Howard Law, Yale Team Up to Sponsor Brown at 50 Conference

By Charles-Jackson

Yale-Berkeley Law School's "50th Anniversary of the Brown v. Board of Education Decision" conference will be held on the weekend of April 18-19th. The conference will feature keynote speaker President Barack Obama, as well as other notable figures in the legal profession.

Howard-Law and Yale-Berkeley Schools have collaborated to organize this event, which aims to celebrate and reflect on the significant impact of the Brown v. Board of Education decision.

The conference will include a variety of panels and workshops, focusing on the historical context of the decision and its implications for contemporary issues in education law.

Howard Law School and Yale School of Law have a long history of collaboration on civil rights and education law issues, and this joint sponsorship reflects their shared commitment to advancing the principles of equality and justice.

Howard-Law and Yale-Berkeley have invited a diverse group of speakers from across the legal profession, including judges, scholars, and practitioners, to share their insights and perspectives on the enduring significance of the Brown v. Board of Education decision.

The event will provide an opportunity for attendees to engage in meaningful discussions and to learn from the experiences of those who have been at the forefront of civil rights and education law advocacy.

Howard Law and Yale School of Law are committed to fostering a community of scholars and practitioners who are dedicated to the protection of civil rights and the advancement of justice for all.

Howard Law School and Yale School of Law are among the leading institutions in the legal profession, and their joint sponsorship of this conference underscores their shared values and commitment to promoting a just and equitable society.

Experience and Leadership:
Daniel Blakemore

By Johnathan Davis
Contributing Writer

As a candidate for Undergraduate Student Government (USGA) representative for the College of Arts and Sciences, Blakemore wants to build bridges between various organizations within his school.

Under the platform "Experience and Visionary Leadership," Blakemore seeks to bring a new perspective on student organization: he wants to see unity among all students within the College of Arts and Sciences and the entire undergraduate student body. He also plans to reach out to all of the organizations housed in Arts and Sciences in order to gain a broader spectrum of unique perspectives.

Blakemore intends to be more visible on the campus by reaching out to him and fully understanding their needs and concerns. He aims to expand his role in the General Assembly.

"I will remain dedicated to the students in my college, and I will have [strictly] consistent communication with the student in those organizations," he said. "Different students have different perspectives and concerns. I will do something that has not been done before, which is to bring these groups together in the General Assembly."

Byron Stewart: Candidate for School of Communications Student Council President

By Johnathan Davis
Contributing Writer

As the Program Director for the School of Communications and a junior broadcast production major, Byron Stewart has been directly involved in the major decisions of his school.

From his perspective, the School of Communications has done a poor job in keeping ideas, direction, and leadership, Stewart said. "I am running for president of the Student Council," he said.

"It's time for the things to change and if I can make changes, I'll bring those changes to the school." Stewart's platform is "Visibility," and he plans on bringing changes to the student body in collaboration and change and if communications change in a way both for the benefit of students and the student body, said Stewart.

Stewart stresses visibility in his platforms.

"I feel that the changes that need to be made are unity among the students and neatness within the School of Communications student body and the student organization of the College of Arts and Sciences," Stewart said.

Education, Collectiveness:
Ololade 'Lola' Fawole

By Reih L. Toldalagi
Assistant Editor

Accountability, new programming, and collectiveness are three things that Ololade Fawole, current Undergraduate Student Association (USGA) financial advisor, hopes to improve in his new role.

"I started with USGA because the impression will help other students knowing the USGA and HUSA, Fawole said.

"I want to be involved in all aspects of student programming, but also bring more academic and professional programming to USGA."

"It is important to have educational and student programming to better involve the student body," Fawole said.

Fawole feels that his experience extends beyond USGA. "It is in serving as a financial advisor that I can bring my experience to bear, which is crucial to being HUSA president and vice president," Fawole said.

UGSA Rep Candidate:
Tunisia Christian

By Johnathan Davis
Contributing Writer

"I realize that you have to remain involved with the students because it is impossible to represent students if you do not know what their concerns are." -Tunisia Christian

"I have worked as a political director of Howard University Student Association (HUSA) a year ago, junior political science major Tunisia Christian decided that it was her time to step up and serve the community."

Christian's platforms is "Visibility," and "I am running for president of the Undergraduate Student Association (USGA) because I want to add visibility to the school." Christian said the students are being aware of their role in representing them and the USGA has been able to present those concerns to the General Assembly.

"I believe that people have to communicate with the students because it is impossible to represent students if you do not know what their concerns are," Christian explained.

