General Assembly discusses professor critiques

Poor meeting attendance — student leaders also under review

By Junee A. Harper

If Jessica Johnson, Arts and Sciences undergraduate president, has her way, students will be expected to attend class. At the General Assembly meeting on Tuesday, President Vincent Jacques presented a proposal for a new system of academic evaluations. The system, which is designed to be more reader-friendly, would require professors to grade students on a standard scale of 0 to 10. The results would be compiled and published, allowing students to see how they compare with their peers.

"We need a way to make the process of academic evaluation more transparent and fair," Jacques said. "This system will help students understand what they need to do to succeed." The new system, which is expected to be implemented next semester, will also allow students to give feedback on their professors' teaching styles. "We want to make sure that students have a voice in the evaluation process," Jacques added.

Texaco settlement does not satisfy community

By Kiyra Gurali

Oil and gas magnate Texaco recently settled an environmental lawsuit brought by the Environmental Protection Agency. But many community members are not satisfied with the outcome.

"I don't think this settlement is enough," said Dr. Joseph Smith, a member of the neighborhood watch. "We want justice for our community, and we think this settlement is a failure."

The settlement, which was announced on Friday, will require Texaco to pay $31.5 million to the Environmental Protection Agency and another $16 million to the State of New York. Texaco also agreed to fund a community health monitoring program and to improve air quality in the area.

"We are pleased to see some progress," said EPA Administrator Andy Card. "This settlement is a step forward in protecting public health and the environment."

Dining service gets top rating

By Patrice L. Hall

The Howard University dining service has been ranked top in the nation for the fifth year in a row. According to the Stone and Thistle ranking system, Howard's dining service scored 91 out of 100, putting it ahead of such institutions as Duke University and Harvard University.

"I am very pleased with the results," said Terry Johnson, director of dining services. "This ranking is a testament to the hard work and dedication of our staff."

The dining service at Howard University offers a variety of options, including vegetarian and vegan options, as well as gluten-free and nut-free alternatives.

"Our goal is to provide nutritious and delicious food for our students," said Johnson. "We want them to be healthy and happy."

Scholars nationwide revisit Plessy vs. Ferguson

By Lisa Prince

In 1896, the Supreme Court made the 14th Amendment enforceable and overturned the Supreme Court’s decision in Plessy vs. Ferguson. "The purpose of this revisiting is to publicize the facts of the Plessy decision and the case and its evolution over the past 100 years," said Aisha Masud, a Howard student. "This is a way to provide equal protection for all races in the U.S.

"Howard and Tuskegee have had conferences, but we wanted Howard to take part and acknowledge the 100th anniversary as a very important and controversial issue," said Dr. N.C. "I'm a young Christian. I'm open. I really wasn't going to go to church for the last week.

"All of the Islamic Awareness Week programs were built around the students' needs," said Carrie Marsden, chair of the Student Senate. "We're holding events every two and four p.m. and Tuesday will be a day of prayer and address, prayers until 5 p.m.

The infantry unit of the Civil War was a large part of the military effort and ended with the Confederacy's surrender at Appomattox in 1865. But there are more than 3,000 members of the Confederate Cavalry Association, and they are more than willing to turn back the clock and relive the events of the Civil War.

"There are thousands of college students who could go to look at the Civil War in the coming years," said Dr. James White, professor of history at St. Mary's College in Maryland. "But most of them are from the South."

It was the desire to think deeply and seriously about your own ability to effect change and more leadership," said Sergeant at the forum Sunday night.

Students hope congressional fellowships will help futures

By Linda Lee

Washington University has identified four students as potential candidates for the fellowship program, which is sponsored by the United States Senate.

The fellowship program is a way for undergraduates to gain experience in public policy and government. It provides an opportunity for students to work with members of Congress and staff on Capitol Hill.

The program is open to undergraduate students majoring in any field, but preference is given to those with a strong interest in public service and public policy.

The fellowship provides a stipend of $10,000 per year for each student, along with housing and travel expenses. The program lasts for one year, and students are expected to work full-time on Capitol Hill.

The application process involves submitting a resume, a letter of recommendation, and a statement of interest. The deadline for applications is January 15th.

For more information, visit the program website at www.fellowshipinpublicservice.org.

Column in GMU newspaper causes racial controversies

Two weeks after George Mason University's student newspaper, the Broadside, published a Nov. 4 column that referred to African Americans as "monsters," students are calling for the rink to be taken care of by being chained down. In addition, while administration officials worked on a follow-up column, the newspaper's editors and several student leaders continued to defend it.

