the AIDS virus is not in the air. It is in blood and cum (semen).

PROTECT

... ourselves from AIDS. Find out more. Get the facts.

Black Males, Females And Babies Are Dying From AIDS.

AIDS IS KILLING BLACKS

- Every hour, 1 black man, woman or child in the United States dies from AIDS.
- Every minute, 1 black man, woman or child in the United States is being infected with the virus that causes AIDS.

Too many black males, females and babies have died from AIDS. We can no longer afford to believe that this deadly disease is not affecting us!

We can no longer afford to believe that only gay, white males get AIDS.

We have been wrong. Dead wrong!

DID YOU KNOW...

- You cannot tell by looking at someone if they're clean or carrying the virus.
- AIDS is caused by a virus living in blood and cum (semen), not all body fluids.
- You cannot get the virus by giving blood.

The Virus Can Enter The Bloodstream By:

- Having unprotected sex with a partner who has the virus.
- Sharing a needle to shoot drugs with someone who has the virus.
- Having unprotected sex with a partner who shares needles with someone who has the virus.

You Have A Choice:

- Not to have sex (abstinence, celibacy).
- Have protected sex — use a rubber with a gel that kills the virus (a condom with nonoxynol 9).
- Have a partner, forever, who does not have the virus (monogamy).
- Not to shoot drugs.
- Not to share the needles, syringe, cooker, cotton and water (drug paraphernalia).
- To clean your needles with bleach.