Christian said that for the third time, Animashun will involve students and student government according to the student body.

"I want to be in the school of Communications and help the student guidelines," Christian said.

Accountable, Visible:
Candidate Keila Foster

By Faith White
Candidate Profile

"Accountability and visibility are Keila Foster's plan for the School of Communication. USGSA representatives have no visible roles or positions within the university, so if we have to represent the students, we should be accountable and visible," Foster said.

Foster plans to help USGSA accountable for their actions.

Office hours for each school's USGSA representative.

I want to make sure the people in the university know who I am. If they see me in the hallways, they will know who I am. It's not just me, but the entire student body," Foster said.

Proactiveness, Dedication:
Candidate Ravin Johnson

By Jonathan Davis
Candidate Profile

"Dedication and proactiveness are the things that made Ravin Johnson the candidate he is today. He has been a leader in his community since he was a young boy and he continues to be a leader today."

Johnson plans to focus on making sure that the university is a safe and welcoming place for all students. "I want to make sure that everyone feels welcome and supported on campus," Johnson said.

Restoring Order to USGA:
Candidate Jade Beckett

By Chad Knight
Candidate Profile

"I want to restore order to USGA. We need to make sure that the university is a safe and welcoming place for all students. We need to make sure that we are held accountable for our actions," Beckett said.

Beckett plans to focus on making sure that the university is a safe and welcoming place for all students. "I want to make sure that everyone feels welcome and supported on campus," Beckett said.

Experience is Key to UGSA: Cortney Nelson

By: Leandra Andrew
Contributing Writer

Cortney Nelson, a junior psychology major, is running for the position of president of the United Graduate Student Administration (UGSA) for the College of Arts and Sciences. Nelson believes that knowledge of the world is key to continue to fulfill the constitutional duties that come with being a UGSA representative.

In 2003, Nelson worked with the UGSA to persuade the Student Assembly to pass a new constitution. "I won't work with the UGSA to persuade the Student Assembly to pass a new constitution. I want students to be able to have a voice in the things they care about," Nelson said.

Nelson has been actively involved in campus activities since she was a freshman, participating in several clubs and organizations. She is currently a member of the School of C's UGSA Rep. Committee and has been involved in various community service projects.

In order to win this position, Nelson plans to use her previous experience in UGSA.

Vision, Cohesion for UGSA: Muhammad Salaam

By: Leandra Andrew
Contributing Writer

"I want to change the image of the UGSA. Right now, it's seen as a bunch of students who don't care about the students or the school," Salaam said.

Salaam believes that the UGSA can be a voice for the students, and he plans to use his position to bring change to the organization.

"I want to work with the Student Assembly to make sure that the UGSA is represented in the school's decisions," Salaam said.

School of 'C' UGSA Rep. Candidate: LeAnn Laury

By: Vanna Lovett

Howard's History and School of Divinity Intertwined

Roger A. Bilberry

Howard University is committed to providing a diverse and inclusive environment for its students, faculty, and staff. The university's history and its School of Divinity are intertwined and reflect the institution's commitment to social justice and spiritual growth.

The School of Divinity at Howard University was established in 1928 and offers undergraduate and graduate programs in religious studies and divinity. The school is located on the university's campus in Washington, D.C., and is one of the oldest and most respected religious schools in the country.

The school's mission is to provide education and training in the history, philosophy, and practice of the Christian faith, as well as other religious traditions. It is committed to preparing students for a variety of careers, including ministry, teaching, and social work.

The school's integration with the University of Mississippi reflects the institution's commitment to inclusivity and diversity. The University invites all students, regardless of their religious beliefs, to participate in its programs and activities.

Candidates Discuss Issues at School of ‘C’ Speak Out

By Natasha L. Williams

During the School of Communications speak out, candidates addressed issues such as obtaining better equipment, establishing better communication between students and faculty/staff members, and the need to make administrative offices more accountable.

Both parties were adamant about having staff, faculty and administrative members accountable.

The candidates were asked to discuss the issues regarding the admissions and the students in the view of the candidates. Pitts and Rodgers answered:

"We need to be transparent, open, and accountable. We need to make sure that our policies and procedures are clear and accessible to all students. Additionally, we need to make sure that our staff and faculty are held accountable for their actions."

Tyrone Reed, one presidential candidate, said that holding the administration accountable is crucial to the students having a voice and being able to make their voices heard in the School of Communication.

"Students should have the right to know what their administration is doing and what steps they are taking to improve. We need to prioritize the needs of the students and make sure that their voices are heard."