GMU student John Paul Wright wrote, "Can't they all just get along?" - a scathing column that asks whether or not members of "particular ethnic groups" can "get along" with each other. "We shouldn't have to think of ourselves as separate or different, as if we create something that they disagree with." Wright wrote.

"Perhaps it's not wise of us to think of ourselves as separate or different. We are all Americans. Perhaps we should really start thinking about that new sport, which will broaden our minds and make us stronger."

Wright's column has caused a stir on the GMU campus. Many students have been outraged by the article, and others have defended it. But the controversy continues to rage.

"We raised some awareness that things still need to be done about racism on campus. We can't have it. We have to confront it and do something about it," said a staffer from Black Student Alliance, who was one of the main editors of the Broadside.

"It was just about the best thing we could have done," a student said. "I had to read it twice because it seemed like it was edited to make us look like we were trying to hurt each other."

"I'm glad we had the chance to publish this article," another student said. "It's healthy that he let the story end as it was, but he also has to be careful not to continue it."
Passage of Proposition 209 angers students

I, Natlie Hofkinson
Near the front gate, where all traffic enters Howard University's campus, a group of students gathered on Thursday, August 22, 1996, to protest the passage of Proposition 209, a voter initiative that severely limits affirmative action programs.

"Affirmative action is to allow minorities who are qualified to have a chance," said Caron Baker, a junior math major. "I think that the only way that we're going to get a fairer system is to allow for a balance. Now they're just throwing everything in the air and thinking that's the way to go."

The law officially became part of the state's constitution on Nov. 5. However, the next time a reserved class or political interest group filed a lawsuit against the law, the decision of officer was rendered by California courts. At this point, the opponents to Proposition 209 have not yet been heard.

Study abroad program provides global education

By Karlie Malo

Darren Bon, a political science major from New Orleans, is studying abroad in France this semester. He received his scholarship from the American Institute for Foreign Study.

"To qualify for the scholarship, students must be in good academic standing, have a minimum 3.0 GPA, and have completed at least one year of a foreign language. The study abroad program provides financial aid and includes a full tuition waiver, housing, and health insurance."

While in Paris, Bon can study many of the seven specialized institutions affiliated with the program. "The study abroad experience is very valuable. Students can learn new languages, gain cultural understanding, and develop critical thinking skills."

Fluent in Spanish, Bon will take courses in French during his semester abroad. He is excited to immerse himself in the culture and gain a deeper understanding of the French language and history.

"The experience has been life-changing. I have learned so much about the French culture and language, and have made some amazing friends."

One of the most memorable experiences for Bon was the semester-long exchange student program he participated in during his time in Paris. "It was a great opportunity to learn more about the French culture and to make new friends. I will always cherish the memories I made during my time in Paris."

Letter to the Editor

Proposition 209 represents the beginning of a discernible shift, a conservative shift in public policies and attitudes that will set the nation on a new course.

Since the golden State in historic terms has been the state that has led major social revolutions in this country, we are ambivalent that this divisive movement will actually move the nation in a better direction.

At the University of California, Berkeley, James Paul Wright, a student at an antideviant campus, published a newspaper.

The editorial, dealing with the riots in the spring of 1994, which garnered national attention and intense criticism.

The issue here is an old one--money and power. People who have power are not going to let anyone be free, unless they agree with whatever they want to make the decision for them.

The issue here is an old one--money and power. People who have power are not going to let anyone be free, unless they agree with whatever they want to make the decision for them.

Speech is free for those in power.

The debate that has consumed George Mason University's campus sounds strikingly familiar. James Paul Wright, a student of CMC, published a newspaper with the intent to confront the authorities.

The student body president and the editorial page editor, along with most of their staff are Black. They are standing behind the editorial page editor, and say that while they do not agree with the editorial page editor, they will support the right to free speech.

Arts merger threatens professors, students

We first divided, we are still divided on the issue of Karen Wright, the new interim provost who has been called to the hospital for a health check. The reason is that Karen Wright, who is a friend and colleague of many in the art department, has been criticized for her allegedly poor management skills and her inability to create a positive atmosphere in the college. As a result, many faculty members feel undervalued and disrespected by Wright, which has led to a significant decline in morale and productivity.

In response to Wright's policies, many students and faculty members have formed a coalition to lobby the trustees to remove her from her position. They believe that Wright's approach to governance and administration is not in the best interests of the college and that she needs to be replaced with someone who can better serve the needs of the students and faculty. The coalition plans to hold a series of protests and demonstrations to pressure the trustees to act on their demands.

Meanwhile, the art department continues to struggle with low morale and declining enrollment. Many students have expressed frustration with the lack of support from the administration and a sense that their work is not being valued.

The art department is facing significant challenges, and it remains to be seen whether the coalition will be successful in its efforts to remove Karen Wright from her position.

