Howard takes up Ebonics debate

By Velvynsa Saunders

Accounting and math majors use calculators while studying. But Black students feel they are not smart enough to study Ebonics. The Howard University Student Government (HUG) plans to teach Black students Ebonics in the classroom.

Some people familiar with the language believe that Ebonics is an educational tool and who argue that it is a separate language. According to linguists, Ebonics is a more comprehensive approach that incorporates Black English in an educational tool and who argue that Ebonics is a separate language.

“Ebonics is a more comprehensive approach,” saidXM Jones, a member of the School of Arts in Sciences. “The method they use is one of many that incorporate Black English, and who argue that it is a separate language.”

Bill Cosby's somber death on L.A. freeway

By Melissa Spindel

Shock struck all color, age and gender lines as America's favorite father, William Cosby, lost his only son.

Frisco, 27, was shot once in the head while driving in Los Angeles, Calif., shortly after midnight on Sunday. A woman who was in the car with Frisco told police that she saw his head fall onto the floor of the car.

The woman said she did not know Frisco well, but had seen him a few times. She said she was in the car with Frisco when he was shot.

On the morning of the 17th, the body of a man, identified as William Cosby, was found in his car.

The University of the District of Columbia will undergo serious budget cuts and program restructuring to save the University of the District of Columbia.

Howard practices the 'exercise of praising God'

By Hilltop Staff Writer

Hilltop Staff Writer

At a recent crisis on Howard's campus in which students were facing serious problems, clergywoman Rev. Jerimiah Wright participated in a student forum focused on a sense of community and the importance of faith.

"We as students must maintain our faith, but not our faith in God," said Wright. "If we do, we can't take it away, that one may endure."

Over the holidays, doors were left open and we are in the process of hiring a new director for the campus police. "In addition to those who are judgmental of others, there are those who attend church to non-spiritual reasons," Wright said.

The audience marred with laughter and agreement with Wright explained that many people attend church to see who "they can take out in a fashion to make out—but then get fooled out." These same people "are church, hill, not into Christ.

In addition to those who are judgmental of others, there are those who attend church to non-spiritual reasons," Wright said.

"[Wright] must be careful of how you demonstrate people are created by God," Wright said. "Wright made reference to those who refer to Whites as "the devil".

"You have been caught in the sin of the human heart. Wright explained. In addition to those who are judgmental of others, there are those who attend church to non-spiritual reasons," Wright said.

For students attending the reading on Saturday, it was an opportunity to learn more about the life of the poet. "For students attending the reading on Saturday, it was an opportunity to learn more about the life of the poet."

The Rev. Jerimiah Wright speaks at a packed chapel on Sunday the Blackburn Ballroom. He delivers a message of praising God joyfully, despite any problems or situations.

Howard students hit the slopes on USGA ski trip

Even sub-zero temperatures could not keep students from the slopes during Howard University's first ski trip sponsored by the Undergraduate Student Assembly. Thirty-seven students went to Shawnee, Pa., for three days and two nights of skiing action this winter.

The seniors were in the Killington line, where they were able to rent in the indoor pool, relax in the jacuzzi and play games in the arcade room that overlooked the mountains. The Killington seniors also attended a gala, where they parted with other skiers.

Nora Salim said she hopes that this trip will be a day trip for the next break. "This trip included travel, accommodation and the ski resort," Salim said. "TI'm very interested in hearing what others have to say about this trip."

Will second term be old tricks for new democracy?

On Monday Bill Clinton celebrated a victory that will hold him another four years in office. Black votes were a key part of Clinton's first victory and a large part of his second victory, despite Clinton's constant slighting of the African-American community.

He began his first campaign with the Senate Judiciary debate, in which he used the African-American upper to demonstrate his readiness to talk about the issue in a Black community. During his term, he stood behind the halls of congress, signed a Black Bill, and therefore negatively affected African-Americans.

Throughout his first four years in office Clinton did absolutely nothing to skillfully, and the Black community. Knowing that most Black people found the Republican Party candidate unpalatable, Clinton knew that he had to be Black in the Bay. He took no risks and was especially vocal in his African-American community.

While there are no excuses for Clinton's behavior, there are reasons. The primary one is that Clinton was facing a rising tide of conservatism. In the face of a conservative, dominant Congress and a conservative-dominated Senate, Clinton's agenda was in trouble and the contradictory state of conservative drift in the country's mind-set; Clinton elected to follow the trend.

Howard computer labs are plagued with viruses

Howard University is home to two such students, as the school struggles to keep abreast of the computer age. The problem is not unique to Howard, but the university has yet to address it.

Edward Lennon

Egyptian computer labs are plagued with viruses

Egyptian students are facing a major problem with their computer labs. The labs are constantly flooded with viruses, causing a great deal of frustration and inconvenience for students.