Parking on Howard’s Campus

A Struggle for Students

By Carmen Muhammad

Parking on Howard’s campus has been a longstanding issue for the students. With on-campus parking so limited, many students are forced to park far away from the school.

"The parking issue is a real concern for us," said one student. "We’re often forced to walk long distances to get to class, which is especially problematic during the winter months."

Hair Stylist-Hairdresser Abuse Students’ Time

By Lisa Simmons

Although students love their hair, they are often forced to spend a lot of time getting it done. Some of the students have complained that hairdressers are not respectful of their time and often leave them waiting longer than necessary.

"At some hair salons, the Stylists don’t seem to care about our time," said one student. "They don’t offer a comfortable environment and often keep us waiting for long periods of time."

Moment in HU History: Hip Hop Conference at HU

A Moment In Howard’s History

By Jonathan Nichols

Howard University recently hosted a Hip Hop Conference, which featured keynote speakers and panel discussions on the importance of Hip Hop in society.

"Our campus has a rich history of Hip Hop," said the university president. "This conference is just one way we’re continuing to honor and celebrate that legacy."

Pastor Butts Inspires Howard Students

By Jennifer Butts

Pastor Butts, the new pastor of Howard University’s Chapel, delivered a powerful message to the students during chapel services.

"Our students are the future leaders of this country," said Pastor Butts. "We must continue to support and empower them so that they can reach their full potential."

Students complain that

Over the course of the year, the students have complained about the lack of a clear job description for their hairdresser. Many of the students have expressed frustration at the lack of communication and transparency in their interactions with their stylists.

"The stylists don’t seem to understand the importance of communication," said one student. "They don’t listen to our concerns and often leave us feeling like our needs are not being heard."

Hair Stylists need to respect

"Students need to be respected," said one student. "The stylists need to listen to our concerns and work with us to find solutions that meet our needs."

Massive Polio Immunization Drive Begins in West Africa

By Kim Marcie Davis

The mass immunization drive against polio--the largest ever launched in Africa--began in Nigeria and other West African countries today. Scientists expect the campaign, which will take place over the next four months, to eradicate the disease from the region.

The drive, which involves the use of oral polio vaccines, was launched in Kenya last week, and in the next six months some 165 million children in 14 countries will be targeted.

Dr. John Okeke, a Nigerian epidemiologist, said: "We have been able to identify all the populations that are at risk of polio. This is a major breakthrough in our efforts to control the disease."

However, the campaign is not without its challenges. In Kenya, for example, there have been reports of violence and sabotage.

In Nigeria, where the polio vaccination program has been in place for more than a decade, the government has declared a state of emergency to prevent the disease from spreading. The country has already recorded 15 cases of polio this year.

The immunization campaign is expected to cost $150 million, and will be funded by the World Health Organization and the United Nations Children's Fund.

Reefs Could Be Dead by 2100

By Susan Eckerson

The world's coral reefs could be dead by 2100 if temperatures continue to rise, according to a new study.

The study, which was published in the journal Nature, found that coral reefs are particularly vulnerable to rising ocean temperatures and acidity.

Coral reefs are home to a diverse range of marine life, but they are also at risk from rising ocean temperatures and acidity, which can cause coral bleaching and death.

"Coral reefs are some of the most biodiverse ecosystems on the planet, but they are also highly vulnerable to climate change," said lead author Dr. Lisa Fanning.

The study found that coral reefs are particularly vulnerable to rising ocean temperatures and acidity, which can cause coral bleaching and death.

The researchers suggest that efforts to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and protect coral reefs are needed to prevent their demise.

Building of Israel's Barrier Persists Through International Court of Justice Hearing

By Susan Zacharias

Israel has completed a section of its barrier near the West Bank town of Hebron, despite a ruling by the International Court of Justice that it was illegal.

The court's ruling, issued last year, said that the barrier, which is intended to separate Jews and Palestinians, was illegal and that Israel should dismantle it.

Israel has appealed the decision, and the case is currently being heard by the International Court of Justice in The Hague.

The court is expected to rule on the matter later this year.

Hampton Snaps Howard's Three-Game Win Streak

By Edward Hill, Jr.
Special to The Hilltop

Jeff Grongio passed for 190 yards and had six completions in his six attempts, leading Howard's offense for the third straight game. The Lady Bison, who had lost six straight games, finally snapped Hampton's 3-0 MEAC record when they defeated Hampton 24-10.

Hampton's defense was more successful than the offense, allowing Hampton to gain only 100 yards in the first half with the majority coming on two long kickoff returns.