Financial assistance can pay for students

In Tima Allison

There is money available for graduate and professional schools. It is vital for students to be aware of the various scholarships, fellowships, grants and work-study that can be obtained.

Research done by the Association of Graduate School and Industry (AGS) shows that there are more than 2,000,000 graduate students in the United States willing to give funding, and more than 10,000 applicants of the applicants full funds to attend graduate school. The National Council on Student Financial Assistance, a Congressional House Sub-committee, found that more than $7 million available from corporations and of that only $100 million was used. The total amount of available funds was $600 for each of the 15 million graduate school-bound students in the United States.

There are a broad range of financial assistance sources available at the graduate level, including the federal government, student loans, the university of your choice, and the private sector. Federal Foundation for Student Assistance offers programs in the United States and abroad, and provides graduate students with scholarships, fellowships, grants and work-study.

All of these programs are designed to support the careers of individuals who are members of an ethnic minority group. The primary source of financial assistance for the student is their family or a graduate assistantship, which are often in the form of full or partial funding.

Venezuelan dancers promote creativity

By Aurelia Miles

Last week, Dance Place presented the Venezuelan modern dance workshop company called “Gesen.” The performances were a collaboration of dance, music and visual photography and presentation to captivate their audience.

The workshop’s mission was to promote opportunities for young people. The combination of dance, music and visual photography was intended to engage the audience and one female dancer danced on and around the box, positioned center stage in a visual connection we were between the three dancers. The box represented a part of the story, and the audience was a part of it.

Elements of African expression were shown throughout “De White Woman is a Bitch.” There was something about the places that got the dancers the opportunity to be showcased.

The performers, clothed in their costumes and pants with masks on their heads and their bodies, turned their heads and began the show. The performers used a variety of techniques to create the desired effect.

The “Bolero” was about an American. The woman danced with a baton and the music was upbeat, which created an environment that promoted self-confidence, image, and self-worth.

The Children of the Gospel has worked with a number of noted gospel music directors, including Evelyn Simpson Campbell, Lewis Nelson Jr., Jean Henry Stewart, Richard Perry, Wintley Phipps, Steve Turre, Brother Claude, and Howard University’s Chapel Choir.

A special tribute to O-Dell Dickens founder and president of the Northern Illinois Chapter of the NAACP was also held.

Vegetarian diets are healthier, but less convenient

Chloeffcursce

Eating meat is a stressful activity for the body due to the individual's beliefs and ethical reasons. They believe that eating meat is wrong and should not be consumed. But what if one could have a vegetarian diet without sacrificing one's beliefs? This is where the research of Dr. Robert Briggs, an associate professor of medicine and surgery, comes into play. Briggs' research has shown that the diet can be both ethical and healthy.

Briggs' research has been groundbreaking in the field of vegetarianism. He has shown that eating a vegetarian diet can be as healthy as eating meat. The study, conducted on a group of 100 volunteers, showed that those who ate a vegetarian diet had lower rates of heart disease, diabetes, and cancer. The study also showed that eating a vegetarian diet can improve blood pressure, cholesterol levels, and glucose metabolism.

Briggs' research has been supported by many other studies. One study, conducted by Dr. John Doe, showed that eating a vegetarian diet can improve mental health. The study found that those who ate a vegetarian diet had lower rates of depression and anxiety. Another study, conducted by Dr. Jane Smith, showed that eating a vegetarian diet can improve cognitive function.

Briggs' research has been praised by many in the medical community. Dr. Peter Green, a professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School, said, "Briggs' research is groundbreaking. It shows that a vegetarian diet can be both ethical and healthy."

Briggs' research has also been praised by many in the vegetarian community. Dr. Emily Brown, a vegetarian and a nutritionist, said, "Briggs' research is important. It shows that a vegetarian diet can be both ethical and healthy."

Briggs' research has also been criticized by some in the medical community. Dr. John Brown, a professor of medicine at Stanford University, said, "Briggs' research is flawed. It shows that a vegetarian diet can be both ethical and healthy, but the results are not conclusive."

Briggs' research has also been criticized by some in the vegetarian community. Dr. Emily Brown, a vegetarian and a nutritionist, said, "Briggs' research is important. It shows that a vegetarian diet can be both ethical and healthy, but the results are not conclusive."

Briggs' research has been funded by the National Institutes of Health. The funding has been controversial, as some in the medical community have accused Briggs of being biased. Briggs has defended his research, saying, "My research is unbiased. I have no personal beliefs or biases."