For example, a virus that is commonly found in the labs is the "Worm" virus, which can cause the computer to freeze and crash. Students have reported that it is not uncommon to lose hours of work due to this virus.

Moreover, the virus can spread quickly to other computers in the lab, making it difficult to isolate and remove. As a result, students often have to spend a great deal of time and effort trying to clean up the virus.

It is crucial for the university to take steps to address this problem and ensure a secure and reliable computing environment for students.

The writer is a computer science major.

Growing up with Ebonics

By Aida Coates

I grew up in the Oakland, Calif., public school system. In elementary school, we were taught to hang our heads as we spoke Ebonics, because it was considered a "slang" or a "dialect." But in high school, I realized that the language I was using was not just a slang but was part of our cultural heritage.

I am a member of the Oakland Black English (OBE) movement, and I have been involved in its efforts to promote Ebonics as a legitimate language. I have attended workshops and conferences where we discuss the history and significance of Ebonics, and I have been involved in organizing events to raise awareness about the importance of Ebonics.

Ebonics is not just a language; it is a cultural identity. It is a way of communicating with others who share the same experiences and background as you. It is a way of expressing yourself, and it is a way of maintaining your cultural heritage.

In my opinion, Ebonics is a legitimate language, and it should be recognized as such. The language is not just a dialect but is a complete language with its own grammar, syntax, and vocabulary.

I believe that Ebonics should be taught in schools, and it should be recognized as a legitimate language. It is a part of our cultural heritage, and it is important to preserve it for future generations.

In conclusion, I believe that Ebonics is a legitimate language, and it should be recognized as such. It is a part of our cultural heritage, and it is important to preserve it for future generations.
Two civil rights activists share experiences at Smithsonian

By Alene Ballard

Hilltop Staff Writer

Threading the birthdays of Martin Luther King, Jr., and Coretta Scott King is the Sesquicentennial Exhibit on civil rights activist couple John and Coretta Scott King at the Smithsonian Institute, which opened on Jan. 17. The exhibit will be open through April 7.

Coretta Scott King, a militant activist for civil rights movement, was married to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. in 1953. She became involved in the struggle for equality in her husband’s wake and dedicated her time to fighting for the rights of all others involved in the movement.

She said that she became involved because of her own upbringing and family structure and was inspired to do so by her husband.

She also related an event that she called ’Star Wars’ which struck back in movie release.

She said that she became involved because of her own upbringing and family structure and was inspired to do so by her husband.

She also related an event that she called ’Star Wars’ which struck back in movie release.

As a moment of inspiration, she was taken back to the time when she was growing up and how she realized that the movie was a reflection of real-life events.

Her husband, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., was known for his efforts in the civil rights movement, and his work was heavily influenced by the themes of the movie. She noted how the movie depicted the struggle for freedom and equality, much like the work of her husband.

The exhibit features artifacts and documents from the couple’s lives, including letters, photographs, and personal items. It also includes a large collection of photographs and videos of the couple and their work.

The exhibit is part of the National Museum of African American History and Culture, which was opened in 2016 to commemorate the nation’s contributions to the African-American culture and the impact of African American history.

The exhibit is open to the public and is free of charge. For location and other information call (202) 357-4500.

To All Students of the Howard University Community:

This year the Undergraduate Student Association (UGSA) will attempt to increase its interaction with the student body. Extra efforts will be made by implementing a grievance and appeal process to help students make their collegiate experience more rewarding. This process will provide an outlined procedure to ensure that students have a vehicle to address issues and irregularities perceived to have an adverse impact on the academic experience.

We will assist students in addressing their opinions and concerns about policies or university regulations that may have been violated and prevent students from having the greatest college experience.

I encourage you to review materials concerning the grievance process, to ensure that you take the correct action in solving your grievance. If you have any questions contact me at the UGSA office in the Blackburn Center.

Our theme is "The Spiritual and Ethical Dimensions of Leadership." For the event to be successful, we are encouraging the active participation of all academic units, faith communities, student organizations, support units and staff organizations.

- Use this week in whatever manner you choose to reflect upon the various challenges we confront in our personal, spiritual and intellectual lives.
- Plan a special program. Each office, department, school or college should celebrate its unique relationship to the Howard University Community.
- Participation may take the form of lectures, scripture studies, forums, worship gatherings, performances, silent meditations, readings, sharing and music.
- Provisions have been made to allocate 15 to 45 minutes during this week (except evenings after 5:00 p.m., Mondays through Fridays) in Andrew Ranking Memorial Chapel to any office/group that requests its use.

- Notify the Office of the Dean of the Chapel of your program to be included in the program brochure.
- Should you need any assistance with the planning, promotion and publicizing of your program, please call Mrs. Barbara (W1) 8:67200.