The Lady Bison will try to get back on track when they face Howard on Monday at 5 p.m. in the Convocation Center. It will be Hampton's first game in the Convocation Center since 1997.

Bison Softball Starts Season 0-2 Against Hornets

Spinners Now Worn on Shoes, Rims and Necks

By Rivka Huff

Converting Winter

Men have been using a certain type of shoe accessory that is popularly known as "spinners" for years, but lately, they have been using another type of accessory, more popularly known as "the spin," especially among the hip-hop generation. These types of accessories were first seen during the winter of 2003 when the NBA and the players began to wear them. The spin was developed by designers and clothing companies to create a unique look that would set them apart from the rest of the NBA players. As the trend continued, designers and clothing companies began to create their own versions of the spin, and the trend has continued to grow ever since.

Study Shows Half of Kazaa Files Contain Viruses

While computer users may believe that Kazaa files contain mainly music, a new study suggests that music makes up only a small portion of the Kazaa files. A team of researchers from Carnegie Mellon University conducted the study, which found that music was only the most popular category of Kazaa files, and that the files contained many viruses and other malicious software.

The researchers analyzed 4,778 Kazaa files downloaded from the network, and found that 47% of the files contained viruses. The study found that viruses were most common in Kazaa files that contained music, and that the viruses were often downloaded from infected Kazaa servers. The researchers found that the viruses were able to spread throughout the network and remain in certain directories.

What users say the problem with file-sharing is the wait.

With companies like Napster and Kazaa, downloading large files and transferring them up to three times in the process can make file sharing a long, tedious affair for the broadband user.

But Interekt's newest technology could make the wait worthwhile after all.

Interekt's newest technology, recently released in beta, is the latest in a long line of peer-to-peer file-sharing systems. The system is designed for financial and legal reasons to ensure that everyone pays an equal price for the service. In this system, the user who breaks up an already downed file and transfers pieces to other downloaders is the one who is paying the price. The new Interekt system is being marketed to broadband users as a quick and easy way to download large files.

According to some analysts, the new file-sharing system could be the solution to broadband users who are looking for a way to download large files faster than ever before.

Interekt's newest technology could be the answer to the broadband user's problem. Interekt's newest technology is designed for financial and legal reasons to ensure that everyone pays an equal price for the service. Four new gadgets on the market today could be the answer to the broadband user's problem. Interekt's newest technology is designed for financial and legal reasons to ensure that everyone pays an equal price for the service. This is a great solution for broadband users who are tired of waiting for large files to download. Interekt's newest technology is sure to revolutionize the way that broadband users download large files.

Many of the users complained that Interekt is difficult to understand, and not very compatible with the existing market. One user complained about the incessant download pauses and high speed. Despite the many software updates, most of the feedback was positive. One user even said, "I can't believe Interekt is getting better." Interekt's newest technology is sure to revolutionize the way that broadband users download large files.

Although Interekt's newest technology is a great solution for broadband users, it is important to keep in mind that there are a few things that could be improved. First, the user interface is not the easiest to use. It can be a bit confusing for new users. Second, the download speed is not as fast as some other systems. Third, the software is not compatible with all operating systems. However, these issues can be resolved with future updates and improvements.

Interekt's newest technology is sure to revolutionize the way that broadband users download large files. This is a great solution for broadband users who are tired of waiting for large files to download. Congressional Black Caucus Foundation Program is Helping Howard Graduates Purchase New Homes

By Brian Kwan

Contribution Writer

The Congressional Black Caucus Foundation, Inc. (CBCF) is proud to announce the latest program that has launched a scholarship for students majoring in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics) disciplines.

In collaboration with Howard University, CBCF has developed a new program designed to provide assistance to students majoring in high-demand STEM fields. This initiative is aimed at supporting the dreams of students who have shown a strong commitment to pursuing a career in STEM.

The program will provide a comprehensive suite of services, including financial assistance, academic support, and career development opportunities. Students who qualify for the program will receive direct funding, access to mentorship opportunities, and networking events.

This initiative is part of CBCF's ongoing efforts to address the national STEM workforce shortage. By investing in the education and development of the next generation of STEM professionals, CBCF is working to ensure that the United States remains a global leader in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics.

The program is open to students currently enrolled at Howard University who meet the eligibility criteria. For more information, please visit the CBCF website or contact the program team.

In addition to the program announced today, CBCF has launched several other initiatives aimed at supporting the education and careers of students of color. These include scholarships, fellowships, and professional development opportunities.