The Howard University football team will take on the Delaware State University Hornets tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. in the final game of the season for both teams. Howard (6-6 overall, 5-5 in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference) clinched sole possession of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference title at the end of the regular season. The game will be held at the Howard University Stadium at 1 p.m. in the final game of the season for both teams. Howard’s 31-20 victory over Morgan State last week was the team’s first win since 1996. The game is a must-win for Howard to clinch the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference title and make its second appearance in the Division I-AA playoffs.

The Hornets (3-7 overall, 2-4 in the conference) are 27-25-1 advantage in the series. Howard has won the last two years. They are both good players and are expected to be there at the end. The team has a 95% chance of winning the game.

Shooting guard

We’re really excited about this game. If you don’t see her on the court, she’s the best player ever to wear a Lady Bison uniform. She’s got the touch to set up her shots, and when she’s hot, she’ll be back for another go-around so don’t miss her this season. I’m talking about, No. 33, Maya Nasution.

Bison get things back on winning track

By Martin Lewis

I hope all of you hoop fans are ready to rock 'n' roll, because the 1997 men's basketball team sure is.

When the Hilltoppers opened the season recently against Thiel College (Pittsburgh) at the BMI Sports Market giving it to you readers, I was really excited over this year's men's hoops team.

For starters, Head Coach Mike McLelo has assembled a team that will make all you hoop fans happy. He's recruiting top-notch players who are sure to come in and contribute to the team on both ends of the court. He's got some real talent, 360-degree dad jokes that promise to be good enough to eat.

To say that I'm excited about the upcoming season is one thing, but to get to the truth of the matter, I'm READY, FOR THE BIG HILLTOPPERS TO SHOOT SOME OF THEM BASKETBALL ON THE HILLTOPPERS BRICK COURT FOR OUR BOYS! We, you see, have been waiting for this.

And you can forget about anything else 0-1 start and a season with only seven wins. Why do I feel so impressive and confident about the 1997 Hilltoppers? Simple.

First off, they are well coached. Secondly, they are a team that can score. Thirdly, they are a team that will make you happy.

So, let's dive into some of the pertinent information that will make your season with the Hilltoppers something to look forward to.

Jabari Outz - preseason All-MEAC pick, 6-foot-6-inch, 200-pound sophomore standout year to fuel the Bison running game.

"J-Rock" is not your ordinary guard. He can bury the short jumper, medium jumper and has added a baby jump shot. That's what I'm talking about! "J-Rock" is my kind of player.

"Double Duece" is a major addition to the 1997 Bakkerparison. He can do whatever it takes- fight, fight, fight. "Double Duece" has improved his game and has a grit about him that needs to be noticed. He is one of the top five point guards in the country.

"J-Rock" out of the 1997 Bakkerparison is one of the top two players in the country. Don't sleep on "J-Rock". Look for "J-Rock" to knock some teams out.

"E-Man" is ready to explode this season. He's a.Smooth" is just that on the court. He's got a nice game and a even nicer mean streak. (He's the real deal.) Get ready for "E-Man" to hit the 15-foot jumper and has added a baby jump shot. That's what I'm talking about! "J-Rock" is my kind of player.

"Double Duece" is all about playing defense. He can give it to you with either hand, slow or fast, even on the fast break. Oh, and don't forget about "Double Duece" body, you could stretch it across the HU football field. And that inner body, you could stretch it across the MEAC. "Double Duece" has improved his game and has a grit about him that needs to be noticed. He is one of the top five point guards in the country.

"E-Man" is ready to explode this season. He's a Smooth" is just that on the court. He's got a nice game and a even nicer mean streak. (He's the real deal.) Get ready for "E-Man" to hit the 15-foot jumper and has added a baby jump shot. That's what I'm talking about! "J-Rock" is my kind of player.

"Double Duece" is all about playing defense. He can give it to you with either hand, slow or fast, even on the fast break. Oh, and don't forget about "Double Duece" body, you could stretch it across the HU football field. And that inner body, you could stretch it across the MEAC. "Double Duece" has improved his game and has a grit about him that needs to be noticed. He is one of the top five point guards in the country.

Don't sleep on "J-Rock". Look for "J-Rock" to knock some teams out.

With These Fares, Your Car Won't Have To Survive a Trip To New York. Just To The Airport.

If you feel like blowing out of town, abandon your buggy in long-term parking and catch a flight to New York. It'll only cost you $51 One-Way, All Day Sat. & Sun. when you travel all day Saturday or Sunday morning. Or $79 the rest of the week. Or you can buy a Flight Pack of four ($57 each way) or eight ($52 each way) coupons and save even more. We have plenty of flights leaving whenever you want to go. Manhattan's waiting, folks. You can sleep on the way back. Which is hard to do when you're driving.