CBCF is committed to empowering and supporting students of color in STEM fields. Through programs like the one announced today, CBCF is working to create a more diverse and inclusive STEM workforce.

Kevin Brown Creates New Twist

BROWN BY 3M

Kevin Brown is currently working on his new twist on the jive and swing styles he's known for. He's recently released his latest album, "Brown's Blues," which has received critical acclaim for its innovative approach to traditional jazz.

The album features Brown's signature swing with a modern twist, incorporating elements of R&B and soul into the mix. "Brown's Blues" is a departure from his previous work, which was primarily focused on the traditional swing style.

Brown says he wanted to create something new that would appeal to both fans of his earlier music and those who might be new to his style.

"I wanted to take what I've been doing and bring it into the present day," Brown says. "I wanted to create something that would stand the test of time and still be relevant today.

Being the Trustee: What It is and What it Isn’t

A Voter’s Guide to Making the Best Choice for Student Trustee and Helpful Hints to the Candidates for the Position

By Charles F. Coleman, Jr.

Each year during election season, the vote for the student trustee position represents a unique opportunity for you. This opportunity for choice is often overlooked by many, but it is a critical one. The trustee position is not just about voting for a friend or someone you know; it is about making a decision that will impact the future of Howard University and its students.

Understanding the Position

The student trustee position is different from any other position held by a student at Howard University. It is a position that requires a unique set of skills and attributes. The role of the trustee is multifaceted, and it involves representing the student body on important University matters, engaging in community outreach, and contributing to the overall mission of Howard University.

Understanding the Role

The current trustee position is crucial in that it provides an opportunity for students to engage with the University administration and participate in the decision-making process. By voting for a student trustee, you are essentially voting for a leader who will advocate for your interests and concerns.

Choosing Wisely

In an attempt to illustrate how the trustee position can benefit you, let’s consider some key points:

1. Experience: A student trustee gain valuable experience in leadership, governance, and community service.
2. Influence: As a student trustee, you have the opportunity to influence decisions that affect the student body and the University as a whole.
3. Advocacy: You can advocate for the needs and interests of your peers and work to ensure that their voices are heard in the decision-making process.

Conclusion

Choosing a student trustee is an important decision. By making an informed choice, you are contributing to the future of Howard University and its students. It is not just about voting for someone you know; it is about voting for someone who will represent you and your interests in a meaningful way.

Chivalry Isn’t For Everybody

Shaka Shaw

Recently, there has been a lot of talk on the Perspectives page about who needs to respect who on this campus in terms of gender. Most White men entitled “Ladies, Kneel Yondermen” was a rather self-exclusivizing, melodramatic (did he really say “love my soul, girl”?) ode to Black females at Howard, encouraging them to stand strong. Subsequently, Haughton wrote an article in response to White’s portrayal of the race to “empower” themselves and their feminized brothers. The real issue: the hostile white male is not just popular, persistent, but more subtly getting to the root of the problem.

Reserved females are quick to point the finger at race as Howard’s not showing deference to them. They say that chivalry is dead, but whatever happened to the basic standards of etiquette that are required for us to be considered a lady?

People know the words “lady” and “gentleman” around neither Black, but instead are geniuses to becoming aware of basic rules of etiquette which, as it so happens, involves deference to them in the role they’re casting them in. Howard has declined with the help of proper kowtowment and, I submit, that the media has been a gentleman. Phillips and Socke believe to a certain level that these two journals have let down their expected generation of Black journalists by killing the spirit of journalism, accuracy.

They believe that journalism has been killed by the lack of women in Howard’s journalism is to inform people of the issues that help them make the best deci decisions. A reformed journalist is like a loaded gun placed carefully in the hand of a virtuous child. No good can ever come from this.

Many undermine things that are being done throughout the world with unjust government agencies that in the word over the public’s eyes, in the act of serving the journalist to expose these secrets in the media.

The Role of a Journalist

Ashley Kelly

There are many reasons why people disregard the world of journalism. Black students often read about the bright hopes of journalism, but in light of how much journalism is truly about, it becomes obvious that many of us have neglected to reach the top, they have forgotten the basics. We have, however, not lost hope, we have the opportunity to make our own journals simple like the aspect of writing, but this is not what journalism is truly about. As many of us know journalism is about being a good person and getting the truth out there. Black people have bad experiences with the media, but we can make a difference. I submit, that the media has been a gentleman. Phillips and Socke believe to a certain level that these two journals have let down their expected generation of Black journalists by killing the spirit of journalism, accuracy. The article that White wrote is about the lack of women in Howard’s journalism is to inform people of the issues that help them make the best deci
